Council Votes To Give General College Keys

General college keys will be presented to students, who have contributed considerable service to the college, as voted by Student Council on January 9.

In previous years keys were given to every student who served on a student government council.

Details of the new council policy are being drawn up by a sub-committee of the council.

SGA Election Procedure to Begin January 23

This year Nominating Council is working to stimulate more interest in the Student Government Association election of officers to be held in the beginning of the new semester.

Emphasis will be placed on knowledge of the qualifications of the candidates and procedure for petitioning and voting. The council will distribute mimeographed instructions concerning petitioning.

The election schedule will begin with the posting of the slate of officers on January 23. Nominations by petition will be taken at the Student Government meeting on February 5. The candidates will be presented and then deliver their campaign speeches at the February 12 meeting. Concluding the schedule will be the elections on February 19.

During this time elections for class officers and representatives also will take place. Students will nominate candidates for these positions on February 19 and vote on February 26.

2 Staff Members To Attend District Meetings

Miss Frances H. Lewis, director of public relations, and Mrs. S. Miller Mack, executive secretary of the alumnae, will attend the combined District II conferences of the American College Public Relations Association and the American Alumnae Council.

The conference will be held at Haddon Hall in Atlantic City on January 22 through 25.

Mrs. Mack is co-chairman of hospitality together with Mr. Edmond DeLong of Princeton University. They are to greet the new members.

SGA To Hold Meeting Tuesday Night, January 22

Present SGA officers will preside over their last Student Government Association business meeting Tuesday night, January 22, in Murphy Chapel.

Items on the agenda include all the legislation which the present officers and their councils wish to present and/or to pass before they leave office.

Some of the items among those to be discussed are the revisions of the Student Government Constitution and the revised point system.

Dormitory Council will present its new revisions of the Student Handbook and Honor Council will explain the procedure for taking final examinations. New traffic rules and regulations for registering cars for next semester will be brought before the students.

Inta Eglavs, Cindy Howard, and Nancy Maresca rehearse a dance which they will perform tonight at the Modern Dance recital.

Expansion Fund Contributions Reach Nearly $27,000 In First Week of Local Drive

Nearly $27,000 was submitted by several of the 150 solicitors of the community fund-raising campaign for the expansion program at the first report meeting in Taylor Chapel January 10. The second will be held tonight.

Mr. Norman Reeves, chairman for Abington township, presided at the program and announced that the total sum of the contributions represented 17% of this month's final goal, $150,000.

Diane Barry discussed the social, intellectual, and spiritual growth of the Beaver girl during her four

Students To Present Modern Dance Recital In Murphy Gym

"Spotlight on Dance" is the theme for the modern dance recital to be held tonight at 8 p.m. in Murphy gym. Members of the Modern Dance Club and some of the modern dances classes will participate. Proceeds from this recital will help to finance Barbara Heylmun's trip to England in August as a member of the All-American lacrosse team. Admission will be 25 cents.

The varied program of dances includes "I've Got Plenty of Nothing" by Cynthia Howard, Nancy Maresca, and Inta Eglavs; "Summertime" by Cynthia Howard and Nancy Maresca; and a tap dance by Shirley Radcliff.

The Club plans also a Gershwin blues number with Donna Katz as dance soloist. Sharon Ruth will do a hula dance.

From New Zealand via Rosemary Deniken will come a dance performed by a group of girls. The modern dance classes also will dance to the Irish lilt, the samba, the tango, and American jazz.

Students Must Submit Schedule For Exam Change

Students now must submit their examination schedule when making a request for an exam change to help the registrar's office in the paper work.

Under the old method, the secretaries had to look up a student's schedule themselves.

Exams must be taken during the exam week, but in the case of illness, exceptions will be made.

Instructors will sign a sheet giving permission for the change rather than coming to the office as before.

A five dollar fee still will be charged for the privilege of changing an exam time.

"Y" To Sponsor Square Dance Tomorrow

"Y'all" are invited to come to the Y.W.C.A. square dance mixer in Jenk gym tomorrow, January 18, from 8:30 to 12:30 p.m., and pick your partner from a medley of Lehigh, Lafayette, Princeton, and University of Pennsylvania men.

Employing a Pennsylvania Dutch theme, the dance will be called by Ken Gray. Refreshments will be served.

The admission price is 50 cents per person and 75 cents per couple. Tickets will be sold at noon in the lobby on January 16, 17, and 18.

Faith Downs, chairman of the dance, suggests that casual dress be worn, featuring flared gay skirts, and bobby socks.

Members of the ticket committee for the dance are Rose Anne Grasty, Claire Woodcock, Elaine Kauffman, Eileen Glover, Louise Kilpatrick, and Marcia Merrill.

The decoration committee includes Joy Forsberg, Marge McAvoy, Carol Broadbent, Peggy Wolking, Doris Anderson, and Mary Ann Stames.

Julia Sturgeon Becomes President Of Honor Council

Julia Sturgeon is president pro tempore of Honor Council until her acceptance as official president by the student body at the Student Government Association meeting to be held on January 22. Irene Moore resigned as president of Honor Council in December for reasons of health.

The senior English major was appointed according to constitutional procedure on the basis of last year's Student Government elections held in the spring.

This year Julia is a member of Judicial Board and literary editor of the "Beaver Log." She has been a member of the hockey squad for the past four years. In past years Julia was a member of Honor Council, and director of the junior and sophomore class plays for Play Contest.

"Esta es una casa."

Ellen La Rowe holds the attention of her Spanish class in the Jenkintown Elementary School. Several students participate in this teaching program of the Spanish department.

If You have a Car on Campus

Every student who has a car on campus at any time during the next semester must register it in the business office as soon as she brings it to either campus. As part of the new program set up by the Traffic Committee, registration will enable the Traffic Committee to determine who violates campus parking rules and apprehend them. Registration numbers will be placed on the right rear window of every car.

This program represents the first major attempt by the student body to help solve the campus parking problem. Violations will include parking on or over the yellow lines, in the visitors' area, in "no parking" areas, and in such a manner as to block another car's exit from the courtyard at Murphy gym. For the first violation a warning will be issued; for the second, third, and fourth a 50 cent fine will be given; and for the fifth a revocation of the student's registration.

The need for such a program has long been felt, but the hope that drivers of cars on campus voluntarily would be considerate of others delayed its enactment. It is to the interest of all of us that this program achieve its purpose.

Beaver Alumna Writes of Medical World In Her New Book For Young People

by KATHEE GIBBONS

Margaret Oldroyd Hyde '38 writes about the world of medicine and reveals opportunities for young people in the field in her interesting and illuminating new book, "Medicine In Action."

Mrs. Hyde, a Beaver College graduate of 1938, is a well-known author of books for young people. "Medicine In Action" has been preceded by several other books, among them, "Flight Today and Tomorrow," and "New Ideas in Science."

Published by the Whittlesey House of McGraw-Hill Book Company, "Medicine In Action" inspires interest in the medical profession — its problems, its high ideals, and its conquests. Mrs. Hyde dwells on the fact that there are many little-known but useful positions to be filled in the profession. Although everyone cannot be a surgeon, he can contribute to the field by filling other positions such as a medical artist, medical social worker, or health physicist.

"Medicine in Uniform," one of the most interesting chapters in the book, describes the armed forces' medical program. Aviation medicine, according to Mrs. Hyde, is one of the newest and most opportune fields. This includes tests to determine fliers' reactions to high altitudes and speeds. In addition, safety measures are discovered in this branch of medicine. The author feels that this is a profession that young men especially would be eager to investigate. Mrs. Hyde also discusses industrial medicine and the many phases of it that are open to young men and women.

Mrs. Hyde sprinkles her writing with examples appealing to young people. Illustrations by Clifford N. Geary further enhance the reader's enjoyment. At the end of the book are charts giving the fields of medicine and instruction needed to fill these positions. This is a useful guide for young people. There is also a list of sources which the reader can turn to for further information. All these features serve to make "Medicine In Action" an illuminating book for young people.

Tallulah Sparkles As Eugenia In Broadway Bound Production

by HELEN VINIARSKI

As the title signifies, "Eugenia" is a drama of a woman. When the woman is enacted by Tallulah Bankhead, as is the Broadway bound production at the Forrest, the audience is captivated and the theater sparkles with a magic, that, although not of the play itself, is still wondrous.

Adapted by Randolph Carter from one of the lesser novels of Henry James, "The Europeans," "Eugenia" is a "social history" of the Boston of 1878, reflecting the "typical" reactions of a Bostonian to a Baroness, continental in every way, and her "dilettante" brother.

This "epicurean," European Cleopatra arrives at the Wentworth estate, home of a distant cousin, with Felix, her irrepressibly gay brother. Felix promptly falls in love with a "folded flower" in the person of Gertrude Wentworth but she already is promised to Rev. Alfred Brand, secretly loved by Charlotte, Gertrude's sister.

Eugenia likewise develops an attachment for Robert Acton, a wealthy, worldly (in a Boston way) widower who pursues her until he wins her "love" and loses his own confidence in fear of marriage to a more brilliant being.

Eugenia is left alone, somewhat pathetically, at the end of the third act, only to spring back with the information that she has not annulled her marriage to the Baron, as she had told Acton, and will return to Germany.

With the addition of one more complexity, that of Clifford Wentworth, an "American" college boy, realistically pictured with a lack of manners and a fondness for alcohol, the picture is almost complete. Eugenia becomes Clifford's redeemer by having him fall in love with her, but her reward is ingratitude.

These interrelationships have traces of the greater James in them — the James of the deft handling of the interplay between human beings. But only the brother-sister combination fulfills appreciably one's expectations.

A picture of an intricate, often stolid society is presented with manifold teas and suppers at six, set in a New England guest house as vividly designed by Oliver Smith with the fabulous period costumes by Miles White adding to the effects. But the drama itself presents little for contemplation, being rather a composition of caricatures that offer humor with no deeper meaning.

There is much wit and satire against the "United Sanctified America," more commonly abbreviated as the U.S.A. The farcical elements in the play hardly can be attributed to James and are a result of either adaptation or production.

Saving the comedy with her portrayal of Eugenia, Tallulah Bankhead reveals herself as "queen of the theatre" (not a great lady of the theatre) who makes every movement, facial and physical, every deep-throated word manifest the brilliant, somewhat dissolute, yet extremely cosmopolitan personality of Eugenia.

With her artistic theatricality and her exuberant vitality, Miss Bankhead rules, allowing her supremacy to be shared only slightly with Scott Merrill as her brother and Anne Meacham as Gertrude, who both show unrealized potentiality.

As the wealthy Acton, Jay Burney is insignificant; Tom Ellis, as Clifford, plays with some ability the part of the repellently "animalistic" former Harvard boy. Robert Duke and Irma Hurley, as the staunch clergyman and the "perfect lady of her kind" add life to the caricatures they portray.

Herbert Machiz, the director, is to be commended for his allowing Miss Bankhead to "steal the show."

As drama, "Eugenia" is lacking greatly; as "theatre," it is sparkling with the "star" concept of a previous decade that is lost to our generation, but that has been captured for an evening with Miss Bankhead's "Eugenia."

Letter to the Editor

Open letter to the students:

I was amazed last evening (January 15) at the poor response Beaver College gave to the Hungarian Welfare Rally. Five very wonderful people came to Beaver to speak about the needs of Hungary and only twenty girls came to listen to them. The group was to meet in Taylor Chapel, but since so few girls showed up we had to move down to the Athletic Room in order not to embarrass ourselves and our guests.

If I would ask each one of you why you did not come, your answers would fall into three categories:

1. I fell asleep, 2. I am in modern dance, and 3. I had a test. You mean that from six hundred girls only twenty could come to this worthwhile program? You do not define the Hungarian condition as harmful to the general welfare and seem quite willing to continue indefinitely to disregard the problem.

Three times as many girls were at the Marriage Counsel than at the Hungarian Welfare Rally. Girls even came over from the other campus. No girls came from the other campus to the meeting last evening. Don't blame the inclement weather because transportation was available.

If you don't pay more attention to world affairs, you won't have any marriage problems!!!

"A Heritage Universal To All Students"

by HAROLD C. BAKKEN, President, USNSA

The University has always been the source, the chief defender, of man's profound desire for freedom. The search for truth, which is the life-blood of the student, is the epitome of the universal desire of man to better his condition. This universal desire for truth is a bond which unites students of all countries and makes the hopes and frustrations of one the hopes and frustrations of all.

It seems altogether fitting, then, that the recent revolt in Hungary should have been initiated by a group of 2,000 students peacefully demonstrating for conditions necessary to their search for truth, and that students have played a leading role in the demands for freedom. These were not the "citizens of tomorrow," as students are so often called — they were citizens today, accepting their obligations as citizens in full measure. And many of them will not be citizens in tomorrow's world because they so fully realized their responsibilities today.

American students were not slow in responding to the needs of their fellow students. From small women's colleges, from large state universities, from Catholic colleges and private liberal arts colleges came a single expression by American students of their sympathy and admiration for their fellows in Hungary and their universal recognition that the loss of freedom in the search for truth by students in Hungary was their loss too.

American students reiterated their commitment to this desire for freedom, to finding the truth, through the United States National Student Association's Ninth National Student Congress, where delegates representing over half a million students stated:

"Each student must support and defend a heritage universal to all students. This concern with the rights of students as students cannot be limited by national frontiers. Like the academic community itself, it is international. As students, we are citizens of a single commonwealth of the mind."

While there is tyranny in any part of the world, there can be no relaxation of vigilance of American students.

It is the realization of this fact that moves the students of America to unite with their fellows in Hungary, to the end that all students everywhere may enjoy the rights of citizenship in this commonwealth of the mind.

C-o-m-e And Get It!

by KATHARINE G. LANNING

It was a cold wintry day. The windows in the dining room were steaming from the tropical heat that was oozing out of the clanging radiators. As the girls descended on the dining room like a herd of elephants on stampede, a faint-hearted soul hastily muttered something about blissthunchas-wemunchourlunch. And 520 chairs scraped the dining room floor as a few late souls dashed around shouting, "Save that for me!"

Miss Leaver Beaver '49 found an empty seat at a table near the microphone and settled down to enjoy a good old Slater meal. Ah! Fond Memories!

"Pass the bread," said Grab-it, as she picked up the napkin and searched for the rye. The milk went skidding across the table and landed in Long-Arm's lap, but she never noticed as she was busily reaching across the table to place the olives and celery by her plate after she gulped three of each.

"Congratulations to you, congratulations to you, congratulations, dear pinned one . . ." A soon as table 23 stopped singing, 24 picked it up and it went all around the dining room. On this particular day however, only 10 girls had been pinned and four been born, so the serenading wasn't as prolonged as usual. In the background, a stunning rendition of "Hound Dog," by you-know-who was poor competition for the contest going on at each table to see who could out yell whom.

The waitress came bouncing down the aisle and . . . missed. Shepherd's pie all over the practice teachers.

All of a sudden there was an important announcement. "Fourteen girls are to report to the infirmary immediately to complete some unfinished business."

The smiling waitress skidded the delicious looking stew-filled pie across the table and the server got ready to transfer it onto the plates. After carefully picking out the onions for one and the crust for her roommate, she gave the other girls what was left.

Grab-It reached for the milk and knocked over the water glass of Push It's. Mouthfull started informing the table of all the juicy more succulent bits of information that they had missed out on since breakfast.

Elbows asked Mouthfull to shout louder to drown out the roar and clang of the now vibrating radiators.

Just-Pinned was craning her head to look at her third — this time a DU one — from every possible angle.

The raucous bleat of the Beaver bus startled every one from her serenity; it had to leave early so the girls would have time to walk from Thomas to Towers.

By now the chairs were scraping at every other table and girls carrying rolls and pieces of celery and other odds and ends were dashing out the door—just in time to take some Alka Seltzer before class.

Miss Leaver sighed with contentment. She certainly had been away for a long time.

Year In Review

1956 Packed Full of Thrills; New Records In World of Sports

by SHIRLEY CRESSMAN

Pity the person who couldn't get excited over at least one sporting event in 1956. Though last year is gone, it was packed with unprecedented achievements and thrills not to be quickly forgotten.

Beaver's Barbara Heylmun won a position on the All-American Lacrosse team, and as a result she will tour Great Britain with them this fall. Our team had their usual winning season.

Winding up with a 6-1 record, our basketball team enjoyed one of the best seasons in recent years.

Major League Baseball

Our softball season was uneventful, but major league baseball gave diamond fans plenty to talk about. The Yankees did it again.

All eyes followed Mickey Mantle through each game to see if he could break Babe Ruth's home run record. Coming rather close, he missed the 60 mark by 8 round trippers.

In a spectacular performance Yankee Don Larsen pitched the first perfect game in world series history.

The first Negro to play in the majors, Jackie Robinson, hung up his glove after many seasons with the pennant winning Brooklyn Dodgers. Baseball lost another colorful player after 21 years. Bob Feller retired with 266 victories and strikeouts to spare.

Tennis

In tennis Australia shut out the U. S. for the second consecutive year to win the Davis Cup.

In pro football championships the New York Giants overpowered the Chicago Bears.

Replacing Sugar Ray Robinson, Gene Fulmer wears the middle-weight crown.

Two All-Americans

Beaver boasted two All-American hockey players. Rosie Deniken again reached the top as did Barbara Heylmun. From her report, Rosie really enjoyed her trip to Australia with last year's U. S. team.

In intramural volleyball the juniors took the cup.

Nineteen fifty-six was the year for the Olympics at Melbourne. By piling up points in minor events, Russia won first place over second place United States.

Golf

Swaps and Nashua were the horses of the year. Cary Middlecoff, Jackie Burke, and Harvie Ward were the golfers of the year.

Nineteen fifty-seven will be a good sporting year also if the bowl games on January 1 were a true indication of things to come. Iowa topped Oregon in the Rose Bowl, and Texas Christian nosed out Syracuse in the Cotton Bowl.

Remember this is the year Barbara Heylmun is to tour the British Isles. The benefit dance show on January 17 is planned to help raise money for her trip.

Swimming Team Gets New Suits

Additions to the Health and Physical Education department equipment recently have been made in the form of new tank suits for the swimming team and red twill warm-up jackets for the basketball team.

Irma Friesenborg has announced the schedule for the intra-mural basketball games which will be held on the following dates:

Wed., Feb. 13 — Freshmen vs. Sophomores

Thurs., Feb. 14—Juniors vs. Seniors

Wed., Feb. 20 Freshmen vs. Juniors

Tues., Feb. 26—Seniors vs. Sophomores

Wed., Feb. 27—Freshmen vs. Seniors

Wed., Mar. 6 — Juniors vs. Sophomores

Sailing For Continent On European Field Trip

The captain of the Castel Felice greets Miss Evelyn Giangliulo, director of the Beaver European Field Trip, on board the Castel Felice during the 1955 trip. Mr. A. William Fisher, former assistant professor of psychology, is shown on the far right. Miss Giangliulo will direct the European trip again this year. Anyone interested in going on the trip this summer should see Miss Giangliulo immediately.

During Christmas Vacation

Frayda Buch appeared on television on January 6. She played the piano on the Christopher program, which originates in New York.

Skiing at below zero weather topped the holiday activities of Jean Bankson. Jean was the guest of John Herst and his family in Wilmington, Vermont.

Belva Henriquez joined the other members of her class and went home for her vacation. However, home for Belva is the Dutch West Indies, Aruba. She traveled by plane and her vacation featured swimming and basking in the sun.

Also seeking the sun were Lenore Berman, Saralee Cohen, Betty Kelmans, and Dorothy Herzka, who traveled to Florida for the vacation. There they saw and heard Harry Belafonte, famed calypso singer.

Sue Silver and Betsy Hoffman spent fourteen days at Miami Beach. They also saw Harry Belafonte.

Sandra Meixel spent her Christmas vacation in Spain where she visited friends and traveled.

Lynne Lewis, whose home is in

New Jersey, visited relatives in Chicago, Illinois, during one week of the vacation.

Lois Blume spent her vacation in Miami Beach, Florida.

Ann Godsey left for St. Petersburg, Florida, on December 21 and returned New Year's Day.

Joan Spencer spent a portion of her vacation in Northfield, Vermont.

Pat Fletcher enjoyed her first skiing trip in Peterborough, New Hampshire.

Ginny Schalk spent part of her vacation in Derry, New Hampshire.

Mrs. Shirley Stine, Dr. Doris Fenton, Dr. Belle Matheson, and Dr. Margaret Hinton of the English department attended the meetings of the Modern Language Association in Washington, D.C., during vacation.

Dr. Everett Townsend, professor of business administration, spent the Christmas vacation in Florida.

Honey Koota and Michael Donziger Marry In Afternoon Ceremony In Brooklyn

Miss Honey Koota was married to Michael Jay Donziger at 12:00 noon on December 25, 1956, in Avenue R. Temple, Brooklyn, N. Y. by Rabbi Steinbach. A reception and dinner at the Temple followed the ceremony.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Koota of Brooklyn. Mr. Donziger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Donziger, also of Brooklyn.

Mrs. Donziger's attendant was her sister-in-law, Audrey Haims Koota. The bride wore a dress of lace and peau de soie and carried a bouquet of orchids and stephanotis.

The couple spent their nine day honeymoon in Nassau.

Mr. Donziger was graduated from the New York University School of Business Administration and is employed in Jacksonville, Florida. Mrs. Donziger plans to complete her education at Beaver. She will teach elementary education next year in Jacksonville.
