THE ANNUAL STUDENT PUBLICATION

PRESENTED BY THE SENIOR CLASS

BEAVER COLLEGE

JENKINTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA
DEDICATION

WITH RESPECT AND DEEP CONFIDENCE WE, THE SENIOR CLASS, DEDICATE THIS "BEAVER LOG" TO DR. RAYMON M. KISTLER WHO, IN THE SPACE OF ONE BRIEF YEAR, HAS BECOME A MENTOR AND A FRIEND. WE ARE HAPPY FOR THE OPPORTUNITY WE HAVE HAD TO KNOW HIM. FOR HIS UNDERSTANDING OF OUR PROBLEMS, FOR HIS PATIENCE, SYMPATHY, AND FAIRNESS OF JUDGMENT WE ARE GRATETUL. THOSE GOOD THINGS WHICH HE HAS ALREADY BROUGHT TO BEAVER MAKE US PROUD TO PLACE IN HIM OUR FAITH FOR THE FUTURE COLLEGE, AND TO THIS END WE DEDICATE TO HIM OUR LOG.
This Log has been written that you who have yet to come our way up the hard steps of learning may know the toiling to be pleasant, made light with laughter and companionship. For the Seniors who have reached this pause, we have written this book, so that in future times they may stand here and with pleasant nostalgia look back down these steps which we so lately climbed together.

BEAVER COLLEGE ALMA MATER

WORDS BY
DR. LYNN H. HARRIS

MUSIC BY
BERNICE GOLDSMITH '38

1. Alma Mater dear, The years have o'er thee swept, But
2. Mother tried and true, We pledge our life to Thee; We

Stainless still through time and tide Thy splendor Thou hast kept. So Pledge Thee all our full-est faith; In loving service free.

Hail to Beaver, hail, we say! Fling high the scarlet and the green To the Keep ir- ra-di-al with truth finest in the land We lay ev-er-last-ing youth, hand.

On November 7, 1940, Dr. Raymon Kistler was inaugurated as the fifteenth president of Beaver College.

The inauguration of a new president is probably the most important thing that can happen to any college. With this person, whoever he may be, rests the future of the college, its whole career for many years. On the day of the inauguration, there was no trepidation in the hearts of us here at Beaver, no doubts for the future of this college. We went to the inauguration ceremony with gladness, full of confidence in this man who had accepted the task of guiding our Alma Mater.

The ceremony itself was impressive and solemn. One of the most memorable parts of it was the academic procession which wound its long way from the Towers down to Murphy Chapel. Between two lines of honor, formed by the Senior class, there came an unending procession of visiting dignitaries, representatives from colleges and honorary societies, the faculty of our college, and some of the alumnae. This was a stirring prelude to the impressive service which followed.

Dr. Kistler's brother, Dr. Harold C. Kistler, pronounced the invocation; the Seniors sang their class hymn for the first time; greetings from neighboring colleges were brought by Dr. Lily Ross Taylor, of Bryn Mawr College; the congratulations of the Christian Board of Education were extended by Dr. Paul Calvin Payne; Dr. William Lindsay Young delivered the inaugural address.

Then Dr. Allan Sutherland, speaking for the Board of Trustees, addressed his charge to the president, investing Dr. Kistler (Continued on Page 16)

"with the rights, dignities, and authority usually appertaining to such administrative office." The Charter of Beaver College was then delivered into Dr. Kistler's custody with the Board of Trustees' pledge of their "support and sympathy."

Dr. Kistler's acceptance of the charge delivered to him was simple, direct, and challenging. He pledged his best endeavor to the future of Beaver College, and with this message we recognized some small foreshadowing of the good things he would bring to the college.

Dr. Kistler came to Beaver with a background rich with experience. He has been a minister in the Presbyterian church for twenty-six years, having been ordained in 1915. In that time he has served in four churches: the Eleventh United Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; the South Side Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh; the First Presbyterian Church of Warren, Pennsylvania; and the Central Presbyterian Church, Rochester, New York, which pastorate he held when he accepted the presidency of the college.

A prominent part in the various departments of Presbyterian work has been taken by Dr. Kistler. First, he served as moderator of the Erie Presbytery. A few years later he was moderator of the Rochester Presbytery, and at the same time he was vice-moderator of the Synod of New York. He has served as president of the New York State Council of Churches, of the Rochester Federation of Churches, and of the Rochester Ministerial Association.

Dr. Kistler was a member of the General Council of the Presbyterian Church for six years, the maximum time allowed for service in that group. During the time he served on the administrative committee of the Council and also headed several other committees. Dr. Kistler's varied activities also include work in civic, state, and nation-wide affairs. This year he is listed in "Who's Who in America."

Dr. Kistler was graduated from Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pennsylvania, in 1912, receiving a Bachelor of Arts degree. Then he attended the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary for three years, after which he was ordained. In 1928, Westminster College granted him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity, and in 1937 Beaver bestowed upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

We students of Beaver have not found it difficult to accept Dr. Kistler as president. He accepted us, and we have had to do very little to respond. To speak figuratively, Dr. Kistler sat himself down in our midst and became one of us. At Song Contest, he marched at the head of the Freshman Class and threw away his green cap with the rest of the new students; Wednesday afternoons he emerges from the "sanctum sanctorum" of his office and has a cup of tea with us; practically every day he descends to the Chatterbox for the refreshment of a chocolate "coke."

He and Mrs. Kistler have extended the hospitality of their home to us. Very early in the year they held a reception in their home. We were welcomed as members of the family; we were made to feel at home. On that evening the Kistlers became the uncontested heads of the Beaver family.

This "family feeling" has come to be part of Beaver in the past year, fostered by the warm and gracious personality of the president and by his understanding of all of us. He has listened patiently to our problems, our questions. He gives us a chance to express our ideas, and after having heard us, he gives wise judgment and careful counsel.

Almost a full college year has passed since Beaver settled down under the guidance of this new president. In this year we have cast off the feeling of constraint which comes with any new regime; we have forgotten the attitude of caution with which we watched the president during his first few weeks. We no longer refer to Dr. Kistler as "the new president"; he is now "our president," and we know it with the comfortable feeling of an established friendship founded on understanding, assurance, and faith. To us individually and to the college as a whole, Dr. Kistler has brought many good things. His first year with us indicates that Beaver has entered a new and brighter era under his vibrant leadership.

On to $5000! With this as its watchword, the alumnae association began on January 1 its second annual campaign, which will close with the annual reunion on June 7.

This is not a large goal, surely, nor do we expect it to be our largest, but when we consider the size and activities of the association two years ago, this goal is in itself an acknowledgment of growth.

The alumnae association began its program of reorganization and expansion in June 1939, when Mrs. Richard P. Emery (Eleanor McKinnon '35), now serving her second term, was first elected president.

The alumnae council was first formed under her direction. The council, which meets three to four times a year at the college, is the first constructive step ever taken to integrate the ideas and activities of all the alumnae groups of Beaver College. Its members are: the officers of the association, the presidents of each club or their representatives, an agent from each class, and various committee heads appointed by the president.

The constitution has been revised and rewritten to make provision for the further growth and activities of the association.

The official organ of the association is the "Alumnae Journal," now issued four times annually. Until June, 1939, the magazine was issued only once a year.

This year the alumnae association accomplished a long cherished goal; two alumnae nominated by the alumnae now sit as regular members of the Board of Trustees of the college.

Two alumnae also sit on the committee on college policy, on which are also represented the faculty, the trustees, and the student body.

Last October, the alumnae council fixed an alumnae house on campus as a definite goal. The Board of Trustees has already granted the association the ground upon which this house may be built. After the running expenses of the association for the coming year have been budgeted, it is planned to put aside part of the remainder of the campaign proceeds as the beginning of a building fund.

A third portion of the campaign proceeds will be used for the direct benefit of the college, in a manner yet to be decided.

The association has also pledged its aid in the program for high caliber student enrollment in next year's freshman class.

Up to September 1940, the individual alumnae, through last year's campaign and the regional clubs, had contributed $1150 to the Beaver Foundation. The Blanche T. Tone Student Loan Fund, also a part of the Beaver Foundation, is another alumnae contribution to Beaver College. Founded in memory of Blanche T. Tone, by her husband, this fund has been added to annually by the Pittsburgh Club, of which she was a member, and now stands at $2728.10.

There are 3597 living alumnae of Beaver college; only a little more than one-sixth of these are now paid members of the association. Paid membership has increased 150 per cent in the past two years, however; this itself is an indication of the renewed interest occasioned by the new association program, and gives promise of increased support in the future.

The twelve regional clubs operate in the vicinities of Albany, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Connecticut Valley, Lehigh Valley, New York, Northern New Jersey, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Reading, and Trenton. Their membership rolls embrace less than one-third of the total alumnae.

The formation of new regional clubs is, however, a part of the expansion program of the association.

We who are interested alumnae believe that the association, like the college itself, stands on the brink of a new era—an era which will reveal the alumnae as true assets of the college.

As is true in any new or reorganized group, there is much to be done, and every welcome is extended to new members, young members, and willing workers.

This auxiliary organization of the college is fairly young, but it operates as though it had been in existence from time immemorial. It was begun only a few years ago by a small group of mothers who felt that such an organization could contribute a great deal to the life of the college. It has grown to great proportions.

Mothers of any Beaver students, past or present, may join the association, which was established to broaden fellowship among the mothers and to aid students financially who would not otherwise be able to attend Beaver. Incidentally, the association's most distinguished member is Dr. Raymon Kistler, our favorite president.

Homesick freshmen are no more, since now each has a Patron Mother, a member of the association who lives nearby, to comfort her in times of stress. A Saturday night party for new students held at the beginning of the year aided further in this purpose.

The most important aim of the association is to raise a scholarship fund for a Beaver student to continue her studies after graduation. Mrs. Lillian McNutt conceived and executed the idea of sending to each member a birthday bag in which she was to put pennies to equal the number of her years. This was most profitable, as was the Fashion Show and Tea headed by Mrs. G. Stanley Magargal.

Proving that the association could aid in various ways, Mrs. Slotter, the president, distinguished herself in the faculty play in the role of Old Judas.

Wonderful, isn't it, to have an organization which benefits the students in many ways but doesn't cause them extra work during exams, or give them too many points!
and now we're SENIORS
Herein the Class of 1941 reviews its long and varied history and attempts to record all those things which it will wish to remember long after exams and term papers have been forgotten.

Freshman year is probably the same for every class. It is a series of new experiences to which we have to become adjusted, individually and as a group. It is confusing; it is exciting; it is fun. Our memories of the first few weeks are a maze of meetings, picnics, placement exams, watermelon feasts, and free movies. There were Big Sisters and baby parties and green caps. There were classes and professors and books, and so many people to know. And suddenly we knew almost everybody; the classes were settled, and the professors became familiar to us, and we were part of the college.

The Halloween party was our first attempt as a class. We can’t remember much about it, except Georgie Magargal being a charming chairman in her Norwegian costume, and the wonderful spook house on the upper floor of Taylor Hall. It was a great success, as freshman parties usually are, and we were flushed with pride at our first triumph.

Then we proceeded in the regular pattern of freshman classes. We studied (freshmen always do), and we stayed up late at night discussing life and people. Our first class officers were elected—Madge Kimble, president; Eileen McCauley, vice-president; Eleanor Dutton, secretary; and Georgie Magargal, treasurer.

H. Dearden, president; M. Lukens, vice-president; Rue, treasurer; Smith, secretary; Naughrath, Snyder, Putnam, Konowitch, committee chairmen.
We decorated the dorms at Christmas; vacations came and went. Soon our first semester was done.

By February we were looking forward to Song Contest (yes, it was held in the spring that year), and May Day. It seems that the special genius of the class of '41 was thinking up unusual costumes for Song Contest. We started to amaze the public that first year when we marched in, nearly 200 strong, in green and white dwarf costumes, singing "Heigho, heigho!" with the lusty spirit of freshmen. We've been amazing them ever since. The dwarf costumes were effective, to say nothing of the music and the leading. With Helen Edward's direction, Georgie's words, and Mary Alice Lippincott's music we couldn't help but get ourselves an honorable mention to tuck proudly away into the annals of the class.

And our first May Day was exciting, too. It was the Irish one; we were peasants and pagan priests and Laurel Chain, and we danced and played and learned to love the tradition of Beaver May Days.

So, with the coming of June ended our first year at Beaver, and each of us left for vacation exultant that she was now an upperclassman, and probably singing,

"Send your girl to Beaver,
She'll have lots of fun,
Sing the Class of '41!"

There were freshmen for us to haze and tease and big-sister. But we discovered that the Sophomores are generally overlooked. Freshmen are important because they are new; juniors have Prom; and seniors are always—we'll, Seniors. Unfortunately, the whole thing got us down, and we went under in the usual Sophomore Slump. Song Contest, held in the fall, crept up on us unexpectedly. Wildly we rushed around trying to get things in shape. We had an all day rehearsal in Taylor Chapel, the day before Song Contest. Helen Edwards cut all her classes, and we tore into the chapel whenever we had free time and practiced frantically. Our special costuming genius flared up again; we startled the spectators by appearing as autumn sprites with real autumn leaves sprinkled down the fronts of our yellow sweaters, and yellow chrysanthemums in our hair. What would they have done if we had war-whooped in as Indians wrapped in blankets, wearing feathers in our hair? We almost did—remember?

By Christmas time we got organized again, and January found us producing the prize-winning play in Play Contest—"The Marriage Proposal," directed by Ethel Gaynor. Lucia Willoughby won the prize for the best actress, and the Sophomores regained their pride and started on the upward way again. The Slump was left behind.

Prom was already foremost in our minds. We conscientiously took over the Sunday-morning breakfast serving, and we planned a Sophomore Tag Day, with entertainment plus! We made history, money for Prom, and fun for everybody, all in one evening. Dottie Lunine headed the committee. Dottie’s Dizzie Ditties and Helen Dearden’s expert “M.C.-ing,” plus the super floor show brought us well on the way to a wonderful Prom.

Junior Prom colors our third-year memories, but we still had time to do other exciting things. Song Contest found us really pepped up. We were somewhat subdued as to costume, allowing ourselves only the lolly of silly, bright, red hats. But our spirit was high, and we worked hard. Helen Dearden got us up in the wee small hours of the morning to practice. We marched and sang and sang and marched till we were blue in the faces, and we nearly got the prize. The honorable mention was almost as good.

Despite the tremendous effort we were putting forth for Prom, under Sue Samter’s direction, we still had time to accept with grace another first prize in Play Contest. Margie Lutz’s direction of “Poor Magdalen” was superb; Alda Wolff covered herself and the class with glory by winning first acting honors. Even though all of this meant much to us, we accepted it in a hurry, for Prom was coming on apace and we had to be ready.

And, finally, February 23 arrived! The Junior dinner, and the Junior promenade, and the Junior dance to “All the Things You Are” were the perfect fulfillment of dreams we had cherished from our freshman year. As for the gym and the decorations, the Dutch theme was carried out to perfection. There were piles of tulips and wonderful scenery and, marvel of marvels, a windmill with arms that really moved. The week-end was a triumph for us; how quickly it ended!

After Prom, the year flew by. There was the Ring Breakfast which made us the proud owners of our Beaver rings. And then May Day again—our last “big” one. Very soon it was June. We watched our favorite upperclassmen graduate, and we were officially Seniors!

When we returned for our last year we were probably surprised that we really felt no different in the exalted position of seniors. Our newly acquired dignity became manifest for the first time at the inauguration of Dr. Kistler as president. We froze that day, but we froze gloriously. It is a rare privilege for a class to form a guard of honor for a new president. Our caps and gowns whipped about us in the autumn wind, but we smiled bravely and probably felt like seniors for the first time.

After the inauguration, events came too swiftly to suit us. Our last Song Contest found us determined to win. We had all the necessary equipment—Helen Dearden to lead, and songs by Georgie and Mary Alice and Mary McKillip and Dottie Lunine (in conjunction with John Phillip Sousa). We even allowed a final flair of the old genius for costumes, and we appeared in smart red jumpers and white shirts. We sang as we have never sung before, and probably never will again. And we won—oh, happy day! "Coke" out of that silver cup tasted like nectar, and the din of the chapel bell was music to our ears.

Then there was the Senior-Faculty Breakfast, and our last Christmas Carol sing and our last pajama party. Every event had a special significance because it was our "last."

The year has slipped around quickly. We have danced at our last Beaver Junior Prom; we have participated in our last Easter vespers. We have held our last dance open to the school, the Senior Tea Dance. May Day has passed. And now there is only Senior Week and Commencement, and the class of 1941 will be alumnae.

We have not presumed to be a startlingly unusual class. We have gone our merry way through these four years, having fun and contributing to the life of the college as we went. We know that as a class we have had many faults and made many mistakes, but, looking back over the four years we have spent together, we see our many triumphs and rejoice that Beaver will have reason to remember the class of 41. This year alone has brought the institution of the Arts and Sciences Forum and the Faculty-Student Conference, both of which have been nurtured by members of our class. If our dreams for the growth of Beaver have been brought to even some small reality by our endeavors, we are grateful, and we know that "having fun" has not been our only achievement.
Oh, Fa-ther God, our jour-ney here is end-ing; Thy

The Faculty-Student Committee on Extra-Curricular Activities was instituted last year as an answer to faculty and student desire to revitalize extra-curricular activities on campus. The student representatives suggested the elimination of departmental clubs on the grounds that they were not functioning to the satisfaction of all concerned. When this suggestion was put to student vote the student committee was proved representative of general student sentiment and departmental clubs were eliminated.

The question was then, "What shall replace these outworn extra-curricular activities?" After much cooperative effort of the joint committee, the plan and constitution of the Forum of Arts and Sciences was formed. Realizing that the fault of the former departmental clubs lay in the fact that they were too narrow in purpose, the committee wrote the following as the preamble and purpose of the Forum:

"The students and faculty of Beaver College, believing that a need exists for better integration of all activities in the college life, do hereby organize an association which may aid in the fulfillment of that need.

"The purpose of this association shall be to coordinate an activities program for Beaver College in order to provide for the college and the community a distinguished and balanced program of entertainment; and for the student body, well-rounded and stimulating possibilities for creative effort, and for personal activity in every field."

The Forum was organized into an executive board and five interest groups, namely: (1) Music and Fine Arts, (2) Science, (3) World Affairs, (4) Literature and Drama, (5) Vocational Interests. This board aims to carry out the purpose of the Forum.

This year, armed with vision and the Forum constitution, the committee set out to convince the student body of the far-reaching value of this new extra-curricular plan. Naturally, the newness of the plan caused many questions to be raised, but, on March fifth, the constitution of the Forum of Arts and Sciences was adopted by the Student Government Association, with the provision that amendments would be made in the future.

Next year the Student-Faculty Committee on Extra-Curricular Activities will continue to function as an advisory board to the newly installed officers of the Forum. It will also continue its prosaic duty of scheduling meetings and program dates for extra-curricular activities. Organizations are asked to petition for such dates to the committee in May, and, from the petitions, a program of weekly events is made and posted for the next year.

It is hoped that the spirit of cooperation within the Extra-Curricular Committee will be inherited by its brain child, the Forum, which seems destined to great things under the active participation of every student of Beaver.
STUDENT GOVERNMENT

To say that "variety is the spice of life" would be suggesting quite feebly the various and sundry duties cherished by our eminent Student Council. The council doesn't seclude itself behind closed doors every Monday night for a three hour session of entertainment. In order to do justice to what actually goes on in that most dignified of atmospheres, may we suggest that you by some miraculous transformation become a mere spot on the floor or turn into a locker. You'll leave feeling a bit dizzy, granted, but you'll be wiser and more appreciative individual.

Why more Student Council members aren't white-haired is a problem for scientific research. In the first place, this omnipotent, omniscient group formulates rules and regulations for your welfare and peace of mind, beloved fellow students, often long after you're safely tucked in for the night and far remote from the bitter realities of this world. In fact, the council has sometimes spent hours, days, or weeks cultivating one wee, insignificant act of legislation, which you have cruelly destroyed by one stroke of your little hatchets. However, the council is somehow able to smile and carry on.

Too true to some of us, this slave-driven group is also granted certain judiciary powers. Didn't someone once say, "Crime does not pay," or something to that effect? Alas, too many students fail to realize the disheartening effect the criminal acts of Beaver students have upon the Student Council members. If there ever comes a time in the life of a council member when she hangs her head in utter dejection and mumbles the fatal words, "I can't go on," it's when the weighty decision of a penalty for Susie's or Jane's misdemeanor rests upon her already weary shoulders.

Since this memorable college year has almost completed its weary but exciting course, it is conceded that a word of praise can do our capable Student Council no harm. We admire you, Student Council, for having the courage of our convictions.
NOMINATING COMMITTEE

It used to seem to us that everybody belonged to this committee at some time in her Beaver career. The amendments which have been passed in the last year or two fixing the number of members of the committee have dispelled our mistaken notions; the efficiency with which the committee works has proved their worth.

Being uninquisitive, we have never ferreted out the mysteries of the workings of this illustrious body. We, the uninitiated, know that whenever there is an election, this committee is responsible for it. Every time candidates are presented, every time ballots are distributed, every time results are announced, we feel the power and the glory of this group.

It spends hours in the A. A. room with little notebooks and pencils, discussing and checking and eliminating, deciding the fate of many and the fame of a chosen few. It is probably the most slandered and unrecognized group of persons in this institution. Knowing none of the problems of nominating anybody for anything, we disagree with practically everything it does. We give the committee credit for having no sense; we grumble over candidates and modes of election; but we vote, and wind up by really being pleased with the results.

The policy, instituted this year, of allowing us to express our choices for candidates by preferential ballot is an excellent one, for which we congratulate the committee. It proves that it is democratic, open to suggestions, and free from the personal prejudice which tradition and rumor has assigned to it, lol these many years. The committee will go on and on as long as ever there are nominations and elections, and here's to it—long may it wave!
HONOR COUNCIL

Functioning for the maintenance of high ideals of honor in all things, the honor council has proceeded quietly and with dignity through the year. With the council this year has come a broader conception of personal honor, and a clearer recognition of the place of an honor system among college students.

The council, continuing the rather revolutionary work of the past few years, has adopted the attitude that college students are essentially honest, an attitude which many of us have felt to be necessary to the maintenance of personal honor. A system of self-reporting, which we now have, is the logical outcome of such an attitude.

In order to extend the scope of personal honor from academic work to every phase of a student's life, the council has injected self-reporting into our social life, too. So far this movement seems to have stopped with the white blanks for reporting lateness, but at least it is a step toward complete student responsibility.

Two years ago the Honor book was placed upon the communion table in Taylor Chapel. It is a constant reminder to us of honor, with its golden motto, "Honore Stamus." It also signifies the strivings of the honor council to preserve the ideals of personal honor which have been instilled in us.
By dint of much rushing and shushing and frenzied hair-tearing, the members of Dorm Council attempt to preserve the sanctity and holy atmosphere of quiet hour, which difficult feat would seem to occupy the whole of their time. It doesn't.

We remember the Tuesday night pre-supper meetings when they have enough time to sit in awful council and dole out dire penalties to non-bed-makers and non-room-cleaners, whose ranks are legion. Besides this, they manage to collect however much they get for unmade beds, to find an abundance of freshman caps with which to shame into tidiness all untidy upperclassmen, and to perform bravely a thousand and one nasty little duties in the face of adverse public opinion—like maintaining quiet hour (we mentioned that before).

The little game of playing proctor, familiar to most of us, has its source and being in the annals of the Dorm Council. Those diabolic plots designed to give all of us insomnia,—fire drills,—seem to be under the management of this group in conjunction with the Student Council. We realize with difficulty that they (the fire drills) are necessary evils, but we cannot see the rightness of them at 1:30 A.M. when we are roused out of the sound sleep we have just managed to fall into.

All in all, we see that the Dormitory Council has a neat little job cut out for it—(p. 50 in the Handbook). Maintaining house government, keeping "dormitories quiet, neat, and attractive," and being "responsible for the general decorum of students on campus" is no trivial responsibility. We stand in silent admiration for this particular council, which manages to accomplish its purpose with efficiency—even to maintaining quiet hour.
Being a day student has always been considered a sort of sad plight at Beaver. "The day students are a nice bunch of kids, when you get to know them," but it used to take almost four years for anyone to really get to know them.

The Day Students' Council exists to form a connecting link between the day students and the resident group. This year, more than any other, the day students have become integrated into the life of the college.

"Hazy, the Harried Day Student" was introduced to us dwellers in Beaver Hall at the Christmas pajama party. Hers was a sorry lot, but the very fact that she appeared at the party was an indication that her troubles were very nearly over.

The annual Day Students' Dance in December is a big occasion. This year we were gently but firmly bullied into lending our precious pandas and teddy bears to help the committee, under Sue Samter's direction, carry out their theme. When the night of the dance arrived, we found that the circus had come to Beaver, and we had ourselves a wonderful time under the Big Top.

With the money from the dance, the day students decided to put a stained glass window in Murphy Chapel. Mr. Hathaway has designed it.

Also with this cause in mind, a big cake sale was held in March. Day students' mothers sent the most luscious cakes, cookies, and candies. Most of us allowed our Lenten resolutions and calorie-countings to go with the wind.

Looking back over the whole year, we feel sure that the day students have finally come into their own.
POINT COMMITTEE

Every organization must have a statistical department to keep records of what is going on in that organization. So Beaver has its Point Committee, designed to keep track of the various activities of each student.

Since girls come to college primarily to receive an education, they must devote most of their time to their academic work and not to extra-curricular activities. The Point Committee keeps a record of all the activities in which each girl participates and sees that no one accumulates more than eleven points. Each office held by any student has a certain number of points attached to it, the office of Student Government president having the maximum number of eleven points.

There are three members on the Point Committee, a senior chairman, a junior representative and a sophomore representative. The fate of every girl’s college life lies in this committee’s hands, for it determines the eligibility of all nominees for offices. If a nominee has below a 1.25 average, she is automatically out of the running, and if she has an excess of eleven points, she must drop some activity.

One never hears much about the Point Committee except during spring elections when its members are among the busiest people on campus. But they are always working, silently, it is true, but effectively.

SOCIAL COMMITTEE

Chocolate cookies! Raspberry sherbert! Peanuts—smuggled out in a napkin! Motto-hearts tooted off by the handfuls. Sounds like a series of teas, doesn’t it? It is.

All these and lots more, too, are lovingly dished out to us hungry students (and faculty, too)—thus does the Social Committee fulfill its two-fold purpose to be of service and to give pleasure, or service and a smile.

With financial support from the SGA and moral support from the Dean of Students, the Social Committee keeps busy all the year through. Every other Wednesday or so there’s a tea in the drawing room, at which time various ones of us preside graciously over the teapots or run back and forth with cups and more cups, and mouths full of cookies. Generally, Jeanie Wallace and a faithful few are left with the crumbs and the silver spoons to count, and the rest of us leave quietly with full tummies and contented hearts.

After-dinner coffees (at which everybody takes a cup in order to have some nuts), and special teas are also given with smiling service by the Social Committee. Under the latter category comes the Deans’ tea and the tea for new faculty and personnel.

Not-to-be-forgotten are the traditions of the watermelon feast during Freshman week, the dorm pajama parties at Christmas time, and the almost-too-early in the morning Easter Egg hunt. Refreshments are served by this committee at the party for the Dormitory Council, at receptions for visiting glee clubs, and at the reception following Inauguration or Move-up Night—(could we forget pink sherbert and vanilla ice cream and cookies and punch?).

This is our favorite among all committees. The others take care of our bed-making and our elections and our extra-curricular activities, but this one remembers our appetites—bless ‘em! A most important spoke in an important wheel, the Social Committee keeps us all happy with its smooth-running service, and our favorite cookies.
RELIGIOUS LIFE
Fired with zeal and enthusiasm and purpose, the Y.W.C.A. is leaving behind it a long line of new institutions, plus a new constitution, the result of Monday night mass meetings and much hashing over by the Cabinet.

The Monday night mass meetings, to which the masses noticeably never flocked, despite Ginny Weaver’s eloquent pleas, should be mentioned. Herein the faithful sat in close conclave and conceived toy libraries and Bundles for Britain. Hence our Wednesday afternoons are industriously and cheerfully given over to bandage rolling, and those of us who never knew how are initiated into the mysteries of knitting six-inch squares and six-yard scarves.

Ginny’s brain child, the Jenkintown toy library, is a unique innovation. Under the direction of Janet Cooper, toys are remodeled by skillful Beaverites; then they are catalogued and distributed to the children in the manner of a circulating library.

The Y.W.C.A. has not been content with keeping its work in the college itself. For the past few years it has been spreading its activities to the surrounding community. This year girls have done work in settlement houses in Philadelphia; they have taught Sunday School; they have helped with the Abington Y.M.C.A. work.

The usual campus activities were carried on. Freshman Week, complete with its Big Sister-Little Sister activities, was nicely concluded with the annual tea and Vesper Service in Grey Towers. The candlelight installation service for new members was held following the membership drive; Thanksgiving Baskets were distributed as usual. For a few days in November, the organization sponsored the World Student Service Fund drive.

Religious Emphasis Week found Dr. Skinner back with us again. He seems to have become a permanent feature of this particular activity, and for his helpful presence we are grateful.

The Christmas season is a busy time for the Y.W.C.A. There are scrapbooks to be made and dolls to dress, and the need for good cheer is everywhere. With Dorothy Kistler as the director, the scrapbooks were made and the dolls got clothed. At the Christmas party a number of needy little children were gathered together, and Harriet Rosenbaum made a jolly Santa Claus to pass the presents around.

Our own Christmas Carol service, held around the big Christmas tree on the front lawn was even more impressive than usual this year. Perhaps it is because we are seniors, but we thought that the whole thing had a dignity and beauty that it has not had in former years. Afterwards we piled into a bus and serenaded at several places, including Dr. Kistler's home.

Perhaps the most important work of the year was the revision of the constitution. The Cabinet feels sure that the newly revised constitution will aid future Y.W.C.A. cabinets to function efficiently and effectively. It will help the organization to broaden its scope and will present an opportunity for every member to work.

Some of the Cabinet members are now hard at work on a Y.W.C.A. handbook which will be published and distributed next year.

The Cabinet has probably put in more hours per week this year than ever before, but the Beaver Y.W.C.A. has taken many steps forward "following the gleam."
LEAGUE OF EVANGELICAL STUDENTS

Part of a national organization, the League of Evangelical Students has been in existence on this campus for several years. As the result of reorganization and strong leadership, the League has become strengthened in numbers and spirit in the past five years.

The League exists for the purpose of increasing our knowledge of Christ and of bringing greater fellowship with Him through prayer and Bible study. League meetings are held once a week, and occasionally an evening meeting is held which is open to the college.

The fellowship provided by the League has proved to be of great spiritual value to its members.
NEWMAN CLUB

The Newman Club of Beaver is one chapter of a national organization which has made its influence felt on many campuses throughout the country. A Catholic organization, the club is named for the great educator, Cardinal John Henry Newman.

The club meets twice a month, and, under the direction of Dr. Anthony Flynn, it discusses world and national affairs as well as things of spiritual nature. This year one open meeting was held to which all the students of the college were invited. Through these meetings the club carries out its threefold purpose of meeting the religious, educational, and social needs of its members.

AID PROGRAM

Feeling a definite need for serious effort on the part of us Beaver girls to aid in some way in the present world emergency, a faculty-student committee was formed to consider the problem. The idea for such activity was born no doubt after the draft deprived us of dates. We felt that there should be more for us to do than write countless letters to Fort Dix and points South and West!

The committee pondered long and hard, and they finally evolved a program whereby we could come to a better understanding of the present situation and also render some small service. Beaverites wanted to know more about the European situation, even if only to impress their dates with the acquired knowledge; and they wanted to help the countless needy in some practical way.

The program was separated into three divisions—that which would help us to understand world affairs, that which would permit us to aid actively with the service of knitting and bandage rolling, and that which would put our financial aid to the best possible use by means of a Community Chest.

The Y.W.C.A. had already established a sort of Red Cross unit on campus, and many of us had been struggling with wristlets, sweaters, socks, and scarves for weeks on end. With the introduction of this program, bandage rolling became part of the activity and was under the direction of the Y.W.C.A. Our precious pig banks were emptied to meet the goal of one thousand dollars necessary to put into operation Beaver's Community Chest, the funds from which would be used as a reservoir for the countless demands for help which would flood us. International Emphasis Week was established in March and many speakers came to help us increase our understanding of world events.

Plans are still developing for further additions to this program. Beaver has started to do its part.
THE BEAVER LOG

Editing a yearbook is fun in an insane sort of way. There’s really nothing sane about the whole business, or maybe it’s just our lack of organizing ability which makes it all so crazy.

Long ago, last June or some time, we made a lot of resolutions about dates of publication, methods of obtaining material on time, and ways to make money. It is very good that people are allowed to dream once in a while, but it is very sad that disillusionment must lift its ugly head. We are sorry to have encountered our tragedy so early in a beautiful life. Publication dates have been changed so often that we don’t even think about it any more. As we write, we wonder if it would be wise to add a touch of blue to the cover so you will think the book is a present when you get it on the Fourth of July—or maybe a touch of green for a Merry Christmas. As for getting material, well, it comes when it comes; and money! it just doesn’t come. You have noticed that we are reduced to begging for enough cold cash to keep us out of jail.

Despite our many small tragedies and many big disappointments, we find ourselves with the finished book in our hands and see it in yours. And it still has some dreams intact in it. We take great pride in the fact that we changed the size of the book. It was a radical move, but things have to be stirred up once in a while to keep us out of a rut, and who were we to keep things calm.

And as for the literary style, which is another dream—we wrote the book for you. We wanted you to read it, to find in it all the casual things-of-the-moment which you like to remember about college.

This, then, has been our dream—our nightmare. To future “Log” staffs we bequeath the safe in the Publications Office (to which we finally got the combination; thank you, Dr. Tutwiler), the filing cabinet and empty folders in same office, and the dreams which we were unable to fulfill. Even “Beaver Logs” can be built of dreams, with some mental strain on the side.

Editing the "Beaver News," says the staff, is more insane than editing the "Log." For, continues the staff, we are a diffused body—diffused because it's impossible to meet at the same time the editor in the Chatterbox, the associate editor in Boston, the managing editor in the publications office (the only person who stays where she belongs), the feature editor in Nassau, and the news editor at any point west.

But several times during the year the staff did manage to round up twenty-five or thirty people, to extract the faculty adviser from the unknown Main Line, and to hold a council of peace and war. And what did they do? Well, they put out a few issues of the "News."

That was in October. But along came November and the editor got into a big political fight with the rest of the editorial board. In an effort to settle the dispute amicably, the staff of the "Beaver News" then sponsored a political rally on campus. It was a riotous affair, but serious enough to be labelled "educational" by those who should know. Before the shouting and the tumult faded and died from the halls, the "News" was back again, holding a mock presidential election.

All this activity took up a lot of front-page space which might of necessity have been left blank; it was "news" for which the staff gratefully thanked itself.

In the middle of December (awful month) came the dread slump which every editor fears. The editorials fall to pieces because they had been so "effective" that there was nothing more to gripe about. So the board cooked up the Faculty-Student Conference. The conference was only a tiny idea at first, but it grew tremendously, nurtured and cared for in the tender hearts of the staff. It shortly became an organized body and has been good for news in every subsequent issue.

Besides all this, the newspaper itself appeared regularly, giving to the student body a larger number of issues than has previously been published.

The staff of the "Beaver News" wishes to record permanently that it has enjoyed the active cooperation of the administration, of the faculty members, and of the student body. Without the valuable assistance of these groups and of the major organizations of the college, the "Beaver News" could not have been published.
BEAVER REVIEW

Editing the "Log" or the "News" is fun, but editing the "Review" is—well! Urged on by general world increase of production and the heckling of a member of the faculty or two, the "Beaver Review" began a radical year by doubling the number of issues published and effecting, they hope, a similar increase in quality of material.

It was evidently hectic enough to publish the "Review" only four times a year as previously; this year the staff was urged to fever pitch in order to make sure that the presses rolled once a month. The meetings on the floor in people's living rooms became more heated than ever. (In case you didn't know, that's how this literary publication is evolved. The staff sits on the floor and reads and discusses and thinks up new ideas—and eats!)

"Came the revolution" (increasing the number of issues was only the initial step), and the editor and her staff went right ahead revolutionizing. Continuing in the aforementioned radical vein, they encouraged students to submit articles of timely as well as literary interest. Faculty contributions were solicited (not money), and an article by one of our professors appeared in every issue. The make-up of the magazine underwent certain changes—decrease in size, use of glossy paper to make possible the reproduction of photographs. And the "Review" conducted a photographic contest, to top it all.

The "Review" has had a busy year getting itself into the tenor of this high-speed production. An outstanding new feature was the change in the lecture system. The lecture series was opened to the general public on a season ticket basis, and thus it was possible to increase the number of lectures and the variety of subjects represented.

The Staff: Georgiana Magargal, editor-in-chief; Mildred Howell, business manager; Marion Moelein, assistant business manager; Dorothy Houstan, art editor; and associate editors Aune Allen, Virginia Fager, Joan Hinlein, Tanya Jacobs, Anice Kendall, M. Jacqueline Palmer, Elaine Penn, and Joan Thurin.
The Handbook is to Beaver as Emily Post's "Etiquette Book" is to society, or Robert's "Rules of Order" to parliamentarians. Since it is practically a combination of both, familiarity with the contents of the little grey and red book is a prerequisite to anything here at Beaver.

When we are freshmen we read it through once and, probably, only once. After that, we are concerned with scanning frequently the pages from which Mrs. Zurbuchen is most likely to quote at opportune moments and memorizing the rules about week-ends and 10:30 permissions.

The staff of the Handbook, realizing that there is not much to be done with rules, regulations, and constitutions, attempts to present the material in as concise and readable a manner as possible. The arrangement of the facts is such that we are able to find in a hurry just what we are looking for, and there are many times when we are grateful for this.

Certainly the Freshmen use the Handbook more than the rest of us. By the time we have attained the high and mighty position of seniors, we are supposed to know what it's all about. We hope the freshmen never realize, until they are seniors, how often we have to look things up in the little book before we pass it on to them with that air of superior knowledge.
Organized last year by Elsie Babcock, the Press Bureau is an auxiliary to the active publicity department which is under the direction of Mr. Thomas Barlow. The organization is unique as a student news bureau in that no news assignments are given to the reporters and no deadline is set. The aim of the Bureau is to send out news of the students and of the college while it is still of interest to outside papers. The reporters have excellent practice in hunting out news, for getting the stories is entirely their own responsibility.

When something really exciting is discovered, like the art exhibit for the March of Dimes which Swiss and Pud had, Mr. Barlow takes pictures of the event, and the story is sent to Philadelphia, New York, and local papers—with the pictures. In addition to these news stories, social items about individuals are sent to the hometown papers, and the folks at home are able to find out what Janie is doing at college. The editorial secretary, Virginia Fager, is assisted in this work by Hedwig Karr, the social editor.

The Press Bureau has managed to carve its own private little niche for itself in the one year it has been in existence, and it does a good job of keeping Beaver and the Beaverites in the public eye.
HONORS
Alpha Kappa Alpha is national honorary fraternity in philosophy which is growing rapidly, developing chapters on campuses all over the East. Epsilon chapter, the Beaver group, is only three years old.

Although they do not attempt to be intellectually or philosophically superior, the members of Alpha Kappa Alpha nevertheless must have a curiosity for and interest in philosophical problems. The chapter meetings are held for discussion of these problems and are entirely flexible, depending upon the interests and inclinations of the members.

Pledges are elected in the fall of the year; this year the initiation was held in January at Grey Towers.

On April 25, Epsilon members participated in the annual convention of the organization held in Allentown, Pennsylvania. Prominent speakers were heard; discussion of philosophic questions was held; the initiation of another new chapter took place.

This year the Beaver chapter was especially honored in that its president, Martha Kravec, was editor of “The Philosoph,” the publication of the national organization.
Lambda Delta Alpha is the senior honor society, introduced in 1933 with a two-fold purpose: to stimulate academic endeavor, and to encourage an appreciative attitude toward high scholarship. To attain membership in the society is to receive the highest scholastic honor given at Beaver.

This year seven members of the Senior class were inducted into membership in this society. Helen Bierlin, Janet Miller, Jean Skoglund, Margaret Smith, Phyllis Swan, Jean Wallace, and Yetta Zeitlin were chosen for this honor and were initiated on the evening of March 15, at which time several alumnae members of the society were present.

It is traditional for the recipient of the Silver Trowel, presented to the junior who has maintained the highest scholastic average for her three years of college work, to become permanent secretary of the organization for the Senior year. Two girls tied for the Silver Trowel award last year. Therefore, both of these girls will serve in the capacity of secretary. They are Janet Miller and Yetta Zeitlin.

The other members are selected from the eligible seniors by the Faculty Committee on Honors. Requirements for eligibility include high scholastic attainment as well as excellence of character and valuable contributions to college activities.
Pi Delta Epsilon, the National Honorary Journalism Fraternity of American Colleges, was formally installed at Beaver College in 1939, the second woman's chapter to be chartered by the Grand Council. As an honorary organization it strives to settle any problem which may arise among publications and to establish journalistic standards worthy of respect.

This year the fraternity was composed of twelve members, four of whom are faculty members. Brother Doris Fenton is Grand Councilman and has held that position since the Beaver chapter came into existence. The other "fratres in facultate," Brother Mary C. Brill, Brother Belle S. Matheson, and Brother Carrington C. Tutwiler, also show a vital interest in the welfare of the fraternity.

The "fratres in collegio" are: Lois Shoolman, president; Lillian MacNutt, vice-president and historian; Mildred Howell, secretary-treasurer; Joan Thurin, representative on nominating committee; Georgiana Margargal; Martha Kravec; Mary Alice Lippincott; and Edna Purvis.

The number of meetings this year was limited due to the decision of the extra-curricular activities committee. Despite this handicap, the spirit in which the fraternity was chartered continued to exert its influence over the publications.

A plan was considered last year to select certain girls to train for the position of "Log" editor. This year it was put into effect and has shown satisfactory results. The plan offers an opportunity to the girls to learn just what the requirements of the position of "Log" editor may be and how to cope with the problems that arise.

A joint banquet of the publications staffs was sponsored in April by Pi Delta Epsilon. Awards and recognition were given to those girls who, through work on a publication, were deserving of them. New members were installed and the officers for next year were elected.
Pi Sigma (Pentathlon to you, Sallie) has had a good many years of providing fun on this campus. The oldest organization of the college is not content to let its members be merely honorary—they have to do a little work on the side.

Our down-to-earth faculty provided much entertainment for the spectators of the Annual Faculty-Pentathlon basketball and volleyball games this year. A basketball game between the “knowledge thrashers” and Pentathlon members would change non-believers into “Gee, I didn’t know they had it in them” people. The Modern Age sports fashion needs no introduction to the faculty who appeared dressed in gym costumes of the 1890’s. How could they play in bloomers drooping down to their ankles and gym blouses which hung all over them? Even a “water boy” dressed in a sailor suit was necessary to complete the faculty team. These costumes may have been the cause of the Pentathlon victory in basketball, although some of the faculty team did some fancy playing.

When assignments drag, a roller skating party does the trick. Recreation in the form of skating provides fun, relaxation, and exercise by the hour on the beautiful rink at Willow Grove. Thank Pentathlon for the brighter side of this—not for the bruises and floor burns. They’re your fault.

Besides having fun, and providing fun for you, the members of Pentathlon work—selling Beaver banners, and if you don’t think that’s work, try it some time. They attempt to swell the treasury by offering for sale triangular pennants and rectangular banners, grey and red symbols of loyalty to the Alma Mater. Haven’t you got one yet? They must be slipping.

The aims of this society are to honor those students who have shown interest and ability in sports, although membership is not restricted to the “phys ed” majors. Athletic ability, scholarship, and good sportsmanship are the qualifications of every member of Pentathlon. The wearers of the green and white shield are indeed honored personages.
Those students who are either majors or minors in the psychology department and maintain a consistently high scholastic standing in psychology as well as in all of their other courses, are honored by election to the local chapter of Psi Chi. Candidates must be approved by a three-fourths vote of the local members. Two or three initiations are held annually in order to allow maximum participation of those eligible.

Psi Chi is a national honorary society in psychology founded September 4, 1929, during the Ninth International Congress of Psychology at New Haven, Connecticut. Nineteen colleges had installed chapters before the close of 1929. The installation date of the Beaver College chapter is May 12, 1939. At that time the club served as an adjunct to Psi Alpha, membership in which was open to anyone in the student body who had completed six hours of psychology. Since the disbanding of Psi Alpha last year, however, Psi Chi has taken over the role of actively advancing the science of psychology. The organization is unique among honor societies, in that it requires active participation of its members, rather than merely passive honorary achievement.

The two most outstanding events which Psi Chi sponsored this year were the symposium on Extra Sensory Perception and participation in Science Open House, both of which occurred during March. The Beaver chapter invited the group at New Jersey College for Women to join them in the symposium. Relevant experimentation was carried on throughout the month preceding the meeting, in the hope of discovering some latent psychic ability in at least one person on the campus. The symposium itself consisted of the presentation of brief papers on various aspects of ESP, followed by a discussion of supporting evidence and criticisms. A firm foundation was laid for a pleasant association with a neighboring chapter.

BECLEX

Beclex is the mainspring from which most of the dramatic presentations of the student body of Beaver College emanate. It is an organization which, like the world situation, has experienced its share of chaos, disunion, and revolution, and last year it finally emerged from the conflict whitewashed and vindicated by a new constitution.

The purpose of Beclex as avowed in this new plan of closer coordination was "to stimulate interest in dramatic activities in Beaver and to secure for the college all the advantages and mutual helpfulness provided by such a society." In keeping with this lofty ideal, during the first semester Beclex undertook the ambitious project of producing "Hedda Gabler," a tragedy by Henrik Ibsen. The cast included:

George Tesman ............................ Arthur Root
Hedda Tesman ................................ Audree Boehm
Miss Juliana Tesman ...................... Helen Dearden
Mrs. Elvsted ................................ Doris Evelyn Ross
Judge Brack ................................ Harry Hill
Eilert Lovberg .............................. Gordon Toner
Berta ........................................ Mary Lou Elliott

Elaine Penn was the student coach.

The set, which was one of the most distinctive features of the entire production, was designed and skillfully executed by Mr. John Hathaway and Marilyn Thurin. For the second time in its history as a club, Beclex penetrated beyond the sacred portals of Beaver in search of masculine talent to play the male roles in this production and was fortunate in securing three willing workers. The girls did their part in like measure and all evidences pointed the way to a great success. Such, unfortunately, was not the case. In this venture Beclex aimed high but fell short.

However, the above allegation is meant not as a reproof but rather as a commendation of the new and enterprising spirit of the reorganized group in attempting to do a play that even professionals, used to the exacting discipline of the unsympathetic "call board," find difficult and approach warily. If they were a bit too enthusiastic and optimistic of their own abilities they still deserve praise rather than censure, for as Browning says, in choicer language than we could ever find to express it:

"Man’s reach should exceed his grasp
Or what’s heaven for"

Now, however, it is to be hoped that experience will prove a kind but able teacher and send the club forward on the path they have trod so much more successfully for the past nine years.

As this is written, the club is preparing a program of three one-act plays which is to be presented in April. The plays had been scheduled for a showing in the fall, but the performance was called off because of illness in the cast of one play. The three plays are "The Great Dark," by Dan Totheroh; "Hearts," by Alice Gerstenberg; and "The Happy Journey," by Thornton Wilder. They are student-directed and acted. This program gives much opportunity for participation by Beclex members, especially the new ones. Beclex, this year, has taken in 23 new members who qualified for the honor of membership by actual work in all phases of the drama. At the annual banquet these talented few were officially initiated and admitted to the society in an impressive ceremony.

In addition to these two semi-annual play programs, the organization sponsored a dramatic "Information, Please!" thinly disguised under the name of "Repetition, Please!" in which selections from various plays were read and identified. It was led by Elaine Penn and Audree Boehm and questions were asked and usually answered by a "Board of Excerpts."

Just as important as all these diversions offered for the entertainment of the college as a whole is the personal enjoyment afforded the members at monthly meetings from which all outsiders are excluded. What goes on at these meetings is a matter for discussion and conjecture among the students who aren’t of the initiated. The meetings this year have been interesting, and the discussion has grown hot upon several occasions.

An aura of secrecy and "exclusive" fun is one of the features that does most to entice and retain the interest of new members. And once a member you have the privilege of wearing, or giving away, or better still, exchanging for a fraternal insignia the distinctive Beclex pin, which is in the form of a black onyx mask edged with pearls.

As if all these external things plus the delight of at last giving vent to the long pent-up desire to express oneself "for art’s sake" weren’t inducement enough, Beclex offers this extra added attraction. Equal in importance to the mystery of "Who killed Cock Robin" is the enigma that the masses at Beaver have never been able to fathom and the answer to which only members are supposed to know, namely, —what does "Beclex" mean?
If anyone had been walking by the open windows of Taylor Chapel one day last September he would have heard various and sundry little scared voices timidly climbing scales. Now, Taylor Chapel isn’t a very good place for bathtub singing, and we knew it. So we strolled in to see what was going on. It so happened that we walked in on the last group of Glee Club try-outs and there, in the midst of scared sopranos and quavering contraltos, we found Mr. W. Lawrence Curry busily searching for new voices for the Glee Club’s 1940-1941 season.

And he certainly found them if we’re any judge! (We ought to be—we’ve been in the Glee Club for four years!) This season has undoubtedly been the Beaver Glee Club’s most outstandingly successful one so far. The girls broke a record for accomplishing new and unusual things. Two trips to neighboring men’s colleges to give concerts is not exactly commonplace hereabouts as yet! Lafayette and Lehigh evidently enjoyed our visits as much as we did, for we’ve been invited back—individually and collectively.

Our first formal concert of the season was at Lehigh on the eighth of February and what fun we all had. It was an icy night. The bus slipped and slid all the way to Bethlehem and back but the club sang beautifully and made quite a lasting impression on the lads from Lehigh. There was a dance afterwards and somehow or other the trip home again wasn’t nearly so cold!

From February through March it seemed as though we were always dashing off in that bus to go sing somewhere. We had engagements at several local churches and at Philadelphia business centers. There was a concert at Norristown early in March for which we all borrowed senior academic gowns and looked extremely studious and cultured. Some of us weren’t so happy that night—we’d rather have gone as glamour girls in our lovely evening clothes. March, of course, was our biggest month. It was on Friday, the twenty-first of March, that we gave our second joint concert with the Harvard University Symphony Orchestra. And what a concert “that” was! We’ll never forget the hectic rehearsal with the orchestra on Friday afternoon and what a state most of us were in by the time it was over!

But the concert that night, as you will no doubt recall, was tremendously successful. Every season the club includes in its repertoire some large choral work for women’s voices. For the past two years it has been a major work for women’s chorus and orchestra. This year we did the exquisite “Blessed Damozel, La Demoiselle Elue” by Claude Debussy. Malcolm H. Holmes, conductor of the Harvard Orchestra, conducted chorus and orchestra for the “Damozel.” Mary McKillip was heard in the poignantly lovely and tender solo of the Blessed Damozel, and Gloria Marcus sang the quiet descriptive solo passages of the Narrator.
Mr. William S. Nagle's "The Solitary Reaper," a choral setting for women's voices of the poem by Wordsworth, was another high-light in the evening's program. The club sang it two years ago, but this was the first time that it had been done with orchestra. Mr. Curry was conductor and Gloria Marcus sang the vocalises.

The other numbers which the club sang at this concert were from the season's regular repertoire: "All Praise to God the Eternal," arranged by Harvey Gaul; the negro spiritual, "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray"; Malotte's "Lord's Prayer"; "Clouds" by Ernest Charles; "The Sleigh" by Richard Kountz; and Schubert's great "Omnipotence."

The formal concert which has come to be one of our annual engagements in Camden, New Jersey, was given at the First Presbyterian Church on the evening of the first of April.

Several other engagements followed. The jaunt to Lafayette was our last gay fling before the close of our very successful season. Our efficient and hard-working officers, President Janet Morrison, Elinor Sack, Secretary, and Josephine Schmidt, Treasurer, guided us nobly through the complexities of the club's business organization and to them go our fervent thanks. And to our dear Mr. Curry we say a somewhat tear-choked thank you for making this the greatest and happiest of our four years in the Glee Club. No club could have had a finer leader. We were teased, cajoled, scolded, praised, bullied, and whirled like a cyclone through the whole season's concerts and recitals and we loved every minute of it!
The varied services of the Choir have made it a valued part of the music of the college. Sunday night chapel—Christmas candlelight service—Easter vespers—bi-weekly rehearsals in Huntingdon 10—all these things have kept the Choir constantly before us this year.

As in former years, this year the Choir presented programs at many churches in and around Philadelphia, and also gave some radio concerts. An innovation was the sponsoring of a concert by the Men's Glee Club of Temple University, which concert was followed by a dance.

There has been created a deeper feeling of appreciation among the students for the enjoyable work rendered by this group under the able leadership of Miss Ruth Bampton.
ORCHESTRA

When Maestro Barlow organized his instrumentalists this year it was for purely aesthetic reasons—“We’ll get together on Mondays and play for the joy of playing.” The results of this joy of playing were extended to the rest of the college at the Christmas and Easter services, when the orchestra appeared in all its glory.

The Christmas service offered an opportune time for the debut of this young musical organization, and we were glad to see them taking an active part in college musical circles. And after the debut nothing would do but a return performance at the Easter Vespers.

One of the most pleasant surprises was the appearance of Barlow and Band on the program for music night of Art Festival. They did a creditable job of opening the evening with a bang.

It seems there was a little trouble with moths in Sue Sanderson’s instrument. She, following the conductor with diligence, pressed the middle valve down, and out flew the moth. Probably Mr. Barlow put on heavier practice pressure after that.

More vespers and candlelight services and music nights should provide more opportunities for the orchestra to show itself off.
Science Open House is another of those every-other-year events to which we all look forward with interest. We wait to be intrigued by some of the less complicated miracles of science.

For two days this year Murphy Hall was turned into a museum. We gazed with admiration upon the many wonders of biology, chemistry, psychology, and physics which were laid out for us. We marveled at the experiments carried on before our very eyes: the preparation of dyes, drugs, soap, paper, and even perfumes; the performance of "magic" chemistry. We had our blood count taken. We had our pictures taken and developed and printed, while we waited. We gaped and experimented and learned.

All the excitement and color of a county fair was combined with the actual educational value of this Science Open House. We enjoyed getting our scientific enlightenment the pleasant and easy way.
ATHLETICS
ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

For the last three years the Athletic Association has been in the process of collecting itself together and arranging all its departments so that a more smoothly working organization might be effected. First it made sure of the efficiency of its board by cutting down the number of members in the executive body and creating an auxiliary managerial board. This year it has revised the financial system and inaugurated a complete change in the management of the treasury.

This activity indicates the spirit of development which has marked the functioning of the association this year. Under the leadership of Eleanor Price it has not only performed its usual functions with efficiency, but it has continued the developing action of previous year. Through the trial and error method, new plans and ideas are being incorporated into the program of the Athletic Association. The general scope and plan of the association are being broadened with vigor and foresight, much to the benefit of the whole college.

TENNIS

It's rather difficult to record for posterity anything that has not yet taken place, especially when it's a series of matches. Unfortunately, the tennis team has not yet been chosen, and those whom you see above are the members left from last year, the backbone of this year's team.

We well know that tennis is a popular sport at Beaver. Besides the varsity matches, intramural games are always played plus a ladder tournament for non-varsity players. As soon as there's a touch of spring in the atmosphere, the racquets come out of the mothballs, and white tennis balls begin to bounce all over the place.

Two of our honorable team members, June Newcomer and Paige Weaver, are seasoned players. They both hold Middle-Atlantic ratings which they gained through tournament play. With these two as a nucleus for the team, Jackie Van Nostrand to lead them on, and Miss Kinney to coach, we can hope for clever court capers this year.
As we go to press, nice weather is beginning to become a habit, and the golf team is about to start in with its spring schedule. During the winter, golf enthusiasts practiced in Murphy gymnasium under the direction of Mrs. Anita Slotter, coach, and Dorothy Robinson, manager. An innovation was the series of golf classes held on Mondays and Fridays by Mr. D'Angelo, golf "pro" of Baederwood Golf Club.

After this session of winter training, general practice for beginners and advanced players begins in earnest. Intramural teams, the Red and the Grey, hold their annual contests; the golf team begins its game schedule.

The opponents of Beaver on the green and fairway are Swarthmore, the University of Pennsylvania, Ursinus, Temple University, College of Chestnut Hill, and the Philadelphia Cricket Club Juniors.
There is certainly no excuse for any Beaver student to complain that she never gets enough exercise, with the intramural program that has been developed on the campus by the Athletic Association. With an eye to our health (and our figures, no doubt) they give us hockey, basketball, tennis, golf, swimming, archery, badminton, and ping-pong, riflery, horseback-riding, baseball, and volleyball—an imposing array. Supplied by a managerial board, the program is planned with the basic purpose of appealing to the interest and abilities of every student. The schedule is so arranged that some activity is in progress for everyone’s free time — so no excuses are accepted.

The fall season opened with hockey and archery, and found some of us racing up and down the hockey field making futile attempts to give the ball a good whack and win for the glory of the class. Of course, we practiced twice a week with a faculty coach, and when the beginners had learned to play and the experienced recruits had mastered new techniques, the class tournaments were held. Here the upperclassmen, stiffened with age, met their masters. The sophomores and the freshmen fought the final battle, and the freshmen amazed everyone, except themselves, of course, by winning with the dubious score of one to nothing.

Archery prevails not only in the fall, but in the spring as well. It is in the second half of its season that the more spectacular program is followed, consisting of tournaments among the Beaver devotees and with other organizations, these latter principally by telegraph. The range is laid out in back of Ivy Hall, thereby insuring an interested audience from the garage and from the door factory. This year, practices were considerably handicapped by lack of cooperation from the weather.
In November, the first horseback-riding manager was appointed. It was decided that those girls who completed twenty hours of riding, which were not taken for physical education credit, would receive A.A. points. Plans were immediately made for breakfast and luncheon rides, paper chases, and scavenger hunts.

Five sports were in progress during the winter season; basketball, ping-pong, swimming, badminton, and riflery. Two tournaments were run in basketball in order to give more players increased opportunity to participate. The first to be completed was an elimination tournament between the dormitories, including the day students. The day students won! Class was the basis for the round-robin tournament, with a beautiful plaque as the trophy. The name and numerals of the winning class are engraved upon it for posterity to revere. And the Sophomores are the victorious girls, led to the victory by MaryClaire Drexler.

Competition in swimming took the form of accumulating lengths for class benefit. When we went to press, the freshmen had a comfortable lead—comfortable for them, but rather disturbing to the rest of us—and were anticipating a repetition of their hockey triumph. The ping-pong tournament consisted of individual competition, rather than team work. It was impossible to predict whether or not Montgomery would be privileged to keep the banner which one of its residents won last year. A class tournament was featured in riflery. On the basis of representation alone, a Junior victory seemed a highly reliable prophecy.

As for the spring season, it was impossible to record any more than that the sports in progress were to be tennis, golf, volleyball, and baseball. There was increased interest in the intramural program this year as a result of the extended series and the greater amount of tournaments. Something is provided for every student; if you get fat, that's your hard luck!
GYM DEMONSTRATION

Every two years the health and physical education department presents this gym demonstration designed to show the varied activities of the department. We are shown the results of the long, hard hours of "play" which the "phys eds" put in every week.

Marching, tumbling, and routine gymnastics of every sort are much more effective when shown off in this manner than they ever appear to the members of a class struggling on the floor of a gymnasium. Performed by experts, the exercises were design patterns in black and white, and not just exercises.

The roller skating event, a new feature this year, was a surprise. We have seen the members of Pentathlon illustrate their abilities in this field on the rink at Willow Grove, but we never expected to see it in Murphy gymnasium. There were demonstrations of figure and formation skating which amazed and excited us.

And the chorus of Beaver "Rockettes" was new, too. They made their debut dressed in the garb of sailors—quite effective. The precision tap dances might be a little more polished before the girls take them on the stage, but the novelty numbers could not be improved. They were perfect.

Fencing and archery exhibitions, races and games of various kinds, and the now-traditional cake-walk were featured. Everything looked like so much fun, but we’re glad we don’t have to play so hard or so frequently as the girls do. We can’t imagine ourselves attempting some of the things we saw that evening. No, thank you, we’ll leave it to the health and physical education department to amaze the spectators at the next gym demonstration.
POSTURE WEEK

In an attempt to make all of us posture-conscious, the Athletic Association has introduced this annual observance of Posture Week. During one whole week out of every year, we torture ourselves in supreme efforts to walk straight,—heads high, chins in, and shoulders up.

The Posture Week committee, this year headed by Betty Griffin, bombarded us with propaganda. At every turn we saw colorful posters telling us just how to achieve the desired results. Even in the dining room we were beseeched through song and slogan to carry ourselves erect and straight. Chapel skits showed us how we can make our daily household tasks easier by walking, standing, and sitting correctly. We have been practicing.

Nominees for Posture Queen were elected from every hall and from the day student body by secret (?) ballot. It has been our secret ambition for years to get elected at least runner-up to the runner-up to the Posture Queen on our corridor. This year there wasn't a chance. The committee made the selection practically fool-proof by listing all the things necessary in the candidate for the queen, and we couldn't stand up under the close scrutiny.

The big evening when the queen was chosen we found Anne Jeffers, Marion Edwards Dougherty, and Miss Louise Orr back to do the judging. Marilynn Thurin was their final selection, and she was crowned Posture Queen of 1941. Her attendants were June Pizor, Anita Tuvin, Chrystella Wade, and Margaret Young.

Posture Week seems to be fulfilling its purpose nobly, for after an entire week of walking like a soldier, we find it very difficult to relax into our own, comfortable slouch. Maybe we'll all be Posture Queens some day.

"SUE SAMTER, CHAIRMAN, AND HER COMMITTEE"
FACULTY PLAY

Upon inquiring behind the scenes of "Under the Gaslight," we learned that the reasons for the tremendous success of the faculty play were principally three: (a) there were five coaches combining forces; (b) the hero wouldn't stand for temperamental actresses; and (c) our inestimable Dr. Tutwiler kept his colleagues continually in the spirit of the thing during rehearsals by spinning bottles across the stage. Additional reasons (d), (e), and (f) were Dr. Bowen's very obvious ambidexterity, the whistle on the train, and the hero's and heroine's graceful swan dives from the end of the dock into the river.

We couldn't imagine anything to equal last year's supersuper performances of "Antony and Cleopatra," but we were shown. "Under the Gaslight" proved to be a "mellerdrama" of the heart-wringing, spine-chilling variety, than which we can conceive none better. The cast was exceptional; the audience was appreciative; and the cause the worthiest that can be. The scholarship fund really benefits by this annual faculty frolic, since the student body turns out "en masse."

We, the students, looked forward to it with keen anticipation, and here on these pages we look back upon it with fond recollection and gales of laughter.
SOPHOMORE HOP

Blithely ignoring the traditional "Sophomore Slump," the class of '43 sailed straight into a successful dance, under the guidance of Marjorie Thompson. Huntingdon Gym became a ship's deck with life preservers, seahorses, signal flags, and fishnet background drapes. Despite the fact that the "flu" put some of her faithful committee in the Infirmary, Mitzi managed nicely with Moe Elliot, Dinna Pike, and Louise Murphy to help. And the dance made history—but literally! It was the first informal to last until midnight. It wasn't any hardship either: judging from her smiling countenance to the left, Mitzi had a good time with the rest of us.
Getting ready...
Senior Dance as usual
Art Festival's keynote, this year as in every other year, was spontaneity and originality. Beaver students laid away their textbooks and academic worries to dabble in the arts.

Music night, Drama night, and Art night were the principal features of Art Festival, and of the three, Music and Drama nights were probably the most noteworthy features this year.

From Bach to boogie-woogie, variety was the keynote of the music program. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Barlow, rendered the Bach side of the program. In the realm of modern composition, Elinor Sack played her original composition for the piano. Mary McKillip sang "The Wild Swan at Coole," words by W. B. Yeats and music by Mary Alice Lippincott. Mary also sang Mr. Curry's song, "The Nightingale," and her own comic opera, "The Tooth, The Whole Tooth, and Nothing but The Tooth." Mary Alice played a composition by Miss Bampton.

In the field of "Le Jazz Hot" and popular music, Jimmy Seidenman played a boogie-woogie number composed by herself. An outstanding feature was the singing of a new song hit entitled "When Spring Comes in Again"—music by Mary Alice Lippincott, words by Georgiana Magargal.

If there had been a curtain on the stage of the Little Theater, it would have gone up at eight. There was no curtain, but the show went on, which all goes to prove that drama needs no fancy trappings.

The three plays presented were examples of social significance in drama, experimentation in the Greek manner, and drama in verse form.

“Street Corner,” by Anice Kendall, met with acclaim as successful propaganda. The presentation was an impressionistic one with only the main character visible to the audience, and the other characters represented by voices.

Virginia Fager wrote a play in verse entitled “The Flower of Dew.” She is the first participant of Drama night to have attempted the verse form. Her play was directed and produced by Selma Klein.

“Portal,” by Mary Lou Elliott and Anita Schwitter, was the play attempting the Greek manner of presentation and was interesting in its endeavor to oppose racial prejudice.

The graphic arts were well represented in the exhibit in Green Parlors and Beaver Hall lobby. Design patterns, still lifes, and portraits, done by art students and other students, were placed on all walls.

Art Festival does not wish any laurels other than the future cooperation of Beaver students in doing independent work in the arts. It is always our hope that Art Festival will be able to continue and to improve every year through the vigor and sincerity of the students.
Writing this article we find ourselves at a great disadvantage. You have already seen May Day; you know all those things which we can only anticipate.

There is no doubt, much to remember about this historical May Day. So many new things made their appearances, things which will probably become traditional to the "small-every-other-year" fêtes: hoop-rolling for the Seniors; Maypole dancing for the Honor Court and Laurel Chain; an early morning picnic breakfast to put us in the spirit of the May.

And we imagine that the real spirit of the May was more in evidence this year than heretofore. The castle and the breakfast out-of-doors and the atmosphere of spring would make anyone feel like going a-Maying.

We shall probably always remember rose-crowns in our hair and magic May-dew on our feet and May songs swelling on the morning breeze. The "small" May Day will become a looked-forward-to event, just as the "big" ones have. We are glad that we had the joy of participating in the first one—that we really went a-Maying for the first time.

IN APPRECIATION

Knowing that it never could have produced a yearbook without expert aid, the staff of the 1941 "Beaver Log" wishes to here express its sincere appreciation to all those whose advice and support have made this book possible:

Dr. Carrington C. Tutwiler, our faculty adviser, whose enthusiasm was unbounded and whose helpful advice was always ready when needed;

Mr. Thomas Barlow, Director of Press Relations, who helped us over many a rough spot with a cheerful willingness that was most encouraging;

Mr. Orville Stambaugh of Campus Publishing Company whose expert advice and ready cooperation we were always sure to have;

Mr. Cyril Saylor of Campus Publishing Company who has brought to actuality many of our dreams and yet managed to restrain our extravagant imagination;

Mr. Austin Whitney of Campus Publishing Company who made our production worries his worries and to whom we owe the artistic and effective use of printing in this book;

Mr. Harry Baliban, Mr. Vincent Sheehan, and their associates of Merin-Baliban studios, who made our burden light by their eager cooperation, and whose excellent photographic work we are proud to feature;

The many Beaver students, faculty, and friends who have given us support in so many ways — buying books, bringing us patrons, voting us money through clubs and organizations, and bearing with us through the long ordeal of producing our "Beaver Log."

Straight to the mark in service

Beaver College girls know that the brand of service given them by the Presbyterian Book Store in Philadelphia goes straight to the mark because it's

Prompt
Efficient
Courteous

They call Pennypacker 6722 when they want a new book for a gift or for leisure reading. It saves precious time, too—time that might be spent in any of a thousand other ways. Make a note of that telephone number and address.

A SIGNIFICANT FACT, too obvious to require much elaboration, is the growth of the Campus Publishing Company. From seven to seventy yearbooks in three years, to make us the largest exclusive yearbook publishers in the east.

One way to explain it is to say that Campus is not an engraver, a printer, or any other type of processor, but a service organization well acquainted with the “ins and outs” of yearbooks; co-ordinating all the phases of yearbook planning and processing. Not being a processor, we can cover the field more completely. There is no budget too small or too large in which we are not interested, nor any reproductive process that we cannot supply—letterpress printing, engraving, offset printing, or gravure.

Using these processes to the best advantage, we now make available five different means to a good book. In letterpress printing, “MASTER-PRINT” and “ENGRAV-PRINT.” In offset printing, “MASTERTONE” and “VELVETONE”—and in gravure, “REGENTVURE.”

All five, from start to finish, are handled alike, receiving the same “Perceptiplan” servicing; specialized handling of your yearbook from the “infant idea” to delivery of a fine finished edition. All five are Campus books through and through.

These five—differing in price only as they differ in desired effect and budget limitations—possess in full those superiorities in appearance, economy, and general effect that have, in three years, made Campus the leading service organization that it is.
