Arcadia University, formerly known as Beaver College, was founded in 1853 in western Pennsylvania. A group of civic and church leaders in Beaver County, northwest of Pittsburgh established the Beaver Female Seminary, one of only seven in the nation devoted to higher education for women.

In 1872, the institution became the Beaver College and Musical Institute and opened its doors to men. Then in 1907, the name was shortened to Beaver College and limited to female students again. In 1925, the College moved to Jenkintown, Pa - a suburb of Philadelphia. This location had larger facilities, a more adequate campus and greater opportunities for development. But soon additional property was needed to provide for the expansion of the College.

In the autumn of 1929, the Trustees secured a nearby estate located in Glenside known as Grey Towers. This new site, with its spacious grounds and stone buildings, provided a campus of great dignity and beauty. The College operated both the Jenkintown and Glenside campuses into the mid-1960s, when it consolidated all activities onto the Grey Towers property.

In 1972, the College again became co-educational and began offering graduate level programs. In the next thirty years, Beaver College grew significantly, evolving from a small undergraduate, liberal arts college into a comprehensive university serving more than 3,000 men and women through full-time and part-time undergraduate and graduate programs.

In light of this growth in size and the range of its degree programs, the institution applied for and achieved university status in 2000 and changed its name to Arcadia University on July 16, 2001.

"The foundation built upon our history is strong and will enable us to continue providing our students with an education that prepares them for the contemporary world."

- President
Bette Landman
A Remarkable Journey

As you know, the University community spent the 2003 calendar year celebrating the remarkable journey of this institution from a small women's institution in Beaver County, PA to what we are today. I am pleased that the staff of the Enthymion has chosen to continue this celebration in the pages of this edition. During the year we had a chance to learn more about our history and to examine how the University had changed over time. This chance to explore the insights we've learned from our collective experience is valuable and rare. For those of you who are graduating, this is an opportunity for you to examine your own journey. It is an opportunity for you to pause and explore the changes you've experienced as you've learned in and out of the classroom. I encourage you to take this opportunity, much as the University did, to look back and be proud of what you have accomplished and who you have become.

A Limitless Future

The future of the University is bright. The foundation built upon our history is strong and will enable us to continue providing our students with an education that prepares them for the contemporary world. And you too have a bright future ahead of you. As you graduate from Arcadia, you face a world that is rapidly changing. You leave here with the skills to adapt to those changes, many of which no one can foresee. If you have strived for excellence at Arcadia then you are prepared to interact with a global economy that values individuals who can solve problems, work effectively with others and communicate clearly. When you entered the University, you had already begun to build your own foundation for your future. While you have been here, you have refined and strengthened that foundation and it should serve you well as you move on.

It is also a significant year for me as I prepare to move on as well. In effect, I am “graduating” from Arcadia after thirty-three years. We will share the bittersweet experience of leaving an institution to which we feel so strongly attached. I can only hope that you will value your time here as much as I do and that you will continue to remain a part of the Arcadia community.

Boyer Hall opened in 1971 and was considered state of the art for its time at a small college.
First year students, known as Freshies long ago, took part in a ritual hazing that included wearing a beanie starting their first week of classes and ending when they earned the right to take them off. They were required to tip their hats at any upperclassmen who walked by and were victims of random pranks. The rationale was to incorporate the students into the community and create class spirit. The prank tradition was eliminated in 1958 but the wearing of the beanies continued until the early 1970s.

Orientation has evolved into a week-long series of events beginning with “Meet Arcadia” and ending with a special ceremony highlighting the special times and people who made it all possible including Orientation Leaders, members of OPEC and the entire Welcome Team.

Traditions

Started in 1932, the Song Contest was a popular tradition, and is the forerunner of Mr. Beaver. It was so immensely prepared for and so much creative activity went into it that the faculty had to limit students’ preparation time. Each of the four classes presented a “pep” song, an Alma Mater, and a class song with original words and music. Awards were given for best performance, best song, most original and clever song, and honorable mention for second best performance.

The Mr. Beaver contest originated in 1978, several years after the last Song Contest. The current Mr. Beaver tradition consists of male students competing as characters chosen by female residence halls in a beauty pageant. Celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary in 2003, Mr. Beaver is always a campus favorite.

May Day, a traditional pageant held in the spring season was an all day event that included a May Day queen, a procession by the Laurel Chain (freshmen and sophomores) and Honor Court (juniors and seniors), and a traditional dance around the May Pole. The day ended with a dance in Grey Towers Castle.

Spring Fling, a yearly celebration held in April includes Lip Sync, a Drive-in Movie, Blitz, and Woodstock. Lip Sync involves students performing on stage; Blitz is a carnival with all sorts of attractions; and Woodstock brings bands of many genres to campus. One of the most popular modern traditions of our generation always manages to bring out the students, rain or shine.

Traditions

As the student body becomes larger, Arcadia University must also grow to accommodate the masses. Since the school’s founding in 1853, it has changed location three times-first from Beaver County to Jenkintown (in 1925) and finally to our current home, Glenside, Pennsylvania.

After purchasing the Harrision Estate in 1929, the Glenside campus has grown tremendously. Since that time, many additions to the campus have been made, including the most recent additions—the Landman Library (dedicated October 3, 2003) and Brubaker Hall (opened July 2000). As a part of President Landman’s Ten Year Plan, additional classroom buildings, including a school of international studies and an upgrade to the performing art facilities are expected.

Traditions

Never is time so precious than that spent in the company of good friends. College offers so many opportunities and perhaps the greatest of them all is the chance to meet new people and create bonds that have the potential to outlast our years here at Arcadia. Mr. Beaver, Dances, Orientation, Woodstock, Comedians, Movies in the Chat, Activities Fairs, Ultimate Frisbee, Empty Bowl, Blitz, Club Meetings, Retreats, Classes, Study Groups, Games, LEAD, Musicians, Coffee Houses, or just hanging out - memories are made every day in everything we do. The four to five years here go by quickly, it is up to all of us to make the most out of all of them. A lot of lessons are learned in college, perhaps one of the most important is that time is of the essence.

Dear Graduating Seniors:

Congratulations on your accomplishments and your graduation. Your time at Arcadia University has been filled with many exciting events. I hope that as you reflect on your experiences you will find ways to keep the memories and the excitement fresh.

You have seen the institution become a university and have contributed to the growth of our community. You have supported one another during the tragedies of September 11, 2001. You have been part of celebrations of our 150 years of incredible history in education. You have endured the renovation and construction of the Landman Library, so that you could enjoy the finished product. You have honored and celebrated the achievements of Dr. Bette E. Landman as she retires. The specific events may fade in your memory, but you will never lose the sense of accomplishment, the relationships you have built, and the enhanced understanding of our world.

Your contributions have been many and you take with you a strong educational foundation for your future endeavors. While you may leave the campus or stay for a graduate degree, while you may stay near or travel great distances, you have shared important times with many here, and our hope is that you will find ways to stay in touch with your friends as well as the faculty and staff of Arcadia University.

It is up to you to decide the next steps. My suggestion, if I may be so bold, is to be sure to be intentional. Be intentional about your goals, be intentional about building and maintaining relationships, be intentional in deciding how to contribute to your community, and be intentional in maintaining the memories you have helped create.

Congratulations to the Class of 2004! We all wish you the very best in the future.

Sincerely,

Jan Walbert
Vice President for Student Affairs and Dean of Students
College is a mixture of academia and amusement. So much happens in the span of the four to five years spent at Arcadia that we could hardly capture it all. But here is the place to remember both the serious and the surreal.

To the Class of 2004:

I remember when I was still in high school and I would be at a football game and I would see people who had come home to visit from college. They looked so old to me. I thought that they were so mature because they were in college. I couldn’t imagine why they would want to come back to a high school football game. I still can’t. I mean really, let’s be honest, a high school football game? Anyway, the point is that I didn’t think I would ever fit in at college because I was nowhere near as mature as they were. And I’m still not, but I have realized that they weren’t either. Going away to college is absolutely a life changing experience. I don’t care what anyone says, it is. But even though you are a different person when it’s all done, you are still you.

We are graduating. It’s scary. And I feel the same way I did back in high school. I see people who have recently graduated and have jobs and I am amazed because once you graduate, you don’t have a job anymore...you have a career. And I can’t see myself in their place. But then I think about how sure I was that I would never make it in college, and how incredible my time at Beaver/Arcadia has turned out to be, and I know that I will be fine.

So we are graduating. And you don’t know what is going to happen. They say your college years are the best ones of your life, and I know mine were. But that only makes me more hopeful about the future.

Congratulations!

"I come from a family of five: mom, dad, Julie, and my dog, Cinder, who just recently passed. My parents house is right across the Walt Whitman, in West Deptford, NJ. All of us are very unique, fun, and fun-loving. We have our tough moments, but we still like to play board games and cards together. Scott, my better half, just joined this happy little group this past December, when we were married. He's doing ok so far!

"As many of you know, I was accepted to what was then Beaver College in 1995. I began classes the following fall as a Pre-PT student. That didn't last long (science and math aren't exactly my best subjects). My first two years at Beaver were ok; I wasn't involved in very much other than soccer and watching Judge Judy and Jerry Springer on TV (those shows had just begun around the time I was at school).

"Finally, in the spring of my sophomore year, I got involved with Orientation. I found myself surrounded by happy people that allowed me to be myself and liked me for it! I finally realized that I had the potential to be a fun person! Two years, five major changes, and many ups and downs later, I graduated in 1999.

"I took a chance at teaching for two years, first freshmen and seniors, then specifically juniors and seniors at Paul VI in New Jersey. That was interesting. During my time at PVI, I applied to Indiana University of Pennsylvania Student Affairs in the Higher Ed program and finished my masters degree this past summer. I suppose it was just natural that I return to my alma mater after an exhausting search for my niche. I've always felt comfortable and safe here. At Beaver, I experienced the highest highs and lowest lows of my life thus far, but I was forgiven for mistakes and given many other chances to succeed. I suppose the best way for me to say thank you was to return, hopefully making similar contributions to students who may be in the same place I was 10 years ago."

Arcadia University has long had a commitment to globalizing both the campus and students. This is accomplished in a plethora of ways such as students taking part in ID and Honors courses that travel, London and Scotland Preview, and through study abroad. The Center for Education Abroad (CEA) is ranked second in study abroad by U.S. News and World Report. It offers more than 60 programs of study throughout 11 countries including Australia, England, Equatorial Guinea, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Mexico, New Zealand, Scotland, Spain, and Wales. The CEA sends many a student to every country for a semester or even a year of study. Although they are there to take classes, they also immerse themselves in a new and different culture as well as have loads of fun.
Fall 2003 marked the first ever London Semester program for first year students. The 60+ students that took part in the program studied at City University and London College of Fashion, taking courses in a wide range of subjects taught by Arcadia and British faculty. Courses were held on or near the campus of London’s highly respected City University. All enjoyed full access to the University’s academic, sporting and recreational facilities, which offered excellent opportunities to meet British students after class and get a taste of British campus life.

One of my favorite places in London is Greenwich. The cruise down the Thames was a chance to see historical sites including the Tower of London, Tower Bridge, Oliver’s wharf and more. Once in Greenwich I stood on the Prime Meridian, the line splitting the east and west hemispheres, at the Royal Observatory. The view of the city was breathtaking on that beautiful fall afternoon.

London: the capital city of England, the city of stars! You walk into any given theatre and a movie star may just be in it. Read any Metro and you may find that there is a huge movie premiere. Now you may ask, just who has this little freshman seen? First I was able to attend the premiere of “Young Adam.” At it, the amazing actor, Ewan McGregor, was there, and yes I did get his autograph! Next was a series of star sightings in the theatre. There was sexy Backstreet Boy, Kevin Richardson, the amazing Kenneth Brahahnn (he was Professor Lockhart in the second Harry Potter movie), John Hannah (from “The Mummy”) and another “Moulin Rouge” star Jim Broadbent (I received his signature as well). To top all of this off, I will be in London for the premiere of the final installment of Lord of the Rings. Yes that is correct, Viggo, Orlando, Elijah, and Sir Ian, will all be there and so will I! So, simply put, this London experience for me has been a truly starstruck one!

As part of their studies, they also visited many historical and cultural sites. They were given the chance to see the landmarks and places that have moved and influenced the people and events in British history. It seems that all of them took full advantage of what London and Great Britain has to offer. They explored famous attractions like Buckingham Palace, the Tower of London, Westminster Abbey, the British Museum, the Houses of Parliament, and much more both inside and outside the country too.
The founding of Beaver Female Seminary in 1853 marked a turning point in women's education. As you can imagine, student life was much different in the 19th Century, especially with an all-female residence life. Certain rules and regulations were expected to be obeyed. Each student was required to bring her own silverware and napkins for dining. After each meal, she washed her silverware and placed it on a shelf for later use. Sunday afternoon from 2 to 3 o'clock was "Meditation Hour." Students were to remain in their rooms with no visitors. There were no dances at the college until after 1894. But some Friday nights a few of the ladies would get together to dance. Although some teachers objected to this because they thought it would encourage the ladies to dance with men.

In 1877, a school dress code asked that the ladies dress be no longer than "modern walking skirt, loose and suspended from the shoulders, as all cloths should be, thus securing opportunity for the development of the chest and for the full respirations without which the vigor of health can no longer be maintained."

Although things have changed a lot, we still have rules in place. It makes one wonder what will people 100 years from now look back on as our contribution to Arcadia University history.

Belonging is a quintessential need in life. It is the need of validation, friendship, and success. Being a part of something, a group, can bring numerous rewards to yourself and the community. Arcadia’s clubs do not offer anything different from this. Everything ranging from dance to debate; from government to gaming; from recreation to recording; and tons more is available for the students to take part in. Those that do take advantage of the extracurricular activities find loads of fun, friends, and life lessons.
Student Government Organization
Student Government Organization is the student community's official voice to the administration and the campus. Every student is a member and invited to participate in decisions made pertaining to student and campus life.
PEERS
The goal of PEERS is to educate both the campus community and the community at large about a variety of physical, sexual and emotional health issues. Some of these include drug and alcohol abuse and healthy relationships. The PEERS implement programs independently and also collaborate with other institutions like LaSalle University and Gwynned-Mercy College.
Arcadia
Special
Athletes
Association
Arcadia Special Athletes Association works with athletes from the Special Olympics. They attend their volleyball practices on a regular basis and hold semi-annual events for the athletes on campus.
Student Programming Board
Student Programming Board (SPB) strives to bring fun funny and diverse entertainment to campus. Most weeks there is at least one SPB-sponsored event, whether it is a comedian or a pre-released movie. In addition, the club also plans and hosts two of the University’s biggest events: the annual Mr. Beaver pageant and Woodstock, a concert held during Spring Fling weekend.
PRIDE is an alliance between Arcadia's straight and gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered communities. They welcome members of all sexual orientation and hope to create an environment where everyone can be comfortable with who they are.
Knight Club is Arcadia’s dance team, founded in 2002, it allows students the opportunity to learn and train in various dance disciplines. Now entering their second year, the team provides all interested dancers in the campus community a place to practice and perform.
The Enthymion
In their second year, the editors of the Enthymion Yearbook work diligently on re-vamping Arcadia's annual yearbook. Often you will see these students at campus activities with cameras in hand.

Athletics

Sport is imposing order on what was chaos.
- Anthony Starr

I’ve paid my dues,
Time after time.
I’ve done my sentence
But committed no crime.
And bad mistakes
I’ve made a few.
I’ve had my share of sand kicked in my face
But I’ve come through.
We are the champions my friends
And we’ll keep on fighting till the end.
-Queen
Arcadia University has a long tradition of outstanding athletes. Win or lose, every member of every Arcadia team contributes a great amount both to the sport played and the people involved with the organization. But every year we have those exceptional athletes who excel on and off the playing field. People who know what it means to bring players together. Whether it's the coaches, team captains, or any person associated with the sport Arcadia has some of the best to offer. Being a member or leader of a team teaches invaluable skills and creates unforgettable memories.

Serving to Victory
Richard Smith, aka Smitty, is back!!! He graduated last May with the Class of 2003. While attending Arcadia University he was the student coordinator for OPEC for two years, president of SPB his senior year and now holds a degree in English and is certified in secondary education. Smitty is very happy to be back. He is now able to return to his love of cross country through coaching. Smitty said that both men and women's cross country had a great season and he is very proud.

Lookin’ back now

well it makes me laugh,

We were growin’ our hair

we were cuttin’ class.

Knew it already,

there was nothin’ to learn

We were strikin’ matches just to watch ‘em burn.

Had no excuses for the things we’d done.

We were brave, we were crazy

We were mostly young.

- Thomas Carruthers

Leading by example is an art form constantly being reinvented by all of the professors, instructors, staff members, and workers here at Arcadia University. There has been a long history of inspiring, enlightening, and truly great people in this college’s long history. Many of us consider ourselves lucky to be in the presence of a few of those in our generation here.

Aim for success, not perfection. Never give up on your right to be wrong, because then you will lose the ability to learn new things and move forward with your life.

- Dr. David M. Burns

The Enthymion would not have been possible without the generous contributions of the following individuals. Without the aid of parents, loved ones, friends, businesses, and the campus community this yearbook would not be where it is today. Success, both financial and emotional, is dependent on the assistance of others. Thanks for helping to create lasting memories.

YOU GO GIRL!

Dear Jennifer,

This is really something special. Four years of hard work with some fun mixed in pay off with graduation this year. It may not seem like a lot, because of what lies ahead, but your degree represents a real accomplishment. You'll remember your 4 years at Arcadia for the rest of your life.

We are very proud of you as we celebrate your graduation. You have the tools and we know you will use them well.

Love,
Mother, Dad, Lisa and Allison

Your first grade teacher asked me if you “ever do anything wrong?” Your 11th grade Spanish teacher wrote about you that “rarely does a teacher experience a student with such a high degree of discipline, initiative and motivation.” You are truly a role model for others. Your excellent grades all throughout college, your many accomplishments along with your dedication to your leadership position in Hillel shows what a truly special person you are. Good luck in Law School- we know you will succeed.

Mr. Bennie

Thank you.

We will never forget your enthusiasm for Arcadia University or our love for you.

2003
A Note from the Editors

Thank You

The Enthymion Yearbook would not be complete without the efforts and contributions from the following people:

- Lisa Chosed- Thank you for sharing with us your endless supply of pictures. Your talent and generosity is greatly appreciated.
- Bill Avington, Stacy Kelly and the entire University Relations Staff- Without your willingness to provide us with photos and information we would have many blank pages. Thanks especially for sharing with us the many historical pictures needed to correctly portray Arcadia’s most interesting history.
- The Tower Staff, especially Ben and Julie- Thank you for sharing the clutter that is our office. Your patience and understanding throughout the creation of this book has been greatly appreciated- thank you for listening.
- To the authors of A 150-Year History of Beaver College and Arcadia University, Dr. Samuel Cameron, Dr. Mark Curchack and Dr. Michael Berger, thank you for sharing with us your knowledge and research. It is because of your wisdom that we were able to make the yearbook theme a reality.
- To the entire Arcadia University community, thank you for sharing your memories with us.
- To our Josten's Representative, Mr. Phil Klein, thank you for letting deadlines slide and understanding crises!
A Note from the Editors

Thank You

Yearbook has been challenging for me this year. But after watching the process last year, I thought I’d give it a try. I really had a lot of fun working with my co-editor Julie, and Nick, Meg and Lauren have made the process easy to understand. Thank you everyone who has helped us with pictures, especially Lisa Chosed, and those who have given us support. We wouldn’t have been able to make this a great book without you. I can’t wait to see the book finished!

Jenn Chance

First off, I’d like to thank Lauren and Megan. Without you guys this yearbook probably would not exist. You did a great job handling all the computer issues, as well as a few others problems we don’t need to mention. You guys rock! Nick, thanks for trying to keep us in line and on task, and thanks for getting the boards in the office! You tell them whose boss! Of course I’d like to thank my right hand woman, my partner in crime, my layout assistant, Melissa Woodley. Good times my friend, good times....and more to come! I only get crazier! And lastly I’d like to thank the rest of the staff that stuck with it when times got tough, who persevered and got their work done. You know who you are, keep up the good work kids!

Peace!

Meg Hine

It’s been a great year working with everyone. I had a blast. Nina you were a great co-editor. This is going to be the best book yet.

Going into my second year as Editor, I did not know what to expect. There had been a lot of changes. A new advisor, a new staff, a new vision, and a new commitment. At times it all seemed very daunting. But looking back now, this book and me would not have survived without the work and dedication of this staff, both new and old. I could not possibly thank everyone who has kept me focused and sane, but I know that it would have been impossible without the following people. To the staff, I greatly appreciate your time and talents. This book is a labor of love and is better for the work you personally have done. To Nick, I have to be honest I was worried about getting a new advisor. But you proved to be both a source of entertainment and information. To my friends, you know who you are, thank you for letting me be happy and angry and helping me to smile through it all. To Lauren, my other half, yearbook brought us together and created a bond only this club could make. Thank you for the laughter and the tears and being able to be there like no one else could.

~Megan Corcoran, Editor-in-Chief

"Out of the depths of The Log we rise and we shall be victorious." This quote written by one of the editors on the office whiteboard beautifully describes the year that we've had. We've come so far as a club in the past two years and I am so glad to have been apart of it. To our staff, you have done an amazing job and I am so grateful for being given the opportunity to work with you. Thank you for your dedication, patience, time and commitment - it would truly be impossible to create a yearbook of this quality without you. Nick, your energy level and motivation are inspiring; your ideas, input and encouragement have helped to make this book great. While it does not seem to be enough, thank you for all you have given and for putting up with all you have gotten. Margie, thanks for being cool and always there to listen and encourage me to keep going. To my friends, I wouldn't be here without you; thank you for reminding me that there is life outside of the Enthymion office. Megan you really are my other half. Thanks for making me laugh, understanding the tears and helping to finally destroy the Yearbook Demon- I couldn't have asked for a better Co-Editor or friend. Congrats 2004!

~Lauren I. Murray, Editor in Chief

I would first like to thank all of the Enthymion staff members for doing a wonderful job this year. Because of your hard work and dedication, this yearbook is a reality and will leave an everlasting mark on Arcadia University. To the editors, you all did a great job of making the most of your time and showed why you were selected to be an editor. Through the good times and bad times, you all continued to show your enthusiasm and never gave up. I am so proud of your efforts and work. To Lauren and Megan, you both have exceeded my expectations. You went beyond the call of duty and developed into two great leaders. The decision making and long hours have paid off because you have set the standard for years to come. The leadership qualities that you both displayed throughout the year kept this group together and made my transition much smoother. Through all of the laughs and jabs, we have become a strong unit. I have enjoyed being your advisor and I thank you for all you have done with the Enthymion yearbook.

~Nick Luchko, Advisor
Dr. Bette E. Landman

Dr. Landman joined Arcadia in 1971 as Assistant Professor of Anthropology and was named Academic Dean/Vice President for Academic Affairs in 1976. She served as Acting President during the 1982-83 academic year and again in the early part of 1985. Later that year, Dr. Landman was selected as the 18th President of the University. She was the first woman to hold the office. By June of 2004, she will have been President of Arcadia for 20 years.

"During her more than three decades of service to Arcadia, Dr. Landman has participated in and guided impressive growth and success at the University, recognized today as one of the leading institutions in the region and in international education."

~Board Chair Joseph L. Castle II

"She has the respect of the entire campus and it is a wonderful tribute to have the new building called Landman Library. It is especially poignant too for this honor to happen during her final year as president."

~Vice President for Institutional Advancement, Jay Vogel at the Landman Library Dedication

With great pride, this yearbook is dedicated to Dr. Landman
