Students reopen parietals question

Laura Miller is a member of the committee which is working for the approval of 24 hour parietals.

By Karen Schwartz

An unofficial group of students are presently working for a reappraisal of the trustees' decision in 1972 forbidding 24-hour parietals. These students believe that the lifestyles of students have changed since 1972, and the people who hold the authority to reverse the decision should be aware of these changes.

"We feel that now is a good time to try this proposal again because the legal age in Pennsylvania has been changed to 18 and because Beaver is now a coed school," said Vanessa Anthony, member of the committee. "Dean Welsh feels we should have parietals at Beaver and she is helping us. The dorm rules are down on paper, she knows, but they are not abided by under our present regulations."

"The trustees are totally unaware of what goes on in the dorms," she said. "Because of what exists now, we are jeopardizing our safety. Girls let guys in through back doors after hours."

Other members of the committee include Bonnie Sharps, John Tidwell, Laura Miller, and Jeri Parker.

"The foundation for our rebuttal is the resolution by the Board of Trustees in 1972, which denied permission for 24 hour parietals," said Bonnie. "We took each point one by one to show the fallacies in their thinking."

(For the complete resolution by the Board of Trustees made on March 21, 1972, see page 3.)

The first statement by the Board of Trustees implied that too great a risk would be involved if this proposal was passed. The committee recognized this problem. Under the 24 hour system, a desk receptionist would be responsible to make sure that all males entering the dormitories would be signed in. The student who signed for the male would then accept all responsibility for the actions of her guest. In addition, a new procedure for locking doors was suggested. During weekdays, the guard would unlock the door for the girl and her guests. On weekends, a 24 hour receptionist would be centered at the Dilworth-Thomas desk to admit the resident and her guests. In case of some emergency during the night, the male guest could be reached. Moreover an unescorted male would be questioned by students on the hall since they would know that he is alone on the hall. The residents would be more sensitive to the appearance of strange males on the hall.

Because the trustees were concerned with fairness and privacy when students live with each other, the committee suggested that a questionnaire should be filled out by each student before room assignments are made. The questionnaire, which would be confidential, would include questions asking if a student is or is not in favor of parietals. It would ask also if a student wished to live on a hall where men would be permitted to stay overnight. The committee proposed that certain halls would be designated for limited parietals as well as 24 hour parietals. The responsibility for conveniencing male guests would be left to the roommates. In addition, provisions would be made for male guests who do not wish to remain in a hostess's room overnight.

The committee cited the Handbook of Beaver College where it states that one of the aims of the college is to provide for "preparation for life in a complex and changing society." It continues, they noted, to provide its definition of a liberal education as "concerned with those qualities of mind and emotion which contribute to

Gas crisis cancels Parents Weekend

By Pat Read

The energy crisis really hit home late last week when the predicted strike by all independent gas dealers in Pennsylvania and the general gas "crunch" forced the College to cancel Parents Weekend, which had been scheduled for March 1 and 2.

An annual event for all students and their parents, Parents Weekend has been a major part of the College's spring calendar since 1950. "It's such a shame," said Francis Lewis, director of public relations, who had been working with the student-faculty Parents Weekend committee. "The committee has just worked so hard and they came up with such a wonderful program. It's such a shame that the weekend had to be canceled because of factors totally beyond our control."

Ms. Lewis said that the effect the gasoline shortage and the predicted strike first came to her attention when reservation figures for this year's weekend were compared with those for previous years. Ms. Lewis said that of Wednesday, February 20, only 19 reservations for the weekend had been received. "At this time last year or any other year for that matter we would have several hundred reservations." She added that the public relations office had received many calls from parents who said they wanted to attend the event but were unable to come because of the gas situation.

Based on the reservations and the threatened strike, the Honors Committee held an emergency meeting on Wednesday and recommended to Dr. Edward D. Gates, President of the College, that the Weekend itself be canceled and that the events which were planned be scheduled for a later date. In an attempt to save some of the activities which were scheduled for Parents Weekend a committee is currently considering the overall spring schedule. Convocation during which students with outstanding academic records are recognized, new members of the senior honor society are to be presented and special academic prizes including the Dean's Prize for the sophomore with the highest cumulative average after three semesters of work, the President's Prize for the junior with the highest cumulative average after five semester of work will be rescheduled. Also, the Vira I. Heinz Student Exchange Scholarship for an outstanding junior for travel abroad, and the William Sturgeon Memorial Scholarship to an outstanding senior for graduate study will be awarded will be rescheduled for the week of April 15.

Hopefully Dr. Ruth Patrick, an internationally known ecologist who was scheduled to speak on March 1, will be able to speak in April.

In addition to rescheduling Convocation, students who organized the student faculty talent show and play hope that both these events will be rescheduled for the College's planned Spring Weekend on April 19 to 20.

"We really don't think it would be worth it to have the play and the talent show by themselves this weekend," said Sandy Burns, one of the students who helped organize both events. "I think that they will be a really nice addition to the planned Spring Weekend."

Students will be informed early in March as to the exact date of Convocation.

Ed policy approves summer school Plans; course selection guidelines

A summer school program and new procedures for students interested in taking five courses were approved by the educational policy committee at their February 15 meeting.

The following proposal concerning the beginning of a summer school at Beaver was submitted by Harold Stewart, registrar of the College and director of special programs.

Summer school proposal:

Calendar:

Two five week sessions June 24 through July 26 and July 29 through August 29 which will run concurrently with the graduate program.

Eighty minute classes meeting days a week for a total of 33½ hours.

Credit:

Three credit courses.

Beaver students and others would have the option of earning four credits by completing a research project or paper in addition to the requirements of the course.

Science:

Courses with lab: four credits each.

Maximum credit:

Six credits per session unit or four credit courses.

1. one course per session.
2. science courses or two units (example a full year course) would be scheduled for eight weeks with no other course options available.
3. three units or twelve credits may be obtained by completing four three credit courses.

Course offerings:

Courses not included in the catalogue must obtain educational policy committee approval. A preliminary announcement will be sent to students to obtain their responses. A final announcement will incorporate changes indicated by student responses. Faculty will propose course offerings through their department chairmen to the director of summer session.

"Considering that most schools are on a three credit system, we decided to set up our school in that more people would be able to take courses here," said Robert L. Swaim, Dean of the Faculty and chairman of the educational policy committee. Dean Swaim said that faculty members were already compiling the courses they would be offering this summer and the list of selections should be available for students in the near future.

In addition to this proposal, the educational policy committee also approved new guidelines for students who wish to take five courses.

Students need not petition for five courses if:

1. they have a 2.0 cumulative average or
2. have given evidence of a 2.0 cumulative average for at least two semesters including the previous semester and
3. have the permission of their advisor.

Students who cannot meet these criteria can still petition the educational policy subcommittee if they desire to take five courses.

Jazz Trio, guest artists to present Dixieland concert

By Kathy Sullivan

The Beaver Jazz Trio will present a "Dixieland" concert in the Rose Room on Wednesday, February 27, at 8:15 p.m., featuring the well known Dixieland artist David Ellis on clarinet, Ralph Clemson on trumpet, and Ellwood McAdams on trombone.

"We would like to play all the old favorites and any requests," said Mr. Ellis. "We would like to get an audience participation thing going. I think the boys are very flexible and it should be a lot of fun."

The Beaver Jazz Trio in residence with Grant MacAvoy on drums, Buddy Spilker on bass, and director of the trio on guitar, Carmen Gasparo, will accompany Mr. Ellis' group with Dixieland songs such as "High Society," "Sister Kate," and "Copenhagen."

Dixieland music is the first effort in jazz in America and the concert should be great for Beaver students who are taking the course "Survey of Music in America," said William Frabizio, chairman of the music department.

Mr. Ellis began playing Dixieland music with Red Nichols and the famous pianist, Billy Maxstead. From there, Mr. Ellis studied and worked with various rehearsal bands in New York until he joined Benny Goodman's band. Besides being on the staff of the New York radio station WMGM, Mr. Ellis has made many record-

Presently, Mr. Ellis has formed a jazz band that will play

National leadership

As society screeches to an abrupt halt it becomes clear that there is a definite need for national leadership to respond to the gas crisis and institute a national plan to deal with this crippling shortage.

The threatened strike of all independent gas dealers has caused each individual to realize that regardless of the sacrifices he may try to make in his own way, the crisis can only be solved in Washington.

As the Congress tediously debated and re-wrote their stop gap energy bill designed to roll back oil prices and hopefully avoid a rise in gasoline and home heating prices, energy czar Simon speaking for President Nixon responded that the bill contained "several unacceptable measures" and the President would have no choice but to veto it. Within the Senate the bill was re-written three times to satisfy Senators from oil producing states. It seems that all parties involved in settling this dispute have personal interests which seem to be taking preference over the overall national concern.

Although the issue of the protective structure which surrounds the oil companies and their vast lobbies are extremely complicated with pros and cons on either side, the central problem remains the overall effect this shortage will have on this year's economic projections and those for many years to come. The consumer cannot continue to bear the cost of the demands of the oil industry and its national subsidiaries. For each demand and consequential price increase that follow only postpone the inevitable restructuring that must take place between the government and the oil companies.

The consumer is also a voter and someone who controls, no matter how minute, some degree of political power. The consumer-voter must begin to exercise this power by deluging his representatives with letters demanding that he no longer be forced to bear the cost of an ill-conceived and outdated relationship between the government and the oil companies. This deluge of letters must be backed up at the polls so that only those who have represented their consuming constituencies will be allowed to remain in office.

Political scientists and national leaders have often complained that the mass electorate has never been able to articulate their demands properly. The demands are now clear.

The bill, introduced by Patricia Crawford, a state legislator, was passed by the Senate and the House on Monday, February 18. According to the Philadelphia Inquirer, Ms. Crawford stated that she would not permit her 16 year old daughter to ride

Students uphold Supreme Court Abortion opinion

By Pat Read & Vicki Wolgel

In response to the recent United States Supreme Court decision that a state cannot prevent a woman from obtaining an abortion during the first tri-mester of her pregnancy, countless Right to Life and Citizens Against Abortion Upon Demand groups have sprung up across the country. These groups have recently joined forces to begin a full fledged drive to a sponsor a constitutional amendment which would recind the rights the Supreme Court recently granted pregnant women.

In an attempt to survey Beaver students' feelings on this subject the News recently conducted a random survey of the student body. Below are some of the comments students offered on both abortion and the proposed constitutional amendment to outlaw abortion.

Micki DeGraff: "I think that the option of whether or not to have an abortion should always be left up the individual women. That type of control should come from religious beliefs and not the legislature."

Robin Hager: "I am against abortion. I feel that being human beings we can't really make a judgments as to whether a fetus is a person or not. Biblically, there is evidence that God does know the child while it is in its mother's womb. Abortion is taking the risk of committing murder because we don't really know if the child is alive."

Mona Rothbaum: "I think that if the Right to Life organizations succeeded the results would be psychologically demaging to a tremendous amount of women. The Supreme Court decision was a landmark for the women's liberation movement because it made alot of women more secure emotionally because for the first time they had control over their bodies."

Margie McBride: "I am for the Right to Life groups because there is a human life at stake. Also there are a lot of people who want to adopt children and presently this is very difficult to do. I am not for capital punishment, but if dangerous criminals are given life sentences, why should babies be killed?"

Heather Pierce: "I am against any sort of amendment which would outlaw abortion. There are many instances when abortion is necessary and a woman who can't support another child or feels that another child will ruin her mental health shouldn't be forced to have one."

Justin Tooto: "Abortion should not be a federal or state choice. The decision should involve one's personal and religious beliefs."

Pat Pisklak: "I am against the amendment because first of all I think there are too many people in the world. I don't want to sound cruel or merciless but if a couple doesn't want a baby or the mother is unwed I don't think the state should force them to have the child."

Although this survey is understandably limited it does to some extent reflect student opinion at the College. Students who are interested in having their views on this subject printed should contact the News.

on her bike past an adult book store. This, in itself, appears to be slightly unnatural.

The basic question still remains, though, concerning the true nature of pornography. Who should have the authority to label certain items not fit for the eyes of the public? Why should one individual be able to choose what others can or cannot see? An item which is considered to be dirty or pornographic to one person, may be viewed as a work of art by another.

No reliable statistics have ever been shown to support the theory that sex crimes and violence result from exposure to pornographic materials. It seems more likely that films such as The Godfather which is packed with violent thrills, would have a worse effect on viewers than nudity or sexual escapades. Is The Exorcist any better than Deep Throat?

Because a group of persons gather on a committee claiming to be "censors," does that shield them from the so-called harmful effects that the sensual pictures on the screen might have on another viewer? The citizens of Pennsylvania need not be treated as children. Each individual should have the freedom to choose whatever type of entertainment he enjoys. We are capable of using our own good judgment as well as any government official is able.

It is alarming, in fact, that the question of whether or not to make censoring legal should arise as an issue to be debated. First of all, it appears that this bill, if passed, would be a violation of our constitutional rights as U. S. citizens. And secondly, it must be remembered that in the past decade attitudes have changed with regard to sex. Our generation has created a revolution of new ideas and morals. It appears that in Pennsylvania, legislators are making an attempt to combat progress.

News Review:

While waiting in line...

By Pat Read

Editors note: While waiting in line at a local gas station, we realized that the opinions and problems of the local gas station owner are becoming more and more important to not only us but the entire College community. With the threatened gas strike just a few days away, we decided interview some local owners in an attempt to predict the effect of the strike on the local area and possibly even find a place to buy gas this week. Hopefully by the time you read this the strike will be a thing of the past, but if not there are several good bicycles shops in the Glenside area.

"Yes, I'm going to strike," said Greg Weinert, owner of the Mobile station across the street from the 7-11. Mr. Weinert said he would strike to protest the recent governmental ruling that preferential treatment was unconstitutional. "My regular customers have kept me alive for 21 years and now I want to be able to help them. I don't think the strike will last more than a week but if it lasts a year, I'll stick it out."

"We're going to strike for a combination of reasons," said an attendant at the Arco Station on the corner of Cheltenham and Easton Roads as he surveyed the 45 cars waiting for gas. "The price has to go up, we want a bigger allocation and we want to be able to service our regular customers without being prosecuted," he said.

A call to the Keystone Automobile Association revealed that the nation wide organization dedicated to servicing motorists predicted that the strike would be almost 95 per cent effective in the Philadelphia area. "We are hopeful that the state and national governments will continue negotiations until the last minute and hopefully the strike will be averted but if it isn't motorists are going to be stranded."

"We're getting squeezed out," said a Sunoco owner who asked not to be identified. "Our prices are fixed while the government lets the oil companies' float. We know the consumer is getting the worst end of the deal but we're consumers, too, and the government has got to start listening to the consumers all of us and stop listening to the oil companies."

Bertrand to receive honorary Degree at Honors Convocation

Charles E. Bertrand, trustee of the College, has been nominated and approved by the honors committee to receive an honorary doctor of laws degree. The presentation was to be made at the honors convocation but will be rescheduled for a future date.

Mr. Bertrand received his education at the Rail Transportation Institute of the American University and at the Columbia University Management School. He entered railroad service in 1937 as a trainman on the Alton Railroad in Chicago. Later that year he transferred to the Chicago Terminal operation of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

In 1942, Mr. Bertrand was promoted to train dispatcher, in 1946 to assistant trainmaster and trainmaster at Chicago; and subsequently advanced in 1950 to the post of assistant superintendent there. He became superintendent of the Baltimore Terminal Division in 1954, and a year later was named superintendent of the Monongah Division at Grafton, West Virginia.

From 1956 to 1958 Mr. Bertrand was superintendent in Pittsburgh until he was transferred to Baltimore, where he served as assistant general and general superintendent for transportation. In Baltimore he also served as general manager, Eastern Region and assistant vice-president and vice-president, operations and maintenance. He left the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to become executive vice president of the Reading Company in October, 1963, and was elected president in September, 1964. In Charles E. Bertrand, trustee of the College and president of the Reading Railroad, will receive an honorary doctor of laws degree.

October, 1967, Mr. Bertrand was elected chief executive officer and in November, 1971 was also elected chairman of the board in addition to his position as president.

Mr. Bertrand is a director of the Reading Company, the Pennsylvania-Reading Seashore Lines, the Lehigh & Hudson River Railway, Ironton Railroad, Lukens Steel Company, Central Penn National Bank, the Association of American Railroads, and a number of Reading Company subsidiaries. He is also a member of the Board of Trustees of Beaver College and Grace Presbyterian Church of Jenkintown, Pennsylvania.

New parietal rules demanded effectiveness in all major endeavors." The committee feels that the introduction of 24 hour parietals will not hinder the opportunity for girls to study in their rooms. As it stands, the College felt there was ample space to study in Kistler without the basement study rooms, they said.

In response to the fourth statement of the trustees, the committee feels each student should have the opportunity to make the decision as to her own personal conduct. The only image now projected by the College is one of trying to meet a changing society, according to the committee. The students of the committee believe that Beaver should be concerned with preparing each student socially as well as academically for the future. To continue its reputation as a school for mature, well-prepared students, Beaver must accept the challenges of the world and give each student its full worth.

Barbara Melville and Barbara Bekker, head residents of Dilworth-Thomas and Kistler Halls are helping out the committee of students with their proposals.

"I'm not taking any position on this matter," said Ms. Melville. "I feel that if students feel strongly about it, and if they can draw up a workable proposal, it should be passed."

"I'm merely acting as a sounding board or devil's advocate for the committee. I bring up problems and propose alternatives that might not be thought of. Some things you just don't think about when you're really enthusiastic about an issue," she said.

The committee stressed that all student support is needed and anyone interested on working with the parietal committee should contact Bonnie Sharps at extension 253.

Board of Trustees stand Against 24-hour parietals

On May 9, 1970, the Board of Trustees passed a resolution in regard to 24-hour parietals. This was done after many meetings involving both students and trustees. This resolution of the Board of Trustees states, "in no case shall there be overnight parietals. With this limitation the Student Government Organization shall, in consultation with the President of the College and with his approval, continue to propose and adopt parietal hours."

In January 1972, a proposal from the Resident Assistants, approved by the Student Senate, was received. This proposal requested the Board of Trustees 1) "to reverse their position on 24-hour parietals" and 2) allow the students to "attempt to establish a workable plan to implement 24-hour parietals."

The Student Affairs Committee of the Board of Trustees met with the resident assistants to listen to their point of view. This committee also met to examine the various aspects, implications and possible consequences that could be expected if this proposal were accepted. As is their responsibility, the Student Affairs Committee reported their findings and conclusions to the Board of Trustees for the consideration and discussion.

After carefully weighing all the elements of the proposal, the Board of Trustees decided they must deny this request for the following reasons:

- 1) The members of the Board felt the housing and safety of students is a responsibility too vital for them to relinquish to others. They also felt rather than permit a condition that could invite risk, continued efforts should be made to improve security.
- 2) The college is responsible to see the rights of all students are respected. In a community living situation, where most students share rooms and all share bathroom facilities, this presents difficulties under any circumstances. This proposal would allow for little or no privacy for any student.
- 3) The purpose of an educational institution is to provide the climate and facilities to pursue an academic education. If the residence halls in their entirety are to be used as a social center, then it is impossible to realize this fundamental purpose. There will be no adequate place for the individual to study.

*The term "parietals" as used here refers to the hours during which male guests may visit in student rooms in the residence halls.

Chairman of the trustees, John R. Bunting, went on record in the Beaver News as saying he considered the issue of parietals a "closed issue."

4) The Board of Trustees of Beaver College, which is entrusted by the Charter of the College with the ultimate responsibility for its total program, is convinced that Beaver should present an image and life style that reflects a high standard of values and serious concern for academic matters and protection of the rights of each student.

The Board of Trustees want to commend the resident assistants and the Student Senate for the orderly way in which they have presented their proposals.

The Board directs the President of the College to appoint a committee consisting of students, faculty, parents, alumnae, administrative officers and trustees to make a study of the residential life and program. It is suggested they explore such problems as the architectural structure of the residences, guest accommodations, use and development of social space.

The Board further directs the President of the College to promptly convey the above resolution to the students, their parents, the Alumnae Council and other constituencies of the College.

College to sponsor Spring Weekend

Barbara Melville, head resident of Dilworth-Thomas, the residence hall council and the senior class are currently planning a spring weekend for the entire College community for April 19 and 20.

"We basically would just like to have a weekend when there were a lot of different activities going on campus," said Ms. Melville who is serving as coordinator for the event.

For the spring weekend the residence hall council will be sponsoring a faculty auction and the senior class is interested in holding a formal dance.

"Right now we are interested in finding individuals or organizations who are interested in sponsoring a picnic, a coffee house, movies or any other activities for the weekend," said Ms. Melville.

Students who are interested in working on the spring weekend committee should contact Ms. Melville at extension 265 as soon as possible.

Future

Apocalyptic eschatology thinks inevitably in terms of a leap into the future.

This is the ideal behind the production of "A Fantasy for Futurists" by Mary Ellison.

A leap into the future was inspired by the future probe class, a Winterim at Beaver College. Its objective was exploring the belief that futurology is both a valid prospective for analyzing the dynamics of our time, and an imperative for religious exploration.

Since "A Fantasy for Futurists" was produced during Winterim when only a few students were on campus, Mary Ellison has decided to produce this play again on Monday March 9.

Cast includes: Dr. Hall doing the prologue and the epilogue; Rose Carol Murr as Madame Rose, Lennette Swenson as the 21 century scientist, and Wayne Mulcahy as the minister.

The time is the future and the place is earth!

Glee club, Franklin and Marshall to Present concert this Saturday night

By Litsa Marlos

The Beaver College Glee Club will be joined by the Franklin and Marshall Men's Glee Club for a special concert on Saturday, March 2, at 8:30 p.m. in Murphy Chapel.

The 50-voice Beaver Glee Club, under the direction of Dr. Dorothy Haupt, associate professor of music, will be performing a mixed program ranging from classical numbers to spirituals.

Included in their program will be: Oh Mary, Don't You Weep, a Negro spiritual, Where Is Love, from the show Oliver, The Sleighride, a Russian folksong, Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee by Johann Sebastian Bach, Nigra Sum by Pablo Casals, Hallelujah by Schubert, and Winter Cantata by Persicatti.

The 30-voice Franklin and Marshall Men's Glee Club, under the direction of Dr. Hugh Gault, professor of music, also has a varied program planned. They will be performing three folk songs, Loch Lomond, When Johnny Comes Marching Home and Shenandoah, and also a longer work, The Last Words of David, arranged by Randall Thompson.

The two glee clubs will combine on another work by Thompson, Alleluia, and also on Brahms' Liebeslieder Waltzes, with four-hand accompaniment.

Debbie Oakes, president of the Beaver Glee Club, is enthusiastic about the concert. "We expect a pretty large audience because a lot of the kids will be bringing their parents," she said. "We planned our selections carefully, taking into consideration the type of audience we expect."

"I think this is a perfect opportunity for the student body to hear one of the most important groups on campus," she said. "How many other organizations go off campus and tour? We're a valuable public relations tool."

Last summer the Glee Club took a three week concertizing tour of five European countries.

The concert will be followed by a social which is open to the entire college community, in the Castle.

Playshop to present 'Time Remembered' male roles and 12 subordinating roles, began yesterday and will continue today, Tuesday, February 26, at 7:30 p.m. in the Little Theatre.

In addition to needing actresses and actors for their spring production, Playshop will also need students to chair and serve on technical committee.

Interviews for stage manager, set chairmen, lighting chairmen, and publicity director will be held tomorrow Wednesday, February 27, at 4:30 p.m. in Classroom Building room 108.

"We chose the play because we wanted to do something light and because Mr. Moller hasn't directed a play with male roles in it since we did Trojan Women two years ago," said Iris Berman, executive producer of Theatre Playshop.

"We are really going to need a lot of people to work on sets," said Iris. She explained that the play had several major scene changes which would require several different sets. "Even if students aren't interested in chairing committees we still need people to work on the sets and each committee," she said.

Students who are interested in working on any aspect of the production but who are unable to attend the auditions and interviews should contact either Mr. Moller at extension 331 or Iris Berman at extension 292 as soon as possible.
