THE LOG 1974
Beaver College
Glenside, Pennsylvania
In 1881 Mr. Harrison bought Rosedale, the farm and country place of J. Thomas Audenried, which lay in the historic village of Harmer Hill. A building was constructed encasing and preserving the rooms of Rosedale Hall. When the old Rosedale mansion was destroyed by fire, Mr. Harrison built Grey Towers. The building was in the process of construction for ten years and was finally completed in 1892. This grey stone structure was designed by the late Horace Trumbauer, well-known Philadelphia architect, along the lines of historic Alnwick Castle in England, which dates from the 12th century and has been the home of the Earls (later the Dukes) of Northumberland since 1368.
It is estimated that the Castle cost approximately $2,000,000 and contained furnishings reputed to be worth $500,000. The stone used in the exterior walls of the building is believed to be native Chestnut Hill stone and is hand dressed. All the materials in the interior were imported from abroad. The room to the left of the main entrance, now the president’s office, was a private library which housed many rare volumes. The former billiard room, under the main stairway, is now the apartment of the director of residence. The painting on the ceiling of the ballroom, known today as the mirror room, was executed by a European artist in Paris.

Once Upon a Time . . .
Mrs. Harrison’s bedroom. Drawing Room of the Harnson’s with original rose-colored carpeting. Gobelin tapestry in the lounge at the top of castle stairs. Rose room including many of the original furnishings.
The lobby floors, the stairway, and the balustrade are of solid mahogany. Not a single nail was used in laying the floors. All of the wood carving in the building, including the spindles (estimated to number 600) around the balcony and the stairway, is reported to have been done by hand.
The fireplaces on each side of the lobby are of French Caen marble and the mantlepieces are hand-carved Italian marble. The painting on the ceiling of the ballroom was executed in France and then transported to Grey Towers. Rare tapestries line the castle walls in the halls and in several rooms. The windows in the student lounge at the head of the staircase are made of crystal. The original bath fixtures are Mexican onyx. An aviary built to order and placed in front of the third floor window, at one time housed 1,000 canaires.

Picturesque CAMAC STREET with its red brick pavements and tidy row houses is another one of the quaint Colonial byways in Old Philadelphia.

INDEPENDENCE HALL, the most historic place in the nation. Here the Declaration of Independence was signed and here the Constitution of the United States was debated and adopted.

Symphony concerts by the world-famous Philadelphia Orchestra are presented in the city’s Academy of Music during the fall, winter and spring.
Philadelphia’s CITY HALL is America’s largest and one of its most notable municipal government buildings. Its Tower, rising more than 500 feet above street level, is surmounted by a heroic-sized statue of William Penn, founder of the City of Philadelphia and the State of Pennsylvania.

The famous Old LIBERTY BELL is on permanent exhibition in Independence Hall. Visitors hear the Story of the Bell through a tape recording.

The PHILADELPHIA MUSEUM OF ART. This magnificent building stands at the head of the Benjamin Franklin Parkway. An architectural masterpiece, it contains one of the world’s great collections of art.

The old stone church and burial ground of the village of Harmer Hill disappeared in time to make room for the expansion of the boundaries of the Grey Towers estate after Mr. Harrison obtained a decree from the court wiping them out. The tombstones in the half-acre cemetery behind the church had the names of families from Revolutionary days. These former landmarks were covered by the spacious lawn which today is the site of Beaver College’s Commencement and other college events.
Aerial view of May Day exercises.
All the original buildings on the campus, with the exception of the gatehouse are connected by underground tunnels. The gatehouse which is now Blake Hall, cost $30,000 to build and served as the Harrison's home while the castle was under construction.

The power plant was originally built in duplicate; two boilers and two dynamos. A short distance from the power plant is a large building which was used for the servants' quarters and now houses the Little Theater. Murphy Hall was once the palatial stables and carriage house.

EDITORS' NOTE: We wish to especially thank Miss Frances Lewis and Mrs. Caroline Bartlett for their generous help and advice. It was through the Public Relations Office that the old pictures of Beaver College were made available to us. Also their pamphlet “Once Upon A Time” was the source of the historical information used in the book. We also wish to thank Mr. John West for his cooperation and patience throughout the ordeal. A special thanks to our Taylor Publishing Company representative, Ray Ritter, who went to great lengths to help us out. Last but not least, we wish to express our sincere thanks to our photographer, Chris Spencer, whose creative photographs were a great asset to this book.
