BORN INTO
AN AGE OF FLIGHT

We who are born into an age of flight Have known the cruel, wild urgings of our time.
We have taken silver wings against the night.
We have taken wings against the changing climes.
Upward, ever, earth bound child; you are free.
Free to borrow this land and this sky.
Free to destroy the boundaries of creed.
Free to stand with eager hand held high.
To loose the bands of earth and mount the soaring steel.
To touch the face of God in wings across the sky.

Oh, youth of this age, born into flight,
Ride ye ever on wings of hope through eternal night.
Salute of Honor

The Senior class of 1944 proudly dedicates this, their Beaver Log, to Mr. A. J. Whiting, affectionately known as Whitey, the night watchman.

We so dedicate our Log to him because he is a symbol of the devotion which gives meaning to our campus life, because he has given to every financial need of the college, because he is always the first to acclaim a girl for her accomplishments and to aid her in difficulty. He, who is a symbol of Beaver's true meaning, is one of the few to whom we owe so much.

As Whitey has never forgotten us, we, the Senior class of 1944, shall never forget him and the college in which he serves.
RAYMON M. KISTLER

The most illustrious member of the Class of 1944 is Dr. Raymon M. Kistler. Through four years we have felt an especial bond with him, since he came to Beaver the year we entered as Freshmen. His friendliness and helpfulness on all occasions have endeared him to us. We gratefully acknowledge our indebtedness to him and think he deserves a degree, but we hope the trustees will require many more years of study at Beaver before awarding him one.
COMBINED OPERATIONS

DEAN HIGGINS AND MISS PAULHAMUS

As we of the Class of 1944 look back over our four years at Beaver, we would like to acknowledge our gratitude and indebtedness to our Dean, Miss Ruth Loving Higgins, and our Registrar, Miss Roberta Paulhamus.

During these years there has been a great upheaval in the educational system. Enrollment in men's colleges has declined rapidly and women's colleges have been given the task of preserving humane education in an inhuman world.

Here at Beaver Dean Higgins and Miss Paulhamus have kept pace with these trends. They have instigated new Victory courses and have made sure that we have received the best possible preparation for work in our chosen fields. We cannot fully express our gratitude for their great interest and guidance.

In these days of war and crisis, our thoughts are those of service—service for country and for school. The Army awards a Distinguished Service Medal to “those members of the Army who distinguish themselves by exceptionally meritorious service in a duty of great responsibility.” Beaver’s Seniors, in compiling their classbook, The Log, similarly reward those Seniors who have given unstintingly of their time and talents for the furtherance of their Alma Mater by awarding them a place in the Beaver Mirror. The Seniors holding this honor were chosen because they had contributed most to Beaver and not necessarily because they had held an important position. By their efforts they have made Beaver a better place in which to learn, live, and play, not only for themselves but also for future students.

Being a revolutionary class, we decided to include more than the usual ten girls of the Senior Class for honorable mention. These girls have also contributed unstintingly of their time and talents to their school, in leading groups, helping on committees, doing the drudgery, and most of the time getting little of the glory, not through lack of ability to serve, but through lack of opportunity. We are happy to include in our yearbook these girls who have also served.

RELIGION is playing an increasingly important role in the lives of people the world over. As comparative peace and security are abolished by the chaos and turmoil of times such as these, more and more people turn to the steadying influence of an omnipotent and omnipresent God, and religion takes its rightful place in the lives of mankind.

Beaver is, first and foremost, a religious institution. As such, it has endeavored to teach us the great encompassing power of love and guiding care which God exerted at all times. We were introduced to that great book, the Bible, in our freshman year. As sophomores we studied Old Testament history, and as juniors we studied the New Testament. We were taught to apply the teachings of the Bible to our everyday lives. In Present Day Religious Problems we heard representatives of the Catholic, Christian Science, Jewish, and Protestant faiths speak on their beliefs. We discussed the place of religion in post-war problems, in marriages, in formal education, and many other such interesting and provocative questions. Through such discussion we became clear in our own minds as to what was right and what was wrong, and we also learned to be tolerant of the other person’s viewpoint.

Dr. Kistler has headed the Bible Department and had as a valuable and able assistant Miss Helen Crawford. We have enjoyed Miss Crawford’s evening chapel programs and appreciate her interest in all our activities. Though our class can boast no Bible majors, we consider that portion of our education very important to our well-being, spiritually, physically, mentally, and socially.

Included in our religious life on campus are the Y.W.C.A., the League of Christian Students of Beaver College, and the Newman Club. These organizations have given us as students another channel for self-expression.

The Bible Department has sponsored speakers at Sunday evening chapel who have come from near and far to give us their idea on subjects relative to the Christian way of life. Many of these speakers have been well-known leaders of religious thought in America today. We are very grateful for the privilege which has been ours to listen and to learn.

ANY changes have taken place in the business world in the past few years. Civil Service requirements have been lowered drastically as a result of the increased number of positions in government agencies which have had to be filled. The great migration of workers to Washington, D. C., has resulted in a scarcity of help, so that jobs are fairly readily to be found, but quality still counts as the greatest asset to a person entering the commercial field. The Commerce Department of Beaver College insists that the graduate of the department have outstanding qualifications of efficiency and reliability, as well as a broad general background, in order to enable her to contribute to the smooth functioning of the organization with which she becomes associated, something in addition to speed and technical efficiency. Girls are taught to use all types of machines, such as the mimeograph, the multigraph, and the addressograph, and they learn thoroughly the principles of business organization and management.

Beaver has replied to the current demand for more and more workers in the commercial field by instituting a new two-year Victory course in secretarial studies. Students entering this program are given as much general background as is possible, as well as concentration in the secretarial studies, in order to prepare them for responsible positions.

Preparing to teach secretarial studies appeals to many girls, because they will be equipped, at the end of their studies, to teach or to go into business, if they prefer to do so. Teachers are in demand, and, with the growing complexity of business, the demand in this field promises to continue.

Here at Beaver the members of the Commerce Department have served in many capacities in the various organizations on campus and are in great demand for secretarial work, and especially for mimeographing copies of programs for concerts, schedules of athletic activities, and so forth.

Opportunities for secretaries are many and varied. The medical, industrial, real estate, and insurance fields are only a few of the many which offer interesting opportunities for specialization and advancement. In this age of industry, girls who are qualified are in great demand for responsible positions.

EDUCATION
MAGINATION, coupled with vision, is the essence of modern education. The girls in the Early Childhood and Elementary Education Departments are children again while learning the arts of clay-modeling, puppetry, and finger-painting in order to be able to teach these crafts.

When you walk into Mrs. Dager's office, you think you are walking into an attractive grade-school classroom. Yet, the room has been the scene of many discussions, conferences, and classes concerning the child from beginning-school age to about twelve or fourteen, concerning the teacher planning to teach this child, and the subjects taught this child. Much goes on behind the pretty drapes and many memories linger there.

The Elementary Education Department has continued along much the same plan as in previous years, having been little affected by war conditions in so far as the course offered goes.

The Early Childhood Education Department, on the other hand, has felt the impact of the war and changing conditions, and has responded to a great wartime need for nursery school assistants and teachers. An accelerated two-year course has been organized in this field, thus helping to fill the many calls for workers in day nurseries and in nursery schools which are being opened for the children of industrial workers. The Jenkintown Day Nursery and Nursery School offers an excellent field for observation and practical work. Since the teacher in charge is a member of the Beaver College faculty, the students have unusual opportunities for study of the child of this age level. In addition to their regular hours for assisting, many of the students volunteer for afternoon and mealtime work, thus rendering valuable service where there is great need. The Early Childhood Education Department, along with its usual studies and many activities, is studying with great interest the effect of the war upon children from five to nine years of age in the public and private schools, and the ways in which the schools are endeavoring to combat the restlessness, the fears, and excitement which all too many of the children are experiencing.

Now those remaining of the Class of 1944, having been through the throes of practice-teaching and method classes, and with many hours of observation behind them, are ready to face the classroom, ready to do their part in educating the future leaders of the world,

ENGLISH
AMN the torpedoes, full speed ahead.” This famous epigram might well apply to the English Department. In spite of the many obstacles with which the department has had to contend in the past few years, the works of the immortals have continued to serve as a source of inspiration to Beaver scholars. Hamlet, Macbeth, and King Richard are still enchanting students under the guiding hand of Miss Fenton; the wisdom of Chaucer and Milton find voice in Dr. Sechler; Miss Matheson’s drama and novel classes are so well attended that even English majors have to fight for seats; and the Freshmen will remember Mrs. Sturgeon in the days to come as the one who introduced them to the wonderful world of Homer, Virgil, and Plato.

Of course, because of conditions, text books are scarce and many a literature class has studied without benefit of a text for practically half a semester, but somehow managed to pull through.

The very trend of literature has been experiencing drastic changes. The English Department has kept up with the faster tempo of living and introduced courses in modern poetry and novel study, while not forgetting the studying influence of those classics which are eternal.

For the creative outlook, we have our brain-children, the Beaver News, Beaver Log, and the Beaver Review. Here the Department walks away with top honors, bringing to light many talents hitherto hidden under the well-known bushel. Potential poets, playwrights, reporters, and authors may owe their inspiration and practical start to the patient understanding of some member of the English faculty.

In the dramatic field, Miss Elder has produced some fine actresses. The two outstanding plays of this and last year, “Cry Havoc” and “Letters to Lucerne,” could not have received a better reception had they been Broadway productions.

In a world of war and hate, the English Department preaches love, beauty, and truth. It prepares its students to take an active role in the peace that is to come.

It can be said of the Beaver College English Department that where others are training for destruction it creates its own world in which the ideas and principles of the ages are being upheld through learning.

A VISIT to the Art Studio is an illuminating experience for most Beaveriters. The quality and wealth of material found there is astounding. Under the tutelage of renowned and gifted instructors, the girls of the Fine Arts Department receive inspiration and guidance along their chosen way.

The talents of the Fine Arts majors have been much in demand all the year round at Beaver. Flats for dances, posters announcing Forum events, and scenery for dramatic productions are a few of the many evidences of the work of Fine Arts students. "Imogene" and the "Leave Us Face It" posters are hallmarks of fame as far as we here at Beaver are concerned. Yet this is only one small portion of the work done at the Art Studio. Painting, fashion illustration, interior decoration, commercial design, and art for industry—these fields are all actively participated in by members of the Fine Arts Department.

The Fine Arts Department has initiated a new two-year Victory course in drafting to fill the demand for draftsmen in war industries. Under this program students are given instruction in architectural sketching and problems, drafting, blueprint reading, and other courses needed for various types of specialization.

Art, commercial and otherwise, is playing an increasingly important part in the lives of Americans. The horrors of war and the necessity for "Backing the Attack" have been brought to the attention of the American public in a large way through poster art. At the same time, creative art has offered for non-artists rest from the cares of their daily lives, and, for the artistic few, a channel for self-expression. Art reflects the current modes of thought and life, and understanding of the thought conveyed by the artist presents a challenge to all of us.

 Majors in the Fine Arts Department presented exhibits of their individual accomplishments in the field of art, and the rest of the student body sat up and took notice of the unsuspected talents displayed therein. Students in the Fine Arts Department also participated in an exhibit at Strawbridge and Clothier's, in which they won top honors in all classes of the exhibit.

We are proud of the work of our Fine Arts majors, and we have full confidence in their success in whatever they undertake to do.

HISTORY and PHILOSOPHY
IN THIS year of turmoil and strife, the History Department has kept pace with the fast-moving tide of events in presenting to the students courses designed to acquaint them with history, past and present, in order to insure better understanding of the problems which we as members of the coming generation will have to solve. The problems of reconstruction and rehabilitation must be considered intelligently, and the best basis for study of these problems is a knowledge of similar problems and the solutions offered in the past. We must not make the mistakes humanity as a whole made after the Armistice in 1918, for instance. We must make sure to the best of our ability that there is wholehearted cooperation by all the nations of the world in any international organization for peace and understanding, and we must not allow any minority group with ideals detrimental to that peace to live and rise up again. We, as the younger generation who will have the task of solving present-day problems, need to know what we are doing. This is what the History Department has attempted to do. It has attempted to teach us the events of history in order that we may apply those lessons, and it has kept us up to date with happenings at home and abroad which are of vital importance. Already such names as Teheran and Casablanca belong to history, and we must understand their great importance.

This year, as in the past, students attended the Middle Atlantic Model Assembly of the League of Nations. There they took an active part in drawing up blueprints for the "New World A-Coming"—ones which statesmen might well consider in their own plans.

We should like to applaud Dr. Clarke on her recently-published book, "Parliamentary Privilege in the American Colonies." It is a work of scholarship and insight, and we are proud to claim it as the work of one of our professors.

Philosophy also plays a major role in modern life. Here at Beaver the Philosophy Department has endeavored to adjust modern trends of thought to healthy and enlightened living through the study of philosophy, logic, and ethics. We believe this is one of the major contributions of the colleges today to a world at war.

HOME ECONOMICS
Several years ago the girls who entered college to pursue the Home Economics curriculum were preparing almost exclusively to be good housewives and mothers. We, of the Class of 1944, look forward also to such an existence, but realize that we are needed more now in other jobs. For instance, the field of Dietetics has been recognized as playing a very important role in keeping the people of the nation healthy and strong for the job which lies ahead of them. In defense industries, in hospitals, on the homefront, and in the armed forces, scores of dieticians are at work applying modern ideas of nutrition. Teaching dietetics, clothing, textiles, and all related subjects to high school students and adults alike is helping immeasurably to raise the standard of living. Specialists in these fields are uniting with social workers to educate the public to modern laws of health and economy. Caring for the children of war-workers in nurseries presents a challenge to many women. There, lessons in child psychology, care of the child, and dietetics are applied.

Here at Beaver, majors in the Home Economics Department spend six weeks at the Home Economics House, where they actually practice all the theories of homemaking they have learned. A young baby is adopted for those six weeks, and the girls rotate in the jobs of nurse, hostess, laundress, cook, housekeeper, and the like, performing these duties under conditions such as would occur in the home. For those girls who are preparing to teach, practice-teaching in a nearby public school is required. There girls learn how a school cafeteria is managed and how to teach the rudiments of sewing and cooking.

Home Economics students are much in demand for all activities on campus. Their assistance is particularly invaluable on costume and refreshment committees, and they are often asked to supervise social affairs. Chairmanships of committees for afternoon teas, special dinners, and other affairs give the girls tangible experience in over-all planning of all sorts of social functions.

Now that our studies lie behind us, we are anxious to step forward into our future to see what it holds in store for us.

The Language Departments of Beaver College offer courses in French, German, Greek, Latin, and Spanish.

This year La Maison Française succumbed to shortages in fuel and help and was closed for the duration. The spirit of La Maison, however, was kept alive by the students and was transported to the third floor of Ivy Hall, now known as the French Corridor. Members of the French Corridor participated in entertainments held for French sailors at the International House of Philadelphia. Beaver also had representatives at meetings of L'Alliance Française, held by the Free French Committee of Philadelphia.

The study of German has become increasingly important now that we recognize the task which lies before us when this war is over. Also, more and more girls are preparing to enter the scientific field, where German is very helpful. Beaver has kept pace with this need by offering an accelerated course as well as Scientific, Advanced, and Conversational German. German is a "must" for sociologists and scientists with an eye to the future.

Interest in the classics has been subordinated to a great extent to the emphasis on modern languages because of the world situation. This is a deplorable condition, but one which cannot be helped. At Beaver, however, one may still partake of the glorious spirit of a by-gone day and become familiar with our great heritage from Greece and Rome.

Beaver continues to keep pace with the increasingly vital interest in our American neighbors by fostering a Spanish Corridor. Social as well as academic activities are held to help the students acquire a fuller and more fluent knowledge of Spanish. We were fortunate this year to have at Beaver students from Guatemala, El Salvador, Mexico, and Puerto Rico to help us in our "good neighboring."

For all those interested in seeing a world in real accord, the study of languages is a vital necessity, for it is only through real understanding that barriers can be broken down, and in order to understand a people, we must know their language.

MUSIC
WHOEVER has come from a hard day's work to relax to the strains of melody, whether it be via radio, the concert stage, or amateur attempts on a piano, knows the value of music in a war-torn world. Music has long been recognized as one of the greatest single factors in keeping up the morale of people the world over. Since time immemorial man has created music of one sort or another. Primitive man raised his voice to an accompaniment of drum beats. Gradually stringed and wind instruments came into being, until man acquired the multitude of instruments which are in existence today. Music not only affords relief from pressing cares, but also mirrors life through the ages. Historic events, great inventions, and general moods are all found expressed in music.

Music is an integral part of life at Beaver. Students from all departments participate in Choir and Glee Club, finding great satisfaction in uniting with others in producing a thing of beauty. This year the Choir presented programs at Christmas and Easter, as well as singing regularly at Sunday evening chapel service. The Glee Club made a number of trips during the year. The members of this organization sang at St. Mark's Lutheran Church in Philadelphia and also at Dr. Kistler's church in Haddonfield, New Jersey. Other visits were made to the Stage Door Canteen in Philadelphia and to the Fort Dix Recreational Center. The Glee Club sponsored programs presented by visiting clubs from nearby colleges. The Glee Club and the Sophomores jointly sponsored the annual spring concert and the Soph Hop. All of these programs were very successful.

Many of the girls majoring in music aspire toward the concert stage. In preparation for this, each major is required to present a recital, demonstrating in this recital her ability and talent. Girls not aspiring to the concert stage may turn to public school music. Here they can do great service by teaching the youth of America to appreciate and enjoy good music, and to derive personal satisfaction through creation of music. The graduates of the Music Department of Beaver College have before them a challenge to make possible personal expression through music, not only for children, but also for adults.

HEALTH and PHYSICAL EDUCATION
The value of participation in sports of all kinds is recognized by our faculty and administration. Exercise is of vital importance in keeping the health of an individual up to par. All students at Beaver, therefore, are required to take several years of gym credit. We all enjoy our gym classes, and there are those among us who like them so well that they major in the field. Majoring in the Health and Physical Education Department does not consist of spending one's time playing games, though, of course, there is much of that. Majors in the department follow a stiff academic course, as well as wearing themselves out on the playing field.

Perhaps the most appealing future to a major in this department is the field of physio-therapy. With rehabilitation work already under way, this field takes on added importance. Many wounds can be healed through surgery, but that spirit of joy and interest in life has gone in many cases, and to bring back this interest is one of the hardest jobs to accomplish. Miracles are being performed in this field, however, and the girls in the Health and Physical Education Department are vitally interested in taking part in this great humanitarian work.

Teaching physical education in the public schools is also looked upon as an interesting and helpful occupation by girls in this department. The public schools are showing more and more interest in this side of the growth of a student, and more and more instructors in this field are needed.

Here at Beaver, Phys Ed majors take an active part in all activities on campus. Within their own department also, they sponsor many events. One of the most exciting is the selection of the Posture Queen, who is chosen by outside judges from finalists representing the entire student body. Varsity games are attended by all students, and Beaver lassies are cheered on to great victories. Intramural sports also are well participated in and there is great rivalry between the respective classes.

All of us have had a part in the activities of the Health and Physical Education Department, and we are glad that we have had this opportunity. We expect great things from majors in this department, and we wish them the greatest success possible in all that they do.

SOCIAL SCIENCE
THE Social Science Departments combine the departments of Economics, Sociology, and Psychology. New courses have been added in the field of Economics and Political Science in order to acquaint students at Beaver with present-day and post-war problems of everyday living. These courses are "Labor Problems," "Postwar Conditions and Reconstruction," and "Public Opinion."

Girls in the Sociology Department receive valuable experience and render great service by spending one hour a week as part of their curriculum at Scott Center, a settlement house in South Philadelphia. Only with the aid of these girls was it made possible for Scott Center to continue with its useful, necessary, and educational work. Each student worker is in charge of an average of fifteen young children a week. The girls work with very limited materials and under very handicapped conditions, but a week has yet to pass by without offering an opportunity for these girls to make finer, healthier, and happier children of their pupils.

As an added means of broadening their education, the Sociology majors made various trips to sociological centers in and around Philadelphia. Some of the agencies visited were the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, a branch office of the Family Society, the Child Guidance Clinic, and the Social Service Exchange of Philadelphia.

The Psychology Department has also been very active this year. The need for clinical assistance has increased greatly and psychology majors have any number of institutions offering them places in which to do their clinical practicing. Psychology majors also work in conjunction with schools in the vicinity.

As in the Sociology Department, various field trips have been made. Those of most interest were the ones made to the Philadelphia General Hospital Psychiatric Clinic and to the Pennsylvania School for the Deaf.

War has created a greater need than ever before for workers in the field of the social sciences. Majors in these departments go forth with a challenge to better the lives of humanity and raise standards of living so that we may all really have equal opportunities under the democratic system.

One of the results of this war has been the number of opportunities which have opened for women in the scientific field. The need for women workers in defense plants has given those girls who are interested a chance to get a foothold in an important industry. College graduates have been able to step into important technical positions, and, even if all the jobs are not as wonderful as that, still they offer a chance for advancement.

Medicine in all its variety of applications continues to attract the women of today, even more now that it is so important in the consummation of the war effort and in the rehabilitation work which has already begun. Thousands of soldiers have already been discharged from the armed forces and need various types of therapeutic treatment before they will be able to resume their normal activities. On the battlefield, along with perfected methods of slaughter have come perfected methods of healing. Many new wonders of materia medica have been discovered. The sulfa drugs triumphed in the hour of need by saving hundreds of lives at Pearl Harbor, and, since then, penicillin has come to the fore as an even more wonderful healing agent. Necessity for performing blood transfusions under all conditions has led to the formulation of the celebrated blood plasma. Miracles have been performed in modern surgery and therapy. The women of America want to take part in this humane work and have thus been attracted to the scientific field in great numbers.

The war has affected us here at school in other ways. We have not been able to get chemicals without a priority rating, and that involves immeasurable red tape. Shipping facilities are slow and limited, and we have had to go through half a semester without proper laboratory equipment, but we have surmounted these difficulties.

The traditional Science Open House has had to be tucked away with other casualties of the war, but the members of the Science Departments have continued in experimentation and research and are planning an amazing exhibition of scientific wonders when such an exhibit again becomes possible.

DO YOU REMEMBER?

As Seniors we have become accustomed to fewer dances; we have grown used to curtailments, AFO numbers, and all-girl dates. Our gang has accomplished wonders in every field—athletics, drama, scholarship, music, and our genius for originality was evident in the faculty-Senior dinner (gone are the parties in the waning hours!), and in making the Senior week into a brilliant weekend. We have come a long way through peace, war, and victories; the ones we have helped win in the gigantic struggle, and the ones we have claimed in our everyday lives. The Senior class, looking into an awesome future, looks back in reminiscence to the College.
Social Calendar
This year has not been one of all work; we have had our hours of play as well. The incoming freshmen were treated right at the start to the many activities of Freshman Week, which included a Watermelon Party. The first Sunday of the school year was the date of the Y.W.C.A. Vesper Service and Tea. We all became acquainted with one another at the Big-Sister Little-Sister Picnic. Then came the time when the Freshmen showed the upperclassmen what they could do by putting on a bang-up Hallowe'en Party. The Trustees' Reception came soon after this affair, and then came that night of all nights, Song Contest. No work was done that night, as the Juniors celebrated their victory, and the rest of us tried to sleep with the chapel bell ringing. The very next day we were off to our first vacation. It was a relief to relax and celebrate Thanksgiving Day with the folks at home.

Early in December came the Day Students' Dance, the first big formal dance of the year. Then the Seniors invited their favorite faculty members to the Senior-Faculty Dinner. Very soon after this came Christmas vacation, and the night before vacation was really a memorable one. The Pajama Parties in the dorms were loads of fun, and everyone especially enjoyed the food that was served at the close of the skits. Most of us had extra parties planned, and, of course, that would be the night we had a blackout! Ice cream melted and appetites sharpened as we waited for the lights to go on again.

As soon as we arrived back from Christmas vacation, we were immediately brought down to earth by the fast approach of the end of the semester. It seemed as if every professor had the same idea—an exam would be just the thing! We labored valiantly and at last the ordeal was over (except for the chore of preparing the folks for the worst!).

February brought the Junior Prom, the dance of the year. Despite a shortage of men, we managed to do very well by ourselves, thank you, and everyone had a super time. Also in February, we had two Forum events: lectures by William A. Lydgate and by Carl Zigrosser. The Glee Club went sporting extensively during the month also, visiting St. Mark's Church in Philadelphia, Dr. Kistler's church in Haddonfield, and the Stage Door Canteen. Then in March the Glee Club gave its big Spring Concert, with the Glee Club of Franklin and Marshall College as guests. The concert was followed by the Soph Hop, and again this was a big success.

Before we knew it, Easter vacation was upon us and soon after came Move-Up Night. To undergraduates this is a time of rejoicing in the fact that they have gone up a peg, but to the seniors it is a time of sorrow. College days are almost over and all the trials and tribulations of life face them (especially income tax returns!). Time moved swiftly onward through the maze of May Day practices and finally that day of days arrived. The Juniors received their long-awaited rings at the Junior-Senior Ring Breakfast. Then we all moved over to Grey Towers to view or take part in our May Day festival. It was a time of great festivity and the spirit of spring was in the air.

Two weeks later school ended. The undergraduates packed up and left us Seniors to spend our weekend in our own way. Class Day exercises saw us being formally inducted into the Beaver College Alumnae Association. Lantern Chain was a beautiful affair, and one which brought lumps into our throats. The Father-Daughter Dance combined with the Senior Ball was a success because we all had dates (at least we could bring our fathers!). Then that day of all days, the goal that has finally been reached, Graduation! No one who has not gone through such an experience can know the mixture of emotions one feels on that day. Our four years at Beaver had come to an end, and we packed and left school while the excitement was still with us, so we wouldn't have a chance to think of what we had left behind. And so the year 1943-44 ended at Beaver College.
SEPTEMBER

REGISTRATION

Once more the halls of Beaver ring with friendly greetings as another school year begins. Visits are made to the Business Office with hopes that Dad hasn't forgotten to send that check. Then comes registration and the realization that we still can't remember what to do next! Registration completed, we look forward eagerly to the events of our last year at Beaver.
"F. P. A. is coming to Beaver"! Gleefully we awaited Franklin P. Adams of "Information, Please" fame. Mr. Adams arrived in the afternoon, toured our campuses, and ate dinner with us in the dining room, where his brilliant yellow tie drew exclamations of delight. Huntingdon Gymnasium was packed as Mr. Adams spoke on "Innocent Merriment" and charmed us with his informality and wit.
NOVEMBER 12

Song Contest
The most exciting event of the school year is Song Contest. On the eventful day the Seniors practiced early in the morning and again in the afternoon. When it came our chance to perform, we were good, but not good enough. We applauded the Juniors, consoling ourselves by remembering our victory in our Sophomore year and the awards of Honorable Mention in our Junior and Senior years.
MONTH OF FURLOUGHS

December witnessed the innovation of a Senior-Faculty Dinner instead of the customary Breakfast, which drew exclamations of joy from faculty and students alike. We fared well at the dinner, even though Uncle Sam did ration steak. The night before Christmas vacation we had our traditional Pajama Parties both in Montgomery Hall and in Beaver Hall, which were, as always, the acme in entertainment and fun.
EXAMS!

Social activities were practically nil at Beaver in January as Beaverites settled down to clinching grades for the semester. There were exams and more exams, with a few papers and reports thrown in for good measure. The Log staff worked feverishly to meet deadlines. The only thing that kept us alive was the thought of Prom in the near future.
Romance was the keynote for February, for along with St. Valentine's Day came the Junior Prom. Adding still more to the romantic atmosphere was the Hearts and Flowers theme of the Prom. Decorations were superb, with cupids, hearts, and flowers lavishly displayed, and everyone especially enjoyed the delicious punch. Our hats are off to an inspired and competent Prom committee.
WE SERVED, TOO!

The Forum of Arts and Sciences sponsored many activities at Beaver, of which one of the most provocative was a lecture by William A. Lydgate, editor of the Gallup Poll. The Young Women’s Christian Association also sponsored activities such as bandage rolling and the donation of blood to the Red Cross, as well as participating in War Bond Drives.
FURLOUGH GRANTED?

The year was fast drawing to a close and our emotions were a mixture of joy and sorrow as we packed up once more for Easter vacation. Soon after Easter came Move-Up Night, which to seniors is Move-Out Night, since from then on they are all but alumnæ. Graduation and the future loomed sharply before us to make of it what we would.
May Day on the Grey Towers campus was a simple American-style affair reigned over by the May Queen, Emma La Rue, and her four attendants, Ruth Chantlon, Maryanne Horned, Jane Figgatt, and Mary Lou McGrath. The occasion was one of gala festivity and one which we shall always remember as a fitting climax to our four years at Beaver.
Conditions being what they were, Senior Week activities were compressed into Senior Weekend. Grey Towers was the scene of most of the activities, providing a fitting background for our last weekend at Beaver. We shall remember with joy our Class Day Exercises, the picnic on the lawn, Lantern Chain, Father-Daughter-Beau Ball, and, finally, that crowning achievement, Graduation!
ON ACTIVE DUTY
The students of Beaver College, believing that the true development and growth of character, responsibility, and ideals lies in the ability of all to govern themselves, have organized an association fully equipped to uphold the standards set by the students. The name of this organization is the Student Government Association of Beaver College.

The purpose of this organization is to maintain a high standard of honor and to promote a spirit of unity among the students, to secure cooperation between different organizations on campus, to represent and further the best interests of the student body, and to encourage responsibility, self-control, and loyalty among the students.

Like most of the other organizations on campus, the war has also had its effect on the Student Council. The council has had to deal with many more problems involving special permissions, so that students may have college leaves which coincide with the furloughs that members of their families or other men in the armed services are granted, and late permissions due to transportation difficulties.

Outside of being a disciplinary council, the Student Council sponsors the annual Song Contest, one of the highlights of life on campus. Wednesday afternoon teas are also sponsored for new faculty and personnel members.
As students of Beaver College, we firmly believe that honor is of the greatest importance in our everyday life. The Honor System was established to promote high ideals of honor in the student body both academically and socially. Its effectiveness rests completely upon each student, who by her own actions reflects these ideals so necessary to democracy.

The Honor Council was organized for the purpose of helping students to maintain their high moral standards. The Council consists of two faculty advisers, a president, two members from each class, and one day-student representative. All members of the Council are chosen by the student body through the Nominating Committee.

In order to bring to the attention of the Honor Council any dishonorable conduct within the student body, two methods of reporting have been established. First, any student seeing a classmate doing dishonest work may ask the latter to report herself to the Honor Council, and second, any student seeing a classmate doing dishonest work may report her classmate directly to the Honor Council. The former is primarily preferred, because it gives the accused an opportunity to clear up any misunderstanding. It also puts the entire responsibility of the success of the Honor System on the student body.

Needless to say, the Honor System at Beaver was not formed for the purpose of giving severe penalties to erring students, but principally to help them by correcting wrong attitudes. A high sense of honor is one of the pillars of strong moral character, and it is hoped that each student will make this goal her own both now and in the future.

DAY STUDENTS COUNCIL

The Day Student Organization is governed by its own council, and this year acted under its own constitution.

The Day Student Council is composed of a president and four other members. This year they were: Miriam Howard, president and representative on Student Government Council; Dorothy Ellis, vice-president and senior representative; Helen Liacouras, secretary and junior representative; Elizabeth Gold, treasurer and sophomore representative; Mary Louise Roberts, freshman representative; and Miss Jean Francksen, faculty adviser.

Through their own active organization, the day students presented their annual dance, one of the year's main events, which was ably supervised this year by Maryanne Harned. They also sponsored a popular cracker sale in Murphy and Brookside, and planned a special spring outing.

Lambda Delta Alpha is the senior honor society of Beaver College. It gives recognition to the students who have demonstrated that they possess academic accomplishments of merit, qualities of leadership, and excellence of character.

Alpha Kappa Alpha is a national honorary society in philosophy. Requirements for membership are: good academic standing, proficiency in philosophy and allied subjects, and interest in practical philosophy.
Pentathlon is the honorary athletic society of Beaver. Its purpose is to promote interest in athletics and to set a high standard of sportsmanship.

Psi Chi is a national honorary society in psychology. Members are elected from majors and minors in the department who maintain a high standard of scholastic achievement.

Pi Delta Epsilon is a national honorary society in journalism. Its aim is to unite the interests of the Beaver Review, the Beaver News, and the Beaver Log.
The Student’s Handbook of Beaver College is the student’s first guide in her college life. In a brief and compact form, it is designed to make each girl’s early days at school more enjoyable by acquainting her with college traditions and familiarizing her with the social and academic regulations of Beaver.

Through it she learns about her place in the Student Government Association, the Honor System, and other student organizations.

Not only the new student, but every student turns to the Handbook as a source of information of what to do and what not to do at Beaver.
At last we can present the 1944 Beaver Log to you! Only staff members and those who have been involved in the mechanics of building our Log can fully appreciate the tremendous task of publishing a yearbook.

We started minus money, records, and materials, but we had new and exciting ideas which we were determined to use.

We used every available means of getting revenue. War conditions raised all prices ten percent, so this meant that we had to work doubly hard if we were to show good results to you. The Log undoubtedly has its defects and shortcomings in spite of all we tried to do to make it a perfect piece of work. It is far from the best that Beaver can produce, but to us it is a step in the right direction.

Some of our ideas are new and we hope you like them. We also received many requests and suggestions for a better Log. You wanted many more pictures and we are giving them to you; you asked for more views on campus—well, here they are. Another unanimous wish was to have the addresses of all the students. All in all, you wanted a book of memories. All that we can say now is that we tried!

We have striven to make the Log a book every student will cherish because it is a true representation of our lives here. The task of putting the record of our college year in permanent form has brought us many headaches and heartaches, but it has also brought many thrills, and these make everything we have done well worth the effort.
You just walk down to your mailbox on Friday afternoon, and there is the Beaver News... it's as simple as all that, unless you happen to be one of those listed in the masthead! You can count on the Beaver News to keep your mailbox free from cobwebs and to keep you from being lonely on Friday afternoon.

If you are named in the masthead, then they have your number in the publications room. Your days are filled with trying to get interviews, meet deadlines, and be several places at once, and your nights are filled with dreams of upside-down type and misplaced headlines. To you the Beaver News is a headache, but you wouldn't take an aspirin tablet on your life—you wouldn't part with that headache!

Editing the Beaver News has always presented its problems, but in wartime it seems that everything is speeded up except campus news. Despite the lack of metal for cuts, the lack of manpower to run the press, and a lack of time on the part of the staff, the Beaver News managed to struggle along and published nineteen issues from Freshman Week to Senior Week.

Coverage of campus news was supplemented by editorials on national and international problems, by reviews of art exhibitions, plays, and musical events in Philadelphia, and by interviews with such prominent personalities as General Somervell and Annabella Line. Line drawings were used to foil the O. P. A., who didn't think we should have film and flash bulbs.

For the deadline rush and confusion—for those days and nights in the publications room—we are compensated. That copy of the Beaver News in your mailbox is our reward: we don't ask for any other.
By the end of the college year, the editor of the Beaver Review is stooped, haggard, and utterly friendless (all her erstwhile friends having meticulously avoided her for fear of being asked to write articles for the Review). We, the Seniors, remember with chagrin and some pride, the masterful way in which we avoided sleuthing editors in search of "something really dynamic for the next issue." We remember the inspired excuses we thought up for not handing in such material, and the way the staff suddenly announced a deadline next week, fondly thinking that then we wouldn't put it off.

But—we remember with pride the articles that did appear in the Review. Short stories that showed beauty and understanding, and articles that evidenced profound thinking appeared quite often, along with a lot that did not exhibit these qualities. We remember poems, good and bad, published and unpublished, conceived in the deep night and inspired by Suffering Humanity or Spring, which flowed from the most unsuspected pens.

All of us have read the Review at least once. Many of us have contributed to it and a few of us have edited it. We have done our best to make the Review representative of the work of students at Beaver College.
The Forum of Arts and Sciences, designed to govern extra-curricular activities, this year not only faced the age-old problem of finding the happy medium between education and entertainment, but also was confronted with cramped quarters due to the closing of Murphy Chapel. However, taking all drawbacks due to the war into consideration, the executive board succeeded in producing a well-rounded program in 1943-44. A visit from Mr. Franklin P. Adams, favorite son of "Information Please," constituted the first major Forum event. In December the Literature and Drama division sponsored a highly successful student production of "Cry Havoc." A program preceded by a soirée with Robert and Barbara Robbins of the New York Theatre was attended by Shakespeare lovers on the bard's birthday. Informative speakers on World Affairs were presented, and art exhibitions were frequently displayed in Green Parlors for the leisurely enjoyment of students. We were also treated to a lecture on the appeal of prints by Mr. Carl Zigrosser, Gerda Peterich, noted photographer of dance groups, paid Beaver a visit in March and explained the technique of her art to those interested.

The Young Women's Christian Association of Beaver College is a student organization whose purpose is to unite the student body in seeking a full and creative life through activities based on the principles of Christianity. It provides a well-rounded program of religion, service, and entertainment.

The Y. sponsors many affairs which have become traditional at Beaver, namely, Freshman Week (in cooperation with the Student Government Association), the Big-Sister Little-Sister Movement, the Vesper Service and Tea held the first Sunday of the school year, and the tea for seniors, parents, and friends held during Senior Week.

The Chapel Committee has directed student-planned chapel programs, conducted observances of Federation Day of Peace and Federation Day of Prayer, and observed a week of emphasis of Religion in Life.

Emphasis, this year, has been on participation in the war effort, and, as a requirement for active membership in the Y., girls were asked to give six hours of service in war work or social service. Many girls visited the settlement houses in Philadelphia regularly. In war work, the Y. has been responsible for a bandage-rolling unit, has recruited blood donors, and has sponsored bond drives. Christmas packages were sent to servicemen and books were collected for American prisoners of war.

In the way of fun, the Y. has given various parties, movies, and teas. Our U.S.O. Dances and Beaver Open House combined war work and entertainment. Through the Y. and the World Student Christian Federation the student body of Beaver College has partaken of fellowship with students all over the world.

WE ENGAGE IN

All students of the college are members of the Athletic Association. The Association sponsors and supports varsity teams in hockey, basketball, and tennis. It also carries on an intramural program including the three sports mentioned above, as well as baseball, shuffleboard, badminton, ping-pong, deck tennis, quoits, archery, and swimming. The purpose of the Athletic Association is to develop interest in all athletic sports, create a spirit of good sportsmanship, and supervise organized athletic activities. Several years ago, the Athletic Association was reorganized and divided into the Executive and Managerial Boards. The Executive Board consists of the officers of the Association, the general manager, the class representatives, the Managerial Board representatives, the publicity chairman, and the social chairman. The Managerial Board, on the other hand, is composed of the managers of intramural and varsity sports. The A. A. has sponsored many social activities. The All-College Playday was one of these, and, of course, Posture Week again made us conscious of our posture through posters and the selection of the Posture Queen of Beaver.

Athletics, along with all other activities at school, have been affected by the war. No more lovely bus rides on our away games, with the spectators also getting a bus for themselves; instead, this season found us dashing madly for the Reading Station in the wee small hours of the morning. But... c'est la Guerre.
Led by Captain Dot Harris, our hockey eleven piled up a record of three wins as against two defeats and a tie during the 1943 season. The Scarlet and Gray opened their season in fine style as they downed a scrappy alumnae eleven by a 3-2 score. Then they went on to swamp Drexel by an 8-1 score. But misfortune lurked around the corner and showed up at River Field when Penn tripped Beaver by a 4-2 score in a very sloppy game, after the Jenkintown lassies had held a 2-0 half-time lead. But the sun rose high again on the Saturday morning that Beaver triumphed over Bryn Mawr by a 2-1 score, and no one felt badly on the afternoon that Beaver held a highly-touted Temple eleven to a 2-2 tie. Beaver ended their season by losing a difficult game to an alert Swarthmore eleven on the afternoon of Song Contest by a 2-0 score. That day Capt. Dot Harris, Betty Heyl, Nancy Hinlein, and Marian Mueller played their last hockey game for the Scarlet and Gray.

With a record of 2 victories and 2 defeats so far, our basketball sextet, under the leadership of Capt. Marian Mueller, has experienced a far more successful season in 1944 than last year.

They started the season off on the right foot when they swamped Rider College by a 49-17 score on ye olde home grounds, but experienced a little trouble in the next game and lost a thriller to Swarthmore by a 28-24 count. Their lucky star was with them again the next week when they traveled to Bryn Mawr and brought home the bacon to the tune of 26-24, with a thrill-packed finale that brought all the spectators to their feet. Due to a series of unfortunate events the Scarlet and Gray failed to come through in the final quarter of the game with Temple and came out on the short end of the 51-27 score. The team improves as the season continues and will undoubtedly give a good account of itself.

HOCKEY

Striving to continue last year’s record of no defeats, the golf team, with four of its regulars returning, has every reason to hope for another successful season this year.

Dottie Germain will still be with us to wield her mighty clubs in the No. 1 position. Other returning regulars are: Marian Mueller, Betsey Whitestone, and Ann Fields.

As yet the golf schedule has not been made out, but matches will probably be arranged with Penn, Swarthmore, Faculty, and some country club teams.

Varsity rifle completed a rather surprisingly full schedule this season. Mr. Linford Schober remained as coach, but, because of his defense job, was unable to teach the rifle classes. However, Mrs. Marion Martin Stoner, a former Beaver sharpshooter, taught the classes and was also assistant coach on Thursday evenings.

For the first time, and with great success, a rifle match was arranged with the faculty. Shoulder-to-shoulder matches were shot with Frankford Arsenal and the Glenside rifle clubs, and postal matches with George Washington University, Penn State, and Northwestern University. The annual Father-Daughter and College Championship matches were sponsored by the Beaver Rifle Club, which is affiliated with the National Rifle Association of America.

Under the leadership of Shirley Ketcham, Beaver’s cheerleaders aspired to new and better things this year. The other girls who made up the squad were: Eloise MacDonald, Ilia Cobb, Ginny Hopkins and Drene Thomas—all members of the Class of ’47.

Those of you who attended the various athletic events during the year saw what a pleasing and snappy appearance the girls made in their gray skirts and white sweaters with the scarlet emblems and saw how well they conducted their cheers.

The cheerleaders have added several new cheers to their repertoire this year and are hoping to make the cheerleading squad one of Beaver’s active organizations.

CHEERLEADERS
COMMANDEERS

The combined operations of all class officers bring about unity, cooperation, and discipline at Beaver. These girls are elected by their fellow classmates because they have faith in their ability to carry the class through a successful year. Though equipment and materials have been curtailed, the classes have managed to surmount these difficulties and have stayed within budgets, at the same time presenting a very successful program.

We came back as Juniors to find the hardest fight of all in our own Beaver. But backed by our inspirational leader, and most active Junior, Dr. Kistler, we won against heavy odds. The college had been saved and once again was normal... except in its social life, which was sorely tried by lack of manpower. Service stars began to appear on doors, V-mail arrived and was quickly answered. Casablanca, Guadalcanal, and Murmansk became more than obscure geographical spots. We held our Junior "Star-Spangled Prom" and it was great but the tuxedo was conspicuous by its absence. We shone in Song contest again, but the cup went to our big sisters. [Will we ever forget our little felt "J's"?]

In our Sophomore year we began to settle down but not into a slump. After a very showy and elaborate Song contest attempt in our freshman year (will we ever forget the Brillo?), we came back and won effortlessly in '41. But how colorless our victory seemed on Pearl Harbor day. Startled, frightened, we sat in a very still Chatterbox and listened painfully to the President as he stood in Congress and declared war against our oppressors, Germany and Japan. After that day readjustment was necessary in every activity. No men, no dances, and the frantic desire to help in any way we could. Our gang headed for U.S.O.'s, planned to work in factories the next summer, and wondered if they had any right to continue to enjoy the luxury of a liberal education. Our Sophomore year was one of doubt but of firm resolution.

FLEDGLINGS THEN

WE WERE FLEDGLINGS ONCE!

The Senior class, arriving at Beaver in the splendor of a world at peace, has in four years known the sudden shock and the waiting anguish which war inevitably brings. And yet we have since our first awkward freshman days been enthusiastic and successful in almost every field of endeavor.

Looking back on our first year, the awful confusion of registration, the excitement of our first collegiate blind dates with the boys of Valley Forge Military Academy, and all through that year the association with the number one Freshman of all times, Dr. Raymon Kistler, we proudly recall our first year at Beaver.

The purpose of the Association is to further the interests of Beaver College and its alumnae; to secure unity of action in continuing the well-being of the College; and to promote the cause of higher education for women.

Any student, who is a graduate of Beaver College or Beechwood School or who has attended either institution and received credit for at least one semester of college work, is eligible for membership in the Association.

Active membership is obtained by contributing to the alumnae drive for funds or by paying dues as the case may be. Active members receive the Alumnae Journal, published four times a year. The privilege of voting is granted only to contributing or "paid-up" dues members.

The College Board of Trustees includes two alumnae who are elected by active members.

A third is an honorary appointment.

Officers of the Association are President, Vice-President, Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, Treasurer, Editor-in-Chief and Business Manager of the Journal.

The Alumnae Council, which meets at college four times annually, is composed of the officers, committee heads, presidents of the regional clubs and class agents—who are the elected representatives of their respective classes. This group plans and directs the program of the Association.

The function of the Alumnae Office on campus is to maintain records and addresses of alumnae and to cooperate in promoting activities of the Association.

During normal times annual reunions (emphasizing the five-year plan) are held at college.
"THE FEW TO WHOM WE OWE SO MUCH"

The staff of the 1944 BEAVER LOG wishes to acknowledge the services of the following individuals who have been invaluable in the production of this yearbook:

Mr. Benton Spruance, our faculty advisor, who has given the staff a free rein to work out its ideas and who has given advice which we needed so desperately and, above all, who has designed a cover for our Log which we will all be proud of.

Mr. Thomas Barlow and Mr. Carl Seifert, who per usual were ever ready with advice and their expert photographic talents.

Miss Doris Fenton, who very willingly offered her services as literary critic.

Mr. Stambaugh and Mr. Hoeflick of Campus Publishing Company, who have struggled with the production problems we so blithely created, who offered us helpful hints and who tried to keep our troublesome budget as low as possible.

Miss “Doddy” Carlson for her unique drawings which we like so much.

The many Beaver students, faculty and friends who have cooperated in every way possible, buying LOGS, bringing us patrons, voting us money through clubs and organizations and giving us advertising tips.

AND—Mr. Joseph Feldman of Hollander-Feldman Studios, who did his best to please us.

SPECIALIZING IN SCHOOL AND COLLEGE ANNUALS

is the product of the efforts of a capable editor plus the interested cooperation of a seasoned specialist. To an editor, who wishes to make a success of his first publishing venture, specialization offers innumerable advantages that are most helpful—in fact—indispensable.

It is advisable to have a specialist handle your yearbook. Investigate the services of “Campus,” an organization whose entire business is college and school publications.
