THE BEAVER LOG

PUBLISHED FOR THE STUDENTS
BY THE GRADUATING CLASS

BEAVER COLLEGE

JENKINTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

1940
Four years of close association with Dr. Frank D. Scott has endeared him to the members of the senior class. To us, he has been more than our college pastor and professor of religious education; he has been our friend.

In the seven years he has been affiliated with the college, Dr. Scott has directed all his efforts and energies toward the interests of Beaver. He has been an influence for good both on individuals and on the college as a whole. While we appreciate all the outstanding qualities of Dr. Scott, we admire him most for his utter sincerity in all he says, does, and believes. Because of this sincerity he has succeeded in becoming an inspiration and guide not only to the members of the senior class but to all his associates.

In some small way we wish to pay tribute to the man who has contributed so much to our happiness at Beaver. With this thought in mind, the senior class of 1940 dedicates this Beaver Log to Frank D. Scott.

FOREWORD

Another year of college life has slipped into the realm of the past. Only memories remain—memories that grow dim and hazy with the passage of time. The people with whom you have lived and worked, the activities in which you have participated, the friends you have made have all been a vital force in your life. A permanent record of these memories is desirable and necessary.

The 1940 Beaver Log, through the medium of pictures and words, has attempted to crystallize these memories and make them concrete. Our aim has been to catch the essence and spirit of college to reflect the life and progress of Beaver.

Thus, sincerely hoping that we have attained our goal, the senior class presents for your approval the 1940 Beaver Log.

Book One
The official date of the founding of Beaver College is 1853, but the history of the college really dates back to 1850. At this time, two academies for the education of young women were started in Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania—one by a Presbyterian minister, and one by a Methodist minister.

The town was evidently too small for two such educational institutions, for neither one of the academies prospered. The Presbyterian minister, a far-sighted gentleman, suggested to the Methodist minister that the two schools merge.

The Methodists probably had more money than the Presbyterians, for after much consideration and planning, the Methodist church backed by the Pittsburgh conference, bought the Presbyterian academy. A charter was granted by the state, and in 1853 the first building was erected. Thus, the Beaver Female Seminary became the forerunner of the Beaver College we know today.

At that time higher education for young women was just beginning. The purpose of the Beaver Female Seminary was "to educate female youths in the arts, sciences, and useful literature." Whether or not this high and worthy purpose was realized we do not know, but we do know that the fond parents of the fainting female scholars were satisfied because the school prospered.

In 1872 a charter was granted to the seminary by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The Beaver Female Seminary became a full-fledged college and was granted all the rights and privileges extended to all colleges and universities in the country. At this same time the college was placed under the auspices and patronage of the annual Pittsburgh Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, U.S.A.

About 1900, complications arose which threatened the security of the college. Several large, heavily endowed, private colleges and state universities were built up in and around Pittsburgh. Therefore the trustees deemed it advisable to change the location of the school.

In 1925 a desirable location was found in Jenkintown, Pennsylvania, and the present Jenkintown campus was bought from the private school that then occupied it.

Several years prior to this change connections with the Methodist church had been severed, and Beaver College became affiliated with the Presbyterian church. It still reports annually to the Synod of Pennsylvania, and many of the administrative policies of the college are influenced by the Presbyterian doctrines.

The Jenkintown college soon became popular and enrollment increased. In fact, the number of students increased so rapidly that, after being located in Jenkintown only three years, the college found it necessary to expand. In 1923 a private estate in Glenside was bought, and the college was maintaining not one campus, but two campuses.

The Beaver campus today consists of fourteen buildings on a beautiful thirty-seven acre campus. The college provides transportation between the two campuses, and the busses have become an integral part of our college life. Operating on two campuses is considered a disadvantage; therefore, the administration has visions of locating the entire college on the Grey Towers campus. The execution of this plan will mark a highlight in Beaver history.

In 1939 James Elliot Mooney became acting president of the college, and many changes in college policy were inaugurated. His interest and enthusiasm in building up the Endowment Fund are largely responsible for its present success. The growth of this fund, which means so much to the future of Beaver, has been assured by a pledge of unanimous support from the students and friends of the college.

We are all looking forward to next year when Dr. Raymon Kistler will become president of the college. He has many plans for Beaver, and we are sure that under his guidance Beaver will progress.

We recognize that Beaver is neither the largest nor the best of colleges; we know that much must yet be done before our ideal Beaver can materialize. It is perhaps for this very reason that we students so love our Alma Mater. Our pride and our hope lies in the opportunity offered to each of us to be as great an instrument in the process of her growth and development as she has been in ours.

As we look back through the years, we see that our development has been ever progressive. What the future holds we cannot tell, but we prophesy that the college will continue to strive for higher goals, worthy of the name “Beaver.”

Alma Mater dear, The years have o'er thee swept, But Mother tried and true, We pledge our life to Thee; We Stain-less still thru time and tide Thy splen-dor Thou hast kept.

Pledge Thee all our full-est faith In loving serv-ice free.

Hail to Beaver, hail we say! Fling high the scar-let and the gray; We shall
To the

Keep in- ra-dent with truth Diet Thine ev- er-las ting youth.

fin-est in the land We lay down our heart and hand.

President

To the Students of Beaver College:

As surely as the roots of the present are buried in the past, so surely is American youth tied with the pioneering spirit in the making of America. The background for this pioneering spirit is deeply embedded in sacrifice and devotion to principles of rights and liberties which were denied our forefathers in Europe: the right of freedom of worship, the right to take part in the affairs of government, and the right to reach toward the fulfillment of our individual dreams.

I cannot think of a better time for youth to reach toward the American dream for a richer and finer fulfillment of their own destiny. We have gone through long years of depression. We have faced a transition period in our social and economic life. We must continue to have faith that the American youth can perpetrate ideals, can continue to show the transcending power of culture and advancement, can continue to have the adventurous spirit of the pioneer, the patient labor of the researcher, and the high ideals of the spiritual life.

Our government is not without fault, but it is among the most just in the world today. It has risen from the ashes of crises of war for centuries past. While we have had internal troubles and while there are times when America has been shaken to the very roots of its political and economic life, there has never been a time when education did not play an important part in the evolution of American life and culture. There has never been a time when creative youth could not launch itself into the struggle toward a better world in a practical and spiritual way, showing an appreciation of the value of the American dream and the thrilling development of America.

I greatly value the privilege of having worked with you during the past two years. You have given me encouragement in my zeal for thought and action in relation to the service of higher education at Beaver College. You have been an important part of the high aspiration which the administration and faculty have held as a standard in making this institution a part of an unending chain of progress in your lives. I am personally rejoicing with you in your achievement, and while there will be trials and disappointments ahead, you have sturdy qualities of mind and heart which will help you toward the fulfillment of your best in life.

A number of years ago Justice Holmes wrote me this stirring and penetrating thought—“We cannot live our dreams—we are lucky if we can give a sample of our best, and if in our hearts we can feel that it is nobly done.”

I am sure that you will continue to aspire nobly, adventure daringly, and serve humbly.

JAMES ELLIOTT MOONEY.
Dr. Ruth Loving Higgins has been Dean of the College at Beaver for the past six years. It is difficult to pay fit tribute to her sincerity in furthering the academic recognition of Beaver College. Her ceaseless efforts have been directed toward the inculcation and stimulation of an interest in academic achievement. Under Dean Higgins' guidance our curriculum has been broadened and expanded to meet the demands of modern educational trends.

It is also to Dean Higgins' credit that a summer school was initiated at Beaver College. During its five sessions the summer school has offered opportunity for additional cultural and social enrichment to the students.

Dean Higgins, who is herself a proficient student, has retained contact with her major interest, history, by teaching several classes in that subject. She is well known in her field and has attained the honor of being included in several volumes of "Who's Who in America."

Despite her numerous duties Dean Higgins has always been eager to extend her sympathetic advice to the individual students. Her straightforward manner and simplicity of expression have been helpful in solving the most difficult problems. Dean Higgins' services have been invaluable to both the students and Beaver College.
In addition to her native qualities of energy, resourcefulness, and dependability, Dean Ruth M. Howells Zurbuchen has an air of distinction and an enviable composure acquired through her many travels. This combination has enabled her to meet varied situations with equanimity and explains the facility with which she has reconciled the positions of Director of Residence, Executive Secretary of the Alumnae Association, and Dean of Students.

Mrs. Zurbuchen has devoted fourteen years of service to Beaver College. As Residence Director of Beaver and Ivy Halls, she has continually manifested an interest in every girl—an interest which has characterized all of her associations with student affairs.

Three years ago, the Alumnae Association of Beaver College, recognizing her exceptional talent for organization, invited Mrs. Zurbuchen to act as its executive secretary. Since then, in response to her unstinting effort, membership in the various alumnae clubs has increased rapidly.

In 1938 Mrs. Zurbuchen accepted the office of Dean of Students. While working in this capacity she is responsible for the planning and scheduling of all extra-curricular activities. Realizing the importance of a diversified education, Dean Zurbuchen has endeavored to synchronize the spiritual, cultural, and social aspects of college life.

Book Three
SENIOR CLASS HYMN

1. With hope and faith triumphant still, with praise unto our God, We magnify Thy glorious Name, Our Staff and our Rod.

Now may our lives unfold in the shelter of Thy grace.

And bless us with the light coming from Thy radiant face.

2. Dear Lord of light and glory, now The brotherhood of men
Thy peace we seek in life; We will keep in all we do
Thy guidance in the way ahead And pledge our hearts to Thee
And strength in the strife. As an offering pure and true.
The present senior class has been called an “all round class—the peppiest and most collegiate class at Beaver.” This characterization implies, but not accurately, that our pace has been exciting.

Without doubt, the sentiments of this class have been focused through the following words written by one of its own members:

“Frankly we are not unusual. We entered college as other classes have before, and will again—new, disorganized, a group of individuals with varied tastes and diverse goals. Through our four years we have behaved as other classes, followed in some fields, led in others. Gradually we have developed into the unified body which is the Class of 1940.

“Some of our members have distinguished themselves in the field of sports. On both varsity and intramural teams they have always evinced the sportsmanship and fair play expected of Beaver representatives. Others of us have fostered a more intelligent appreciation of the arts by an active interest in the fields of drama, music, and literature. A few, through exceptional scholastic ability and a marked capacity for leadership, have contributed positively to the academic and administrative channels of the college.

“Our united efforts have insured the success of all class activities. None of us will forget the fun and hard work of Song Contest from which we emerged victorious for two consecutive years, the beauty of Junior Prom, the thrilling moment of Junior-Senior breakfast, and the good fellowship of Senior-Faculty breakfast.

“We have kept alive those traditions which we consider im-important attributes of the Beaver we love. As a group and as individual minds we have maintained, and we sincerely trust, have improved the various student activities so vital to our college life.

“We have been accused of taking the middle path. It would seem that we are neither liberals nor conservatives. We are told that we have the pernicious habit of dreaming dreams impossible of execution, of talking easily and forgetting to act. We have criticized without offering constructive advice.

“We freely admit all this, and yet, we would defend ourselves. We feel, and rightly so, that even this type of class has its own peculiar place in college. By our very struggle against the preservation of institutions simply because they are institutions we have proved that we are not stagnant. By advancing our ideas in the form of criticism, destructive or otherwise, we have instilled in others an interest in student affairs which we feel will be far-reaching.

“If we have created in others even an aversion to our so-called inertia, then we will have done much indeed. If we have instigated a new spirit among the underclasses, then we shall graduate with the knowledge that Beaver will grow, be it stumblingly or quickly, toward the realization of its goal.”

This, then, is the graduating class of 1940. We shall leave as other classes have left; there will be some retrospection, some regret, some eagerness to move on. We have said that we are not unusual, but through our unanimity of effort we have given of our best.

This past year has been a full one for the Juniors... Song Contest... Play Contest... Junior Prom... Junior-Senior breakfast!

It is undeniable that talent in great quantity exists among the members of the Class of '41. This was evidenced by their excellent showing at Song Contest at which they were given honorable mention. Dressed in the class colors of red and white, the juniors were led by energetic Helen Dearden.

For the second consecutive year the Class of '41 won the annual play contest, at which their presentation of "Poor Madelena" was judged the best class production, and Alda Wolff was awarded the prize for the best individual performance.

The highlight of the year was Junior Prom. Other classes judged this year's prom the best Beaver has ever had—and no wonder! Weeks before this event the juniors worked feverishly—selling crew hats, name stickers, "pork pies," and Sunday breakfasts. Ever original, the juniors started a precedent of informality and entertainment at the Saturday night dance. They were rewarded by the social and financial success of this much publicized week-end.

The activities of the year were brought to a close by the annual Junior-Senior breakfast. At this time, the juniors, thrilled with their long-coveted rings and their approaching senior status, were filled with noble resolutions for the ensuing year. An anticipation for the assumption of the duties and privileges which would soon be theirs was mixed with a feeling of regret for the near departure of the seniors to whom they are related in endeavor.

The class now stands equipped with the primary attributes for intelligent leadership. Both from within and from without, it has been provided with the tools of the trade. Election of its members to positions of responsibility on such representative bodies as Student Council, Nominating Committee, and Honor Council have provided training for the job that lies ahead.

The members of the class must be willing to forget all personal antagonisms so that the class may function as a unit. Only through unified action, thought, and purpose will there come a senior class that will lead, advise, and exemplify the student body of Beaver College.

We have been told that next year a new era will begin for Beaver College. The stage is set for constructive action. We think that the present junior class has the “stuff” out of which an executive and inspiring senior class is made. It is up to you, Class of '41, to show that we are right.

Junior Prom Committee

Junior Prom! . . . “the land of dykes” . . . windmills, colorful tulips, wooden shoes . . . soft lights, sentimental music, glamorous gowns, sweet nothings . . . fun for all!

Red Norvo’s band, rated among the ten best bands a short time ago, was conceded to be the most successful orchestra ever to play on the Beaver campus. Never to be forgotten was his sweet rendition of the junior theme song, “All the Things You Are.”

The annual banquet for the juniors and their escorts preceded the formal Friday night dance on February 23. Murphy gymnasium, transformed into a miniature Holland, was the scene of the formal promenade. The gayly decorated Grey Towers Lobby lent a festive air to the tea dance on Saturday. Instead of the usual tea, a buffet supper was served. The gala week-end closed officially with the Saturday evening dance. For the first time the dance was informal, thus contributing much to the gaiety and merriment of the couples who attended. A “Gay Nineties Revue” of songs and dances presented by members of the junior class added a piquant flavor to an already hilarious evening.

Two days of perfection and many sweet memories! All the work and worry of preparation by the Prom Committee for weeks in advance was unequivocally rewarded by a Prom which has been unanimously pronounced the best dance ever held at Beaver.
JUNIOR PROM
We, the undersigned, herein wish to publicly tender our apologies for daring to veer from the path assigned to us by knowing upper-classmen. Our big sisters were kind enough to assure us that our class, as every other sophomore class from time immemorial, would bow to the inevitable, and contract that dread disease popularly known as Sophomoritis, or, a bit more technically, as a laxness of the muscles and vacuity of the mental regions peculiar to second year students.

We are glad to say that we have escaped the sophomore bogey even at the expense of contradicting the usually unerring judgment of the upperclassmen. In fact, since they had the temerity to assume that "the best freshman class Beaver ever had" would follow along the well-worn path trod by less superior classes, we can not feel much sympathy for their chagrin.

However, we do not wish to leave you with the impression that we are in every way exceptional! As freshmen, we displayed the usual qualities of vivacity, ingenuity, and enthusiasm in unusual quantities. The avowed purpose of our next college year was to follow through with this same stock in trade, amplified by experience, and thereby defeat the traditional sophomore jinx!

We have done that! The hardest part of our job was over and if from there on some of us did a little relaxing on our laurels, who will see fit to censure us! There are bound to be loads of people in every class who are content to sit back and watch; the sophomores have had their full quota of these. We are also blessed with a nucleus of leaders in training whom we regard as the life blood of the new Beaver; to this rather large group of girls we are indebted for what the sophomore class has accomplished up to date.

We are:

Proud of the fact that three members of our class, Helen Thomas, Jane Castle, and Jane Brister, have contributed materially to college entertainment and enrichment by their tireless efforts to keep Art Festival alive and glowing;

Proud of the fact that our class has maintained a consistently high level of attainment in all class-against-class contests such as the inter-class Play Contest, Song Contest, and athletic contests;

Proud that we have instituted several precedents for Beaverites to make traditional; the Sophomore Hop for one, so great a success as to make the treasurers of other classes green with envy; the Sophomore Sample Party for another, as novel a function as ever "crashed" the doors of the Huntingdon Gym;

Happy to have the privilege of serving breakfast in bed to all and sundry on Sunday mornings (which pleasant duty the juniors have just transferred to our willing hands) so that our funds may grow;

Fortunate in the possession of that dynamo of pep and energy, Betty Ann Searle;

Thankful that this second year of preparation and maturation has not been a stagnant one;

In short, proud of the fact that we are:

The era of dewy-eyed freshmen offering bewilderment and naïveté as their principal endearing characteristics has passed. It is no longer deemed proper for freshmen to listen modestly and admiringly to the advice and counsel of the upperclassmen whose opinions have been tempered by the broadening experience of one or two years of college.

As an additional blow to their collective ego, the upperclassmen who were once the peers of Beaver College, are now expected to submit graciously to the complete revision of their antiquated ideas by their “little sisters” who know what they want and are grimly determined to get it. The superiority of upperclassmen has been effectively questioned by the Class of ’43. Standing on their democratic prerogative of equality for all, they have refused to undertake the usual freshman burdens of pouring water in the dining room, opening and closing doors for the upperclassmen, and waiting for the last busses after student government meetings.

Upperclassmen have been denied the pleasure of orientation. Each had hoped to gently lead an innocent freshman along the thorny path of adaptation toward that comfortable state of knowingness with which every upperclassman is blessed. They were sadly thwarted by the triumphant entry of a group of individuals every whit as capable as they, and twice as confident—the Class of ’43.

But let the class speak for itself through the words of one of its members.

"The success which characterized all our activities more than justifies our feeling of self assurance, however provocative it may be. The Hallowe'en party staged in the usual atmosphere of cornstalks and pumpkins was an unrivalled success despite the fact that it was our first class venture.

"Song Contest was merely another means for demonstrating the varied abilities of our class. The talent and team work displayed under the able leadership of Camille Houck, evoked admiration from everyone present.

"Our next class effort was at the annual play contest, when we presented 'Cinderella by the Dozens,' directed by Mary Berlin. Although this was not an outstanding success from the viewpoint of histrionics, it was again evident that a spirit of willingness and cooperation had prevailed during rehearsals.

"In short, we are proud of our freshman class and hope that our next three years at Beaver will prove as satisfying as this one."

An all conquering spirit like this must achieve its ends, and we venture to say that the Class of '43 will prove to be a trail blazer.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

The Student Government Association of Beaver College, of which every girl becomes a member at the time of enrollment, is accorded the privilege of self-rule. In order to avoid the confusion attendant to mass government, the organization is guided by the Student Council whose duty it is to represent student opinion.

As is maximatic in any democracy, the functioning efficiency of the organization is dependent upon the interest and support given to it by its members. An alert student body, conscious of its own powerful potentialities—a body willing to think about student problems and able to act on ideas so as to produce constructive action—can and will mold any council to meet its particular needs and demands.
STUDENT COUNCIL

The Student Council is the centralizing force of the Student Government Association. It works to coordinate efficiently the collective will of the student body. Four officers, seven representatives and two faculty advisors comprise this council. The president and vice-president must be seniors; the other officers are drawn from the three upper classes. In order to insure fair representation for all dormitories, it is required that of the eleven officers and members, two be from Grey Towers campus, two from Montgomery hall and four from Beaver hall.

In conjunction with eight subordinate committees and councils the Student Board formulates rules which in turn must be ratified by a majority vote of the student body. These suggested rules are drawn up with the welfare of the whole group in mind. The council conscientiously attempts to reflect student desires unless they directly conflict with the established policy of the administration.

This executive body is also vested with judicial authority. In its weekly meetings, the council reviews cases of girls who have infringed upon the rules. It is unfortunate that some students choose to regard the council merely as a punitive body. In order to discourage this viewpoint, and also to avoid subjective decisions as much as possible, the council initiated an automatic penalty system to be effective in all cases of minor infractions. It has been felt that such a system will develop the maturity of the individual student and will act as a stimulus toward self-discipline and a spirit of cooperation.

It is conceded that broadness of outlook is a necessary qualification for an efficient council member. An effort has been made to foster such an attitude on the part of the council by a close contact with the student government associations of other colleges. The Council annually selects one of its members to represent Beaver College at the meetings of the Women’s Intercollegiate Association of Student Government. These meetings serve as a clearing house for all curricular and extra-curricular problems.

We all agree that the members of the Student Council have many responsibilities. Few among us realize that we, the student body of Beaver College, have equal obligations. It is our duty to elect capable leaders to our council and to offer them our cooperation and loyalty when they have been elected.

NOMINATING COMMITTEE

Nine years ago, when increased enrollment and the subsequent addition of many new activities made direct nominations from the student body impossible, the Nominating Committee was instituted. This committee seeks to simplify the election procedure by thoroughly and objectively considering all possible candidates and finally placing before the student body those most capable to run for election.

This committee is composed of the President of the Student Government Association, acting as chairman; presidents of the Athletic Association, the Y.W.C.A., the Honor Council, the four classes, the Day Students Council; one other day student representative; the chairmen of the Point Committee and May Day; one member elected from Beaver and Ivy Halls together, one member from Grey Towers, one member from Montgomery Hall; and two faculty advisors.

It is the duty of the committee to nominate students for the following offices: officers and members of the Student Council, president of the Y.W.C.A., and president of the Athletic Association. This committee also nominates for election: members of the Dormitory Council, chairman and members of the Point Committee, Social Chairman, president and members of Honor Council, editors of the “Handbook,” the chairman of May Day, and members of the Honor Court, Laurel Chain, and Honor Characters.

Obviously this system is not infallible, yet it is the consensus that in theory it most nearly approaches the ideal of absolute impartiality. Practically, the Nominating Committee is as representative as its members are democratic. It must be remembered that the Nominating Committee is not an inanimate, inflexible institution. It is composed of, and made to function by, student personalities, and consequently it will reflect human faults as well as human endeavor. It is the responsible privilege of the student body to select delegates who will truly represent a cross-section of the students, and who will conscientiously attempt to reflect majority student opinion when faced with the task of choosing student officers so that Beaver can have a truly democratic government rather than one arbitrarily imposed.

Recognizing that the committee as an institution is not functioning to its maximum efficiency, the members have seen fit to take remedial steps and are attempting to devise a new system of representation. When the plan is in its final form, the Nominating Committee will present it to the students for approval.

The students of Beaver College, believing that honor is of primary importance in all associations and essential for the development of an academic attitude, recognize and uphold an Honor System. This system is preserved through the aid of an Honor Council which, as the name suggests, is that organization at Beaver that encourages the execution of honor in all academic work. It is composed of two representatives from each class, one representative from the day students, two advisors, and a president.

This privilege and honor of a student honor organization was accorded us about ten years ago. The honor of each student is the honor of Beaver College. The Council tries to make the student body honor-conscious. It exists in honor to help anyone who has not the strength of mind or character to refrain from appropriating work that is not her own.

Both the students and the faculty have been asked to cooperate with the Honor Council by reporting any dishonest work. The names of all individuals are kept in confidence. Each case is considered individually and at the discretion of the council.

This year the Honor Council presented to the students a book, the motto of which is "HONORE STAMUS." This book is placed on the table in front of Taylor Chapel. It will remain there permanently as a record of those students who felt that honor was of supreme importance and who, of their own free will, expressed their recognition and acceptance of our Honor System by signing the honor pledge, "HONORE STAMUS."

For some time, many of the students have felt that the Honor System is entirely too limited in scope. It has been suggested that the system be extended to include the social phases of our college life, for honor itself is all-embracing.

MAY DAY COMMITTEE

The traditional celebration of May Day is an integral part of Beaver. It includes the informal crowning of the May Queen on the first of May, but it refers more especially to the all-college production, held this year on May 11. In this observance of the May Festival practically the whole student body takes part.

There are traditional features of every May Day: the May Queen and her two attendants, who are all seniors chosen by the entire student body; the Honor Court; the Laurel Chain; and the Chorus in which the two aforementioned honor groups participate with the Glee Club. The theme of May Day however, and the consequent story or play is a matter for the committee to choose and work out. The members of the May Day Committee attempt to find a theme which is fitting for the occasion, and then they try to make every detail of May Day relate to it.

This year May Day was built around Chaucer’s “Legend of Good Women.” It was adaptable to a celebration of this kind because Chaucer set the original story in the month of May, and appropriately, May Day this year was called “Now is the Month of Maying.”

In the story the Queen of Love (the May Queen) is permitted by the King of Love to punish Chaucer for having written stories which hinder the work of love. The penance which Chaucer must do is to write a legend of women who have been faithful in love. Thus a play within a play is introduced, for Chaucer presents the legends of Pyramus and Thisbe, Ariadne and Theseus, and of Dido and Aeneas to the King and Queen.

May Day is a tradition which involves sustained activity and worry on the part of the executive chairman and her committee. It is impossible for us to realize the time and painstaking effort these girls put forth in order to insure a smoothly executed production. Both the committee and the students are nevertheless confident that the quality of the final presentation shows that May Day is a tradition worth preserving and one which is dear to the heart of every Beaver girl.

In order to simplify the machinations of the Student Council, a subsidiary organization to be responsible exclusively for dormitory infractions was established in 1931.

The Dormitory Council consists of the presidents of each dormitory and two representatives from Beaver and Montgomery Halls. The first House President of Beaver Hall serves as president of the council; the Vice-President of the Student Council acts as advisor to the group and reports its activities to the Student Council.

The council enforces orderliness of the dormitories and is responsible for the general decorum of the students on campus. It meets weekly to review cases of those who have been reported for violation of dormitory rules.

Since it has been proved that a definite relationship exists between scholastic rating and opportunity for an uninterrupted, quiet study period, the council has made a special effort to enforce strict adherence to the rules governing the quiet hour. To this end, it launched a campaign stressing the importance of quiet hour by posters, talks, and dormitory skits.

It is the ultimate aim of the Dormitory Council to create an atmosphere and attitudes which shall be conducive to a proportionate amount of work and recreation.
SOCIAL COMMITTEE

A committee composed of a senior chairman and representatives from every class, from each dormitory, and from the day student group plans and manages all social affairs of the school year. Advised by the Dean of Students and supported by the Student Government Association, the workings of this committee make possible the Wednesday teas, the after-dinner coffees, and the informal dances.

This year during Freshman Week, the watermelon feast, the freshman tea, and the dormitory hobnobs were sponsored by the Student Government Association and attended to by the Social Committee. The reception to new faculty and personnel in October, the Christmas decorations and parties, the Easter Egg hunt, the Dormitory Council party, and refreshments on Inauguration Night are other functions sponsored by the committee.

Smoothly executed, these activities all contribute to the friendly atmosphere of our college. The student body appreciates the work done by the Social Committee and wishes to thank the members for the wonderful social functions of this past year.

The point system was instituted three years ago in order to eliminate the possibility of students' failing in academic work because of over-indulgence in extra-curricular activities, and in order to give the greatest possible number of capable students the opportunity to hold offices.

The system is dispensed by a point committee which consists of a chairman who is a senior, one representative from the junior class, and one representative from the sophomore class. It is the duty of the chairman to preside at all meetings of the committee, to represent the committee at each nominating committee meeting, and to be present at all freshman and senior class meetings when nominations are made. The other two members are required to be present at their respective class meetings.

 Presidents of all clubs and organizations must ascertain the eligibility of candidates preceding nominations, and register results of elections with the point committee before they are considered final. A student must have a grade point ratio of 1.25 or above to hold any office, and may carry no more than eleven extra-curricular points at a given time.
Since the day students cannot manage to be at college during all hours of the day and night, they necessarily miss some of the activities, and must use some means of informing themselves as to current happenings. This is accomplished through the Day Student Council, governing board of the day students.

This committee is composed of five representatives, elected by the school as a whole. It meets once a week to consider problems peculiar to day students, and to make contacts for them with the administration and resident students. The president of the Council is also the Day Student Representative on the Student Council and on the Nominating Committee, where she attempts to express the viewpoint of the day student group.

Because religious activity is a part of every Beaver girl’s program, the day students have their own chapel every Wednesday. A short service is followed by a business meeting and announcements.

We hope in time to coordinate the two groups of students so that those who live on campus will no longer be apart from those who do not. When that time comes, we shall forget to distinguish between day students and resident students, and set our minds to work on some of the larger problems which concern us all.

DAY STUDENT DANCE

Blue orchids . . . blue lights . . . blue fountains . . . a ceiling of flowers . . . all these helped to create an enchanting scene at the annual Day Student's Dance, on December 1, 1939, in the Murphy Gymnasium.

George Sommer and his "Summertime Rhythm" welcomed the guests with sweet swing. "Blue Orchids," our theme as well as our favorite refrain, dominated the gala scene.

Favors were a new addition to the dance this year. They were in the form of white leather address books bearing the gold Beaver seals and added much to a successful evening. The entire faculty and personnel were invited to the dance and each patronness was presented with a corsage of orchids.

Our "symphony of orchids" proved to be not only a social success but a financial one as well. This, the only large function of the day student group during the college year, is for the entire college. We are proud to say that this year our dance attracted a greater number of guests than ever before.

The "Dream of Two Blue Orchids" is not only a memory of another successful dance; it is a barometer which indicates the co-operation and active interest which the day students bring to all student affairs.
This has been one of the most active years of service in the history of the Young Women's Christian Association at Beaver. Activity for all interested students has been the motivating force in the well-rounded program sponsored by the Y.W.C.A. Cabinet.

Two great innovations were initiated this year, the mass meeting for all members and the three-day marriage conference held on February 26th, 27th, and 28th. Two outstanding speakers, Dr. Elizabeth Kirk Rose and Mrs. Norman E. Freeman, were here to lead worthwhile discussions on marriage and marriage problems.

The college was fortunate to have Dr. W. Sherman Skinner, Pastor of the Germantown Presbyterian Church, as leader in its Religious Emphasis Week which was from December 3rd to December 6th. This week, which is observed annually at Beaver, proved to be one of inspiration for all students.

One day student chapel a month and every Tuesday evening resident chapel were conducted by students under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A. The cabinet also sponsored a weekly Sunday school class in Taylor Chapel. These classes were well attended and seemed to meet the needs of the students, who were guided by Miss Elsie Stryker, Assistant Professor of Bible.

Continuing along religious lines, the Y.W.C.A. Cabinet supervised the Christmas and Easter services held in Murphy Chapel. The annual Christmas Carol and Candlelight service instigated by the Y.W.C.A. has become a beloved tradition at the college. A short religious service in Taylor Chapel is followed by the singing of Christmas carols around the Christmas tree on the lawn in front of Beaver Hall. It is a beautiful and inspiring ceremony—the perfect climax to the Christmas festivities!

As in other years, the Y.W.C.A. sponsored the Big Sister, Little Sister movement on campus. The cabinet returned early in the fall to help welcome the freshmen and enliven Freshman Week with the traditional Baby Party and the Big Sister, Little Sister picnic.

Another aspect of the association’s work is that of social service in the vicinity of Jenkintown. This work includes aid to the Jenkintown Day Nursery, the making of scrapbooks and dressing of dolls at Christmas time, and a Christmas Party for some of the underprivileged children of the neighborhood. Also included in this part of the work is the collection of money for Christmas and Thanksgiving baskets which are distributed to needy families in the community.

In the spring all the classes united with the association to plan programs for those students who spent Saturday afternoons on campus. A treasure hunt and hikes are two of the ideas worked out for the enjoyment of the students.

The cabinet has been ably counseled this year by Miss Elsie Stryker, Dean Ruth Higgins, and Dr. Frank Scott. Their cooperation plus the cooperation of all the members of the association have made it possible for the Young Women’s Christian Association of Beaver College to come in sight of its purpose; namely, “to unite in the desire to realize full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God, to have a part in making this life possible for all people, to work to understand Jesus and to follow Him.”

The Newman Club of Beaver College is one of 250 Newman Clubs in institutions of higher learning throughout America. It is a Catholic organization, named for the great educator, Cardinal John Henry Newman, and has three main purposes: religious, educational, and social.

The Beaver chapter was started only three years ago and has become an integral part of the college life of its members. The club has bi-monthly meetings where the girls carry on directed discussions on topics of general interest.

Each April, several of the members are elected to represent the Beaver chapter at the Newman Federation Convention held in Washington, D. C.
The League of Evangelical Students had been functioning as a campus activity for several years prior to its re-organization in 1935. Since this date it has been growing in number, spirit, and endeavor under the leadership of Miss Stryker.

The purpose of the League is to give greater fellowship with Christ through prayer and Bible study, and to enrich our lives in service for Him. This year in particular the League has proved to be of great spiritual value to its members.
Pi Delta Epsilon is a national honorary fraternity which seeks to promote participation in student journalism, to establish a code of ethics for student publications, and to honor those who have made significant contributions along these lines. The Beaver chapter, the second woman's chapter to be chartered by the Grand Council of the fraternity, was formally installed on March 7, 1939.

In spite of its immaturity, this organization has fostered a closer union among the three major publications of Beaver, has satisfactorily settled numerous publication problems, and has represented Beaver as a growing college in a national society.

In November the fraternity held a national convention at the University of Richmond, in Richmond, Virginia. The Beaver chapter sent two delegates.

In the spring Pi Delta Epsilon held an open meeting for students interested in publications, in order to receive the true impressions of the student body and to act upon their suggestions. At this time the functions and policies of the publications were completely reviewed.

Pi Delta Epsilon sponsored a joint banquet of the publications staffs in May. New members were installed; pledges were announced; and awards were given to those who had done outstanding work on any publication during the past year.
Alpha Kappa Alpha is a national honorary fraternity in philosophy. Although young in age for a national organization, it is developing rapidly on campuses throughout the East. In 1928 Muhlenberg College first initiated the fraternity and ten years later Beaver formed the Epsilon chapter.

The pledges elected in October to the Epsilon chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha were formally initiated into the fraternity in November. The initiation took place on the Cedar Crest College campus.

In November Mr. Benton Spruance, head of the Beaver art department, presided at an interesting informal discussion on “The Philosophy of Art.”

On April 5, Epsilon sent several delegates to participate in the annual convention held at Muhlenberg College. The seminar treated the subject of “The Philosophy of Democracy” in the light of the conception of the great thinkers of all time, as compared with today’s leading exponents of nationalistic regimes.

Scholarship and interest in philosophical problems are the main qualifications for election into Alpha Kappa Alpha. The candidate must then be elected by the unanimous vote of the chapter members. The chapter meetings are entirely flexible in their nature, depending on the interests of the members at the time.
Lambda Delta Alpha, the senior honor society of Beaver College, was originated in 1933, under the direction of Dr. Elinor J. Barnes, Professor of Psychology and Chairman of the Committee on Honors. Since its inception, its purpose has been two-fold: the stimulation of academic endeavor and the encouragement of an appreciative attitude toward high scholarship.

Election to Lambda Delta Alpha is the highest scholastic distinction an undergraduate can attain. It has become traditional for the recipient of the Silver Trowel, an award presented to the junior maintaining the highest scholastic average for her first three years of college work, to be permanent secretary of the organization during her senior year. At present June Houpt holds the Silver Trowel.

The other members are selected from eligible juniors and seniors by the Faculty Committee on Honors. Requirements for eligibility include not only scholastic ability of fine caliber, but also excellence of character and invaluable contribution to college activities. Announcement of candidates is made during the month of October at the Honors Day ceremony.

The society functions socially in one capacity. It sponsors an annual tea in order to recognize those students whose superior work has earned them a place on the Dean’s Honor List.

This year’s candidates were formally initiated into Lambda Delta Alpha on March 19, following a dinner given in their honor.
The Beaver chapter of Psi Chi, national honorary society in psychology, was installed May 12, 1939, with seven charter members.

The purpose of this organization is "primarily to advance the science of psychology; and secondly to encourage, stimulate, and maintain scholarship of the individual members in all academic fields, particularly in psychology."

Its members must be registered for major or minor standing in psychology, must maintain superior scholastic rating, and must have been unanimously elected at a regular meeting of the local chapter. Meetings are held approximately once a month and programs are scheduled according to the paramount interests of the group.

In November of this year Psi Chi sponsored the Biennial Vocational Conference with Dr. Elinor Barnes, professor of psychology, as executive chairman.
Pi Sigma or Pentathion, as it is more popularly known, is an honorary athletic society. It was inaugurated in 1913 and is the oldest honorary organization at Beaver.

Each year this society sponsors a roller-skating party for the entire college, and throughout the year it sells school banners in order to swell the treasury. The outstanding event of the year is Fun Night at which time the members of Pentathlon challenge the faculty in a basketball game and in a volleyball game. This year witnessed the defeat of the faculty teams and the fastest basketball game of the season.

Election to Pentathlon is based on athletic ability, scholarship, and good sportsmanship. Its chief purpose is to honor those students who have shown interest and ability in sports, and who have manifested good sportsmanship at all times. A second aim is to foster a greater interest in all forms of athletics.

Members are required to amass a certain number of athletic points before they are considered as prospective members of Pentathlon. It is not the policy of the club, however, to restrict membership to physical education students. This is truly an open organization—open to all those who may be called “good sports.”
Scholarship, leadership, character, and potentialities for future use to business and society are the qualifications considered in the selection of the girls for the 1939-40 official "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

These girls have been chosen by College Government Committee as most deserving of such an honor. In choosing students for Who's Who the committee emphasized participation in extra-curricular activities and ability of the student to adjust herself effectively to the total situation of college.

This is the sixth year of issue of "Who's Who." It has been felt that there was a need for some medium through which names of deserving students could be brought before the business and social worlds. The purpose of such an index has been that of establishing a reference volume of authoritative information on the great body of American undergraduates.
PUBLICATIONS

The publications of any college exist primarily to record, to present a composite view of college life, and to relate in detail all college activities. Fortunately, since mere recording is necessarily monotonous, this is not their only activity. It is the unique privilege of our four publications to suggest progressive remedial measures and to influence thought along progressive lines. They are the forces which integrate all our activities at Beaver, and which acquaint those outside the college with the aims, affairs, and aspirations of Beaver. Indeed the publications of Beaver College have a more far-reaching effect and greater influence than any other group of organizations on campus.
At last we present to you the 1940 Beaver Log. We, the staff, are proud of our achievement in representing a true picture of Beaver.

Only the staff members and those who have been involved in the mechanics of year book production can fully appreciate the tremendous task of publishing the Log. We started from scratch—no money, no ideas, no materials—and indeed the Log has been a constant challenge to our creative, executive, and financial abilities. The result has been well worth the time devoted to planning attractive sections, scheduling and taking pictures, writing and editing copy, and stretching the budget to suit our needs.

We have tapped every available source of revenue—hounding students, faculty, and friends week after week, resulting in the sale of 500 books; typing and sending countless letters to friends of the college asking them to be patrons; convincing clubs and organizations that a greater number of pages in the Log would be to their advantage and inducing them to pay for them; pounding the pavements of Jenkintown, Wyncote, Glenside, Philadelphia, and all points west, day in and day out, rain or shine, in the hope that a few more merchants would subscribe to an advertisement in the Log; convincing students that their names in gold on the cover would enhance the beauty and personality of their book; haunting the Chatterbox, lounges, and dorms to sell pictures; in other words, doing everything humanly possible and within the cannons of good taste to scrape together a few elusive dollars.
This year's Log contains many unique features. To many of you the Log cover is not a surprise since your opinion was requested and considered early in the fall. We hope that those of you who knew nothing of our plans are pleased with our choice. Naturally white soils quickly, but a damp cloth, a little elbow grease, and a bit of care will make it look like new. Our second color was selected with a view toward beauty and originality. We believe that the Beaver Log would not be half so interesting nor so eagerly anticipated if every Log staff were limited to the traditional scarlet and grey.

More views of the college have been included than in any previous yearbook. The pebbled view section in color and the formal faculty portraits are innovations this year, and we hope they meet with your approval. The tricky sub-dividers and the calendar section are still our pet brain children. The "Calendar of Memories" is not just a hodge-podge of meaningless candid, for we have attempted to depict a panorama of events as they occurred so as to tell the complete story of the academic and social activities of the year. We regret that candid for May and June could not be included, but the Log went to press May 1.

Despite our efforts, the 1940 Beaver Log is not a utopian yearbook, nor is it in many respects the same Log we had originally planned. It has its limitations and its shortcomings, but we hope that you will want to cherish it, and that in years to come it will recall fond memories of the Beaver we know and love.
One of the most familiar and most indispensable marks of Beaver is the little gray and red "Handbook." Without this as a guide, it would be impossible to be informed about all the intricate workings of our various organizations.

It is a concisely written book containing rules, policies, and constitutions that are all of vital importance to every student at Beaver College. From cover to cover, it explains and sets forth principles and traditions, the honor and social codes. It also contains our best cheers, songs, and our Beaver Alma Mater. This year the "Handbook" will also include the constitution of the Athletic Association and a folder containing a schedule of varsity games to be played next year.

The "Handbook" is published annually by the Student Government Association. The editors of the "Handbook" endeavor to record changes made in the various organizations, to eliminate all extraneous rules, and to offer constructive criticism as to the existing social and academic regulations.

Dr. Cutright Is Honored As Author

Professor's Book Is Chosen As Book Of The Month By Book Club

The Great Natives (Region North America), the recently published book of Dr. Paul Woodboor, professor of history at Beaver College, was recently selected as the January Book Club of the month by the Beaver College Book Club.

Dr. Cutright has stated that his book was written for the layman, with no technical jargon. The book covers the history of North America, from the earliest inhabitants to the present day. The book has been well received by the public and has sold well since its publication.
The Beaver News, weekly publication, presents the news of the college in a direct, objective way. Since the paper is chiefly a record of college events, the news stories, following accepted journalistic canons, are unbiased and without editorial comment.

News of student activities is given precedence in the paper, but the Beaver News also includes announcements and items of interest from the administration officers and from faculty members. As a unifying force between faculty and students, the newspaper supplies the opportunity for each group to read about and to understand what the other is doing.

As much space on the second page of the paper is devoted to editorials and open letters as the amount of student opinion reaching the editors will warrant. The editorial policy of the Beaver News is to publish both sides of any campus question if possible, and preferably in the same issue of the paper.

Twenty-one issues are distributed yearly. Of this number, several special issues were published this year. The first issue of the school year contained pictures of and information about the outstanding students on campus for the year 1939-40. Following the announcement in January that Dr. Raymon Kistler had accepted the appointment to the presidency of the college, an issue was dedicated to him. The final issue recognized the outstanding members of the senior class. One comic issue was put out during the month of April.

The staff constantly strives to improve the quality of the paper, and the latest developments in college newspapers are utilized. Streamlined format, abolition of column rule, many informal as well as formal cuts, new and lively feature columns, and informality throughout have made the Beaver News more interesting and more meaningful to the majority of Beaver students.

The News was represented at the conventions of the Intercollegiate Newspaper Association of the Middle Atlantic States at the meetings at Bucknell University and at Moravian College for Women. Several delegates also attended the Press Night which was held in the fall at the College of Chestnut Hill. The editors attempt to make intelligent use of the information gained at these conventions in order that they may keep the paper as up to date as possible.

The newspaper is edited by the students; Dr. Belle Matheson, associate professor of English, is the faculty advisor. The Beaver News has become a vital force on campus as is evidenced by the student interest in the publication.
The Beaver Review, literary quarterly of the college, began this year with two clearly defined aims. The first was to improve the magazine through greater efforts on the part of the entire staff, more organized meetings and discussion groups, and greater care in selecting material and illustrations. The second was to create a keener interest in the Beaver Review throughout the college by literary and social activity.

One year is never long enough to realize fully the aims planned for that period, but the staff feels that it has made considerable progress. More than thirty students entered the Beaver Review Contest last Autumn, and the material submitted was so excellent that three contestants were given places on the staff instead of one as is the usual custom.

Edna Sorber won first place with her story, Five Houses; Jacqueline Palmer came in second with an essay, A Yankee’s Complaint; and Joan Hinlein, a freshman, was awarded first honorable mention for her story, Mountain Road. An informal reception given by the staff at Grey Towers served as a pleasant setting for the announcement of these awards. All contestants and students interested in the literary work in the college were invited.

As for the magazine itself, the policy of the staff has been to eliminate insofar as possible the storified essays and meaningless poetry so prevalent in school magazines, and to make the publication readable while preserving the literary quality of each issue.

Through the exceptionally fine work of Jane Castle, whose efforts demand especial commendation, the cover and illustrations have been vastly improved and augmented.

In addition to publishing a magazine the Review Staff presented three lectures for the benefit of the students and friends of the college. The lecturers were Mortimer J. Adler, Carl Sandburg, and Cornelia Otis Skinner.

The staff wishes to thank all of the students who have so kindly submitted material to the Beaver Review this year. There has been an abundance offered to us; we have tried to publish the best. We urge those whose articles have been rejected to continue giving us their literary attempts, and invite still others to do so at their earliest opportunity. The job of the staff is to edit—it is their main function to choose, not compose. Therefore we impress upon you how very glad we are to welcome material from any student, at any time. Only through the interest and efforts of the school at large can we make the Beaver Review the magazine with the high standards of excellence we desire it to be.
To put Beaver on the map is the avowed purpose of the Beaver College Student Press Bureau. It was newly organized this year by its present chairman, Elsie Babcock, with the approval of the administration of the college. All large colleges and many small ones have such organizations, and the Beaver Press Bureau is in many ways patterned after those at other colleges.

Every week a duplicated bulletin containing news stories about all major events at the college is sent to Philadelphia, New York, and local papers. In addition to this, news of the activities of individual students is sent to their hometown newspapers throughout the United States and foreign countries. Nine reporters write regular news stories, and thirteen others write items about individuals. The chairman is assisted in editing, assigning, and mechanics by the secretary, Virginia Fager, and the assistant secretary, Alberta Springer.

It is interesting to note that a greater number of news stories and items about Beaver and its students have been published this year than any other of which we now have record. This is in part due to the work of the Press Bureau, and in part to its advisor, Mr. Thomas A. Barlow.

The work of the Press Bureau will affect all of us who are interested in Beaver, for it is helping to increase the good reputation and popularity of the college.
ART FESTIVAL

Art Festival at Beaver College is an outgrowth of the Music Festival of a few years ago. Up to that time, one week-end had been devoted to the best collegiate production possible in the line of music—student artist recitals and concerts by members of the Glee Club were presented. It was at the instigation of Nelle Kelly, '39, and Elfriede Mahler, '39, who felt that all the arts deserved equal emphasis, that Art Festival came into existence. Their original purpose was to provide an outlet for all creative expression and to stimulate an appreciative attitude toward all forms of art.

Although its title connotes the best and greatest of entertainment, Art Festival is aiming at neither perfection nor at size. Since its conception, its sole aim has been to offer an opportunity for the expression of student ideas on the arts. The realization of this aim through student work, which is voluntary and unrestricted, technically denies the connotation of the term festival. However, the result is a true and glorious festival of thought.

The original plan of Art Festival was to have a full week of activity—each night being set aside for one of the arts. The following year it was carried on in the same manner with few modifications.

Under the direction of Jane Castle, Helen Thomas, and Jane Brister, Art Festival reached a new high this year, both in popularity and in quality. It has remained a voluntary and largely unorganized movement. Because its structural flexibility permits modifications, it has been molded to suit the need of better relations between the faculty and the students. Although Art Festival is primarily a student affair, it has been felt that faculty participation should not be excluded.

This was the impetus which led to Faculty-Student Get Together as an introduction to the Art Festival series. An “Information Please” program on the arts was conducted with the faculty and students vying for honors, and the faculty emerging victorious.

The first night of the series was devoted to music. As in the other activities, participation here emphasized individuality of performance. Art Night climaxed the general exhibition of work done by students either in or out of the art department, with a discussion led by Mr. Benton Spruance, professor of art. Probably the most interesting and active production of the series was Drama Night. Three original plays—“Ten Thousand Czars,” by Elsie Babcock, “Conversation Piece,” by Anice Kendall, and “A Drama of Culture,” by Anita Schwitters—were produced and directed by the students. Spontaneous discussion and criticism followed each of the main events.

Organized in recognition of a very obvious need for wider participation in and opportunity for artistic creation, Art Festival has progressed and has become one of the finest activities at Beaver.
A joint concert on April 5th with the Harvard University Symphony Orchestra was a striking performance of Beaver's outstanding club—our Glee Club. The Vaughan Williams' “Magnificat,” a twenty-minute chorale for women's voices, was rendered at this occasion, with Mary McKillip singing the solo. Williams' “Magnificat” is considered one of the most beautiful and most difficult choruses for women's voices because of its modern, minor harmonies. Other selections from the club's repertoire included Handel's “Where'er You Walk,” “Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee” by Bach, “Serenade” and “Lullaby” by Brahms, “The Spinning Chorus” from Wagner's “Flying Dutchman,” “She Walks in Beauty” by Hauto, and a favorite of the Glee Club members, “Take Joy Home” by Basset-Riegger.

A dance sponsored by the club followed the Harvard-Beaver concert. The whole affair proved to be an outstanding college and community event. The proceeds of the concert and dance were deposited in the gown fund which the club started last year.

The Glee Club has earned the reputation of being Beaver's most active club for 1939-40. The girls sang at local churches, over Philadelphia broadcasting stations, and at prominent Philadelphia business centers. In April they appeared for the second year under the auspices of the Northern New Jersey Alumnae Association at Maplewood. In addition to giving concerts the club sponsored several visiting men's Glee Clubs which presented concerts here at the college. These visitors included the Lehigh, Haverford, and Swarthmore clubs. The concerts were met with enthusiastic appreciation on the part of all Beaver students.

The club this year was composed of sixty-seven members carefully chosen by “try-outs.” The girls thoroughly enjoyed rehearsals, as well as public performances. After one of the rehearsals in October, Mr. and Mrs. Curry entertained the group at a hobo party in the gym. A great deal was accomplished by the club this year, but a lot of fun was interwoven in the process of accomplishment.

The Glee Club is beyond a doubt the oldest club in the college since it was organized the same year the college was established, 1853. It was composed of ten or fifteen members who gave few concerts, but sang primarily for their own enjoyment. Charles H. Martin, a former Beaver faculty member, was director of the club from 1925 until 1936, when Mr. W. Lawrence Curry, the present director, assumed the responsibility of leadership.

The three officers of the Glee Club and five representatives form the executive board which conducts all the business of the club. The representatives on the board this year were Marie Houstoun from Beaver Hall, Virginia Weaver from Montgomery Hall, Lucia Willoughby from Grey Towers, Evelyn Whean from Ivy Hall, and Dorothy Moore from the day student group.

The members of the Glee Club would like to pay special tribute to Mr. W. Lawrence Curry. His enthusiasm, sense of humor, musical ability, inexhaustible patience, and untiring efforts in behalf of the club have carried Beaver's Glee Club through its most successful year.

THE HARVARD UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
ORCHESTRA

This is the orchestra's second year of existence. The members have devoted much time to rehearsing and increasing its repertoire, and as a result they have not been able to present many concerts.

The orchestra presented one major concert at the Red Cross Tea in Jenkintown early in the winter. The String Quintet, a branch of the orchestra, played at the Christmas and Easter services in Murphy Chapel and at the Glee Club concert in Camden in March.

The orchestra is directed by Mr. Charlton Lewis Murphy who is assisted by Mr. Thomas A. Barlow. Mr. Barlow, who plays the clarinet, is becoming famous on campus as the only male member of a female musical organization.

There is a definite place at Beaver for an organization of this kind, as is evidenced in the growth of the orchestra in the past two years. Its members hope, along with the rest of the college, that this is one Beaver orchestra which will have a continued existence.
CHOIR

Chairman of Choir Board ... Mae Reynolds  Gown Chairman ... Harriet McCartney
Accompanist ............ Helen Edwards

The Choir, a group of twenty-four girls, differs from the Glee Club in that it sings only non-secular music. In addition to presenting regular group concerts, the Choir offers many of its members opportunities to do solo singing at the chapel services and at churches in the vicinity.

The group sings at the Sunday night chapel services and at the special Christmas and Easter services in Murphy Chapel. Other engagements this year have been at the Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, St. Mark's Lutheran Church in Philadelphia, and several churches in the vicinity of Jenkintown. The outstanding activity of the year was the broadcast over the N.B.C. network during the Christmas season.

The Choir plays an important role in campus life since it is one of the main links between religious and social life at Beaver. It provides a source of enjoyment not only for the members, but for the college as a whole.

The members of the Choir and the director, Miss Bampton, are very much elated over the success of this year's activities and are planning an even more extensive program for the coming year.

Philomusan is a club for art and music lovers. It aims to stimulate a greater appreciation and understanding of the best works and artists in the allied arts. Although the members are interested in all the arts, music seems to be their first preference since most of the club's programs are musical in nature.

Active participation in the arts is encouraged by the club. This fall new members were initiated into Philomusan by manifesting their abilities in either art, music or drama. Most of the club meetings are informal with the members furnishing the entertainment.

The annual banquet was held in November and the entertainment which was supplied by members of the music faculty, was informal in tone. Mr. Curry and Mr. Barlow gave piano improvisations, and Mrs. Hagar and Miss Bampton offered modern swing renditions.

Although the club has enjoyed a very successful year it is planning to disband next year in accordance with the movement to curtail extra-curricular activities.
SONG

On the eve of Thanksgiving vacation a highly enthusiastic student body acclaimed the advent of the annual Song Contest. On this long anticipated night the four classes were united in a single desire to promote the all-round success of an outstanding campus event. For pep, enthusiasm, and the challenge of keen competition, this evening was unequalled.

Song Contest is especially important because it serves as an incentive for any person who might possess some latent creative talent. Each class presents three original songs; a class song, a pep song, and an alma mater. The individual classes are judged upon appearance, suitability of words to music, rhythm and singability of songs, diction and clarity, and finally, the general quality of the presentation.

Fully determined to sing its way to victory and the possession of the silver loving cup, each class rehearsed willingly and even eagerly for many weeks before the actual contest.

This year’s Song Contest was particularly exciting. Sharp rivalry was revealed between the seniors, who were doggedly intent upon defending their success of the previous year, and the juniors, who were equally intent in their desire to defeat them. Victory went to the Class of '40, who attributes its success to “that bundle of dynamite,” Edna Cheyney, the senior leader and class president. The Class of '41 came in second with an honorable mention and an added enthusiasm for next year’s contest.

After all the classes had presented their songs and the seniors had sung their Senior Hymn for the first time, the judges presented their decision. At this time the heretofore insignificant freshmen were ceremoniously decapped. The contemptible green dinks suddenly acquired a new meaning, and the freshmen, a new status of equality and importance.

Art Fellowship is an honorary art club. Membership is limited to art majors who are elected into the club on the basis of scholarship. Each year the club gives a tea for all the art majors and sponsors a banquet at which the new members are formally initiated into the organization.

We are proud of the fact that Art Fellowship is a member of the Art Alliance of Philadelphia. Every month the Art Alliance lends the Beaver club a work of a prominent artist, which is exhibited for the benefit of all interested students.

This year the club initiated a policy of exhibiting the works of each senior art major. The impetus for this innovation was provided by a joint exhibition of the works of the art faculty. The student exhibitions included the works of Kathryn Williams, Helen Gumbs, Hortense Singer, Nancy Tuppen, and Dorothy Sutton. Jane Castle, a sophomore, exhibited water colors.

On Thursday afternoons Art Fellowship sponsored art classes for high school students. Dorothy Moore and Virginia Sharpless acted as student teachers for this activity.

With the exception of Art Festival, Art Fellowship has done more toward creating an active interest in the arts than any other organization at Beaver.
Beclex is the chief dramatic organization of Beaver College. Its purpose is "to stimulate interest in dramatic activities in Beaver and to secure for the college all the advantages and mutual helpfulness provided by such a society."

The club felt the need of reorganization this year and has attempted to knit itself more closely together so that in the future it will be better able to accomplish its high purpose.

In February fifteen girls were taken into membership on the basis of the ability they demonstrated in a long period of "try-outs." After a week of informal initiation they were formally admitted to the society at the regular monthly meeting.

A Little Theatre Workshop group was formed this year which is to be part of Beclex. It is to provide opportunity for such dramatic activities as the larger organization cannot undertake because of its other work. The group will be open to all those students whose interests are at all inclined toward dramatic work.

Every year Beclex sponsors the Inter-Class Play Contest. It gives each class a chance to prove its ability along all lines of dramatic production, for all the plays are student directed, student acted, and student produced. Membership in Beclex is awarded to the girl who is judged the best actress.

Usually Beclex presents two plays a year, a fall production and a spring production. This fall the club started conscientious work on a rip-roaring melodrama entitled "Gold in the Hills" by J. Frank Davis. Unfortunately production difficulties arose and the club had to cancel the play. At the time the Log was going to press Beclex had started to work on "Cradle Song" by Gregorio and Maria Martinez Sierra, to be presented to the college May 18th.
Saturday, January 13, marked the event of the Interclass Play Contest in Murphy Gymnasium. Each class presented a one-act play in the order of class seniority.

Play Contest is annually sponsored by Beclex. The purpose of such a contest is two-fold: to encourage dramatic participation and interest among the students, and to discover and obtain the best talent possible for Beclex.

Melville Brister, Vice-President and Student Coach of Beclex, was general chairman of the entire contest, but each class elected its own chairman. The class chairmen selected, casted, and directed the plays so that all the plays were entirely student productions. The plays were considerably better than they have been in former years in regard to suitability, staging, direction, and acting.

This year the juniors were awarded the silver plaque which Beclex presents to the winning class. Their production of “Poor Madelena” was not only considered the best of all those offered, but it was also judged an outstanding amateur production on its own merits.

Margaret Lutz deserves special recognition for excellent direction of the junior class play. Alda Wolff, a junior day student, was given an award for the best individual performance, and Nina de Angeli, a senior day student, received an honorable mention.

MAY QUEEN AND ATTENDANTS
NOW IS THE MONTH OF MAYING

It is the joyful first of May in a village in medieval England. The townspeople crowd the field waiting for the festivities to begin. A trumpet fanfare breaks through the noise of their merrymaking, and the music begins for the procession of the May Queen and all her court. After she has been crowned, the people celebrate the occasion in a dance.

As the music dies away and the dancers begin to leave the field, a group of daisy-dancers enter the scene.

The poet, Chaucer, honors the daisy as the flower of May, and we find him on this, the first of May, searching for a field of his best-loved flower. The King of Love and some gentlemen of his court come into the same field. They recognize Chaucer, and the King sends for him.

He speaks wrathfully to the poet. “You keep my followers from serving me as they should because you are always writing about the folly of Love.” The Queen of Love receives permission from the king to pronounce punishment on Chaucer for the sins he has committed against Love. She commands that Chaucer shall present a legend of good women—women who have been faithful in love. Chaucer agrees to do the penance immediately.

The Legend of Pyramus and Thisbe

In a certain town there are two families who are constantly quarreling with each other. Pyramus, the son of one family, and Thisbe, the daughter of the other, have fallen in love with each other, but their fathers forbid them to see each other. Pyramus discovers a hole in the wall which separates the two estates. He calls to Thisbe and the two lovers are overjoyed at being able to speak to one another again. They make arrangements to elope that very night.

At night, Thisbe and her ladies hurry to the well which is the appointed meeting place. A lion comes from the forest to drink from the well, and the ladies, frightened, flee to the woods. Thisbe drops her veil in her fright and the lion begins to play with the veil, tearing it to shreds. Pyramus and his friends come running to the well; the lion, frightened by their footsteps, runs into the woods. Pyramus believes that Thisbe has been carried off to the forest by the lion, and that she is certainly dead. Overcome with grief, Pyramus stabs himself.

Thisbe and the ladies come creeping back from the forest. Thisbe runs to the well to find her beloved Pyramus dying. She is told the sad tale, and, beside herself with grief, she stabs herself, and falls dead beside her lover. Thisbe has been faithful to their love, though it meant death.

The Legend of Dido and Aeneas

Aeneas and Achates, his friend, and a band of their shipwrecked Trojan sailors are looking for some place of habitation where they can find shelter and rest. Exhausted, they throw themselves upon the ground. A huntress enters and directs them to the city of Carthage, ruled by the good queen, Dido. The fame of Aeneas has spread far and wide, and Dido gives him and his men a royal welcome. Dido and Aeneas fall in love immediately. The people realize this and they are more joyful than ever. Achates, all this while, has stood to one side watching with disapproval. He tries to persuade Aeneas that he must not stay in Carthage, for he has a mission to fulfill. Aeneas realizes that Achates is right and determines to leave immediately. Dido argues and pleads with him, but he cannot be dissuaded. While his men are making ready, he takes leave of Dido. Then, amid the cheers of the people, Aeneas and his men march off to the sea.

Dido is about to return to the city when she sees Aeneas' sword on the ground. Suddenly she falls upon the sword and kills herself because she knows that she will never again see Aeneas. The court and the townspeople come around her, and with much sorrowing they bear her body into the city. Thus Dido, too, has remained faithful in love.

The Legend of Ariadne and Theseus

In the land of Crete there dwells a horrible man-eating monster. In order to protect the country from being raided by him, the king has agreed that every three years he will supply a young man for the monster. This year the lot has fallen upon one Theseus, a prince of Athens. Ariadne and Phedra, the daughters of the Cretian king, have seen the young man, and they admire him for his youth and handsomeness. Ariadne has devised a plan whereby he may escape the horrible death. She sends for the jailer who brings Theseus to her. She plans to let Theseus escape from prison and will provide the necessary weapons if he will kill the monster. He promises to serve her forever because of her great kindness, and Ariadne promises her hand in marriage if Theseus accomplishes this brave deed.

The plan is carried out as Ariadne has promised, and Theseus sets out to battle with the monster. He returns, victorious, and he, Ariadne, and Phedra run away, since Ariadne has insisted that her sister come with them.

Tired and weary from having travelled so far, the three of them wander along the road. Finally the girls cannot go any farther, and they sink to the ground, exhausted. While they sleep, Theseus stands guard. Suddenly he kneels beside Phedra and wakens her. He entreats her to run away with him because it is she whom he loves, not Ariadne. Finally Phedra agrees to his plan, and the two faithless ones steal away leaving Ariadne alone.

Ariadne awakens just as the jailer and the guards come in looking for the escaped prisoner. Ariadne looks around to warn Theseus, but suddenly she realizes that both Theseus and Phedra have deserted her. She takes out the dagger that she was to have used for protection and kills herself, faithful to her faithless lover.

Thus ends the "Legend of Good Women." The Queen of Love thanks Chaucer for the stories and graciously pardons him from his sins against Love. Chaucer and his court leave the field, and the townspeople conclude their merry-making with a dance. The Honor Court and Laurel Chain make their exit, followed by the May Queen and her attendants, and the annual May Day of Beaver College is ended.

Chi Epsilon was organized in 1939 by the students of the early childhood education department. According to the constitution of the club, the purposes are: “to promote fellowship and social enjoyment among our members, to provide contact with those people who have contributed to childhood and its allied fields, to broaden our understanding of children, and to foster our interests in fields other than child study.”

The club began its activities with a picnic at Baederwood. Throughout the year Chi Epsilon has had several speakers. Miss Rath lectured to the club at the October meeting, and Mr. George Harvey Ivans, headmaster of the Oak Lane Country Day School, was guest speaker in February.

In March, Chi Epsilon sponsored a tea at Grey Towers. Their guest for the occasion was Miss Clare Tree Major, director of the Children’s Theatre in New York. Miss Major’s subject was “The Theatre and the Child.”

The club’s activities for the year were brought to a close by an informal social meeting.
The general purposes of Epsilon Alpha are: to further interest in elementary education while at college, to promote a broader outlook in the field of elementary education, and to bring the students of the department together socially.

The first social function of the club was a picnic supper at the home of Mrs. Dagar who is the club's advisor. In February the club held its annual banquet. The speaker of the evening was the Reverend James C. Gilbert who led a discussion on the relationship of religion to education.

At the forums, teas, and meetings sponsored by Epsilon Alpha, the club members have an opportunity to discuss the latest developments in the field, and their own problems which arise during observation and practice teaching. Besides these discussions, trips are taken to various places of interest in connection with the field of elementary education.
JUNTO

President ...............Ethel Moore  Vice-President .............Helen Robbins
Secretary ...............June De Forrest  Treasurer ...............Martha Strohman

Junto is sponsored by the history department, and membership in the organization is limited to those students who have had work in history. The club has as its goal the stimulation of interest in contemporary international politics and economics.

Junto was founded in 1933 and was modeled after Benjamin Franklin's original Junto club which was started in Philadelphia in 1726. The members of the Beaver club discuss problems of current interest as did the original members of Franklin's day.

The first fall activity was the annual Junto banquet. John Karekash of the University of Pennsylvania was the guest speaker. This meeting was open to all the students because of the great interest in the topic for discussion, "Problems of Present Day Europe." In addition to this the members of the club heard two lectures on Germany, one by Miss Rath, and one by Dr. Bowen.

All in all, this year has been a successful one for Junto, partly because of the enthusiasm of the members, and partly because of Dr. Clarke's tireless efforts in behalf of the club.
INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

President .............. Edith Prager  Secretary-Treasurer .... Shirley Singer

Program Chairman ...... Sophie Bernstein

The International Relations Club is affiliated with the Middle Atlantic District of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The aim of this club is to stimulate interest in international affairs through a program of discussions, forums, and speakers.

At the beginning of this year, there were twenty members in the club, but membership was doubled after an intense membership drive. To be active members, students must have completed six credit hours of social science. Those students who do not meet this requirement, but who are interested in the club, are taken in as associate members. Only active members may hold office.

The Carnegie Endowment furnishes books and magazines which are used by the members as a basis for discussions at the regular monthly meetings of the club. The International Relations Club keeps these books and magazines in the library for the use of all students and thus offers an invaluable service to the college.

Miss Rath was the first speaker on the club's program, and Dr. Eugene Miller of Ursinus College was the speaker at the annual banquet held in conjunction with the language clubs.

The International Relations Club sponsored a primary election and a National Nominating Convention in April. In December, 1939, the club sent four delegates to the Middle Atlantic States Regional Conferences held at New Jersey College for Women.
HEALTH EDUCATION CLUB

President ................................................................. Margaret Nicholls
Secretary-Treasurer .......................................................... Eleanor Price
Posture Week Chairman .......................................................... Jacqueline Van Nostrand

The Health Education Club is a professional organization made up of the students and faculty of the department of health and physical education. The club sponsors speakers and discussions for the purpose of acquainting the members with the most recent progressive developments in the field.

It is gratifying to note that the promotion of good fellowship among the members is not one of the primary purposes of the organization, and that meetings are called only when an issue arises which is of sufficient importance to warrant discussion. Like all other departmental clubs, it starts its activities with a picnic in the fall.

One of the major projects of the club is the biennial Health Education Demonstration which is open to the public. Students and townsmen who went to the affair last year are looking forward to next year’s demonstration. This function serves to acquaint the college and community with the work of the health and physical education department.

Posture Week, which was inaugurated last year, is another project of the club. Its purpose is to make the students posture conscious and this year the event was a great success.
The Home Economics Club is open to all home economics students. Its purpose is to provide social training, to promote social affairs, and to establish an appreciation for home life and home economics.

This year the club has had three speakers: Dr. Cutright, Dr. Bowen, and Mr. Copley. It has entertained home economics clubs of other colleges and has in turn been entertained by other clubs. It acted as hostess to club delegates attending the American Home Economics Association in Philadelphia in May.

As a year round activity, the club members undertake to make cakes for various college functions. The annual events of the club are: a banquet, as a purely social function; a bazaar, to demonstrate the members' proficiency in the field of home economics; and a Strawberry Festival at May Day, to raise funds.
Kappa Kappa Alpha, sponsored by the classical department, has the distinction of being the oldest departmental club in the college, having been organized in 1931. Its purpose has been two-fold: to further interest in the classics, and to link the classics with present day life.

Far from being a scholarly organization given over to serious research and discussion concerning the use of the subjunctive in Virgil, this club is known to be a friendly circle, with meetings often bordering on the hilarious.

The activities of the club usually consist of one project each year; pictures, lectures, and special programs related to the main subject are sponsored by the members of the club. The culminating activity is a banquet; faculty members not in the classical department are the speakers and alumnae members of the club are invited. In this way the classics are linked with other fields, and alumnae members can see the club’s progress.

It is with a feeling of regret among its members that, after almost a decade, Kappa Kappa Alpha will disband at the close of this college year.
Psi Alpha, organized in 1933, attempts to stimulate interest in psychology and to promote fellowship among the members of the group. The program of the club consists of lectures and discussions on subjects of importance in the field of psychology.

In former years membership in Psi Alpha was open only to those who had carried six or more credits in psychology. However, this year at the initiation meeting, it was decided that any one taking or having taken three hours of psychology would be eligible for membership.

In March, Psi Alpha voted to disband. This action was taken in accordance with the movement toward fewer extra-curricular activities. It was felt that Psi Chi, the national honorary fraternity in psychology, more adequately meets the needs of the Beaver psychology department.

The general purpose of each of the three language clubs has been to further interest in the culture of the country whose language is studied. With this end in view, monthly meetings were held, three of which were joint meetings of the three clubs. One of the clubs entertained with a play, folk dancing, or music at each of these meetings.

The annual banquet of the French, German, and Spanish clubs was in February. Mr. Eugene Miller of Ursinus College was the speaker of the evening.

During the Christmas season, the modern language clubs presented religious plays in French and German and folk singing in French, German, and Spanish. The entire student body was invited to this function which was a memorable one.

The French Club renewed its membership in the Alliance Francais in Philadelphia and represented Beaver in the drama activities of the Cultural Olympics, an affair sponsored annually by the University of Pennsylvania. “Grande Illusion,” an outstanding French film of the past year, was brought to Beaver under the auspices of the French Club. There was a small charge for the picture and the proceeds were added to the Marion V. Frank scholarship fund. This fund is used to send a French major to France to study at the Sorbonne during her junior year. Dr. Edith C. Wright is the faculty adviser of the French Club.

Membership in the German Club is not limited to students studying German. The club is open to anyone who is seriously interested in the cultural background of Germany. Dr. Metzenthin, head of the German department and club adviser, lectured on present day Germany at one of the monthly meetings. A Christmas party was given for all club members.

This year, for the first time in the history of the Spanish Club, all club meetings were conducted in Spanish. The members have established this policy in order to develop fluency in speaking and thinking in the Spanish language. Mrs. Ketchum, the new faculty adviser of the club, has contributed much to the members’ knowledge of Spain in her discussions at the monthly meetings.

The language clubs merged as an experimental measure, but they found that their success of this year warrants continuance of this system. Each club maintains its own identity, but all three clubs unite their efforts for a common purpose.
Alpha Tau Mu is the commercial education club of Beaver. Its activities are varied, including lectures, discussions, demonstrations, and trips.

Annually the club sponsors a fall banquet for the initiation of new members, and a spring picnic to contact prospective members. This year the organization had a booth at May Day to raise money for a scholarship for a student in the commercial department.

The policy of keeping in touch with similar clubs in other colleges has been continued this year. The club aims to become a chapter in a national business education fraternity.

The Commercial Club was formed in order to furnish a means of developing a professional attitude toward business organizations and systems; to study the scientific and technological advancement of our social order in its relation to economic standards; and to develop and maintain a spirit of friendliness and cooperation among its members.

The club is composed of juniors and seniors electing the commercial course, and sophomores who have maintained a "B" average in commercial subjects.

This year the club members took several trips to banks, mints and courts. The activities of the Commercial Club opened with a banquet in the fall and closed with a picnic in the spring.
The Science Club has been organized this year. Heretofore there were two separate organizations in the science department, the Chemistry Club, and Probe and Scalpel. Because of the movement on campus to decrease extracurricular activities, these two clubs merged to form the present Science Club.

Membership in the club is open to students in the chemistry, biology, and physics departments. The functions of the club consist of the combined activities of the former clubs.

The most important event presented is the biennial Science Open House, which is organized under the guidance of the faculty members within the departments. The purpose of Science Open House is to acquaint students and outsiders with the type of work done in the science department throughout the year.
CLUB

The Science Club is continuing the Malin Memorial Rose Day, which was first inaugurated three years ago by the Chemistry Club, in memory of Dr. Joseph E. Malin, former head of the education department. On this day roses are sold and the proceeds are added to the scholarship fund, since each year a graduate scholarship is awarded to the student who attains the highest scholastic average in chemistry.

Other activities of the club consist of regular monthly meetings to which speakers are invited, the selling of corsages before vacations, and the annual banquet at which new members are initiated into the club.

Under the able guidance of its advisors, the Science Club has progressed in its first year of existence. The merging of the science clubs has proved to be not only a satisfactory step, but a great improvement, since the present Science Club more adequately meets the needs of the students in the three science departments.

For an organization as complex as the Athletic Association, it is one of the most efficiently managed organizations in the college. All the affairs of the association are conducted by the Athletic Association Board.

The A. A. sponsors all varsity and intramural sports, play days for local high schools, and the annual posture week. It also takes care of the purchases and supplies for all athletic functions.

According to tradition, all awards of letters, plaques, banners, numerals, and cups are announced at the Student Government Association meetings. The highest award given by the board is the Beaver Blazer. The top three juniors of all the juniors who have amassed 300 points for athletic participation and one senior are recipients of blazers. Each year the association holds a banquet for the entire A. A. Board and for all the students who have participated in either varsity or intramural sports.

Hereafter the constitution of the A. A. will be included in the “Handbook” with the constitutions of other organizations. Also, permission has been granted by the college authorities to retain possession of the balance in the treasury at the end of the year. A cumulative fund will result, which will enable the association to make many additions and improvements to the athletic facilities for the benefit of the students of Beaver College.

This has been a transitional year for the Athletic Association. Formerly the A. A. Board consisted of twenty-seven students and five faculty members. A board of such large numbers proved to be inappropriate because of lack of agreement among its members. A change was definitely in order, so the board members altered the constitution to meet the needs of the association.

This year the business of the A. A. is administered by an executive board of ten members including the officers of the association, and a managerial board of varsity and intramural managers which sends two representatives to the main board. Each board meets separately once a month and is advised by two faculty members, Miss Guenther and Mr. Seifert.

Although many difficulties have arisen because of this new system, the board feels that the reorganization of the management of the association has been a step forward since progress and efficiency have characterized all the endeavors of the Athletic Association during this past year.

During one week of every year, the Health Education Club in conjunction with the Athletic Association undertakes to make the entire student body "posture conscious."

This year the drive was launched by a series of lectures and demonstrations which attempted to impress upon the students the relation of posture to health and appearance. Skits, songs, and posters advertising the enviable results of good posture were planned and presented by the committee in charge on each of the following days. Jacqueline Van Nostrand was General Chairman of Posture Week; she was aided by Betty Anne Searle and Betsy Chapman.

The movement was climaxed by the selection of a posture queen. Candidates were chosen from each floor of every dormitory and from the day students. A grand march of the contestants was held in the Jenkintown Gymnasium. Final honors went to Lois Esau, a junior day student. Recognition of the queen by the award of a Beaver pin was followed by moving pictures taken on the campus in which the "do's" and "do not's" of posture were strikingly depicted.

Emphasis on the benefits to be derived from good posture is sorely needed. It is the opinion of the students that the Health Education Club and the Athletic Association is to be congratulated for devoting so much effort to so worthwhile a movement.
A. A. PLAY DAY

Under the auspices of the ever active Athletic Association, two play days were held on the Beaver campus for the benefit of the neighboring high schools. Students from the Jenkintown, Cheltenham, and Lower Merion High Schools were participants in the Hockey Play Day early in the fall. The schools active in the Basketball Play Day this winter were the Abington, Jenkintown, and Springfield High Schools. At the close of each Play Day the winning teams were awarded emblems by the members of the Athletic Association, and refreshments were served to all players.

Play Days were introduced as a measure to promote a feeling of good fellowship among the schools represented and to acquaint the high school students with Beaver College. Plans are in order for more of these "get-togethers" next year. The Athletic Association intends to broaden the scope of these play days by inviting more schools to take part and by offering a greater variety of sports.
This year the Athletic Association sponsored eight intramural sports including archery, badminton, baseball, basketball, hockey, riflery, swimming, and volleyball. The aim of the association in regard to intramurals is to arouse the interest of the entire student body in sports, and to provide relaxation after the strenuous strain of classes.

Hockey was started early in the fall soon after the opening of school. Practices were held twice a week, and after the students were sufficiently coached, the games between classes were played off. This year the juniors emerged victorious.

Two basketball tournaments were played; a round robin inter-dorm and day students' tournament, and an inter-class consolation tournament. In the inter-dorm tournament, the day students won. In the consolation tournament the freshmen won every game they played except the last two. One game was tied with the sophomores and in the play-off contest the freshmen were defeated. It was unfortunate for the freshmen, but the sophomores were awarded the basketball plaque.

Approximately 50 girls participated in intramural riflery. Teams were organized in the rifle classes, and the matches were shot during class time. At the end of an exciting season the seniors claimed the victory.

During the volleyball season several practices were held but no class tournaments were played. A group of students selected from all the classes played in the Ninth Annual Women's Championship at the Penn Athletic Club. Beaver's team competed against nine club teams. Beaver got through the second round, but was defeated in the third.

Archery is a relatively new sport on campus. During practices there was a round robin tournament for all participants. In addition the archery enthusiasts shot in the National Telegraphic Archery Tournament. The targets were shot here at Beaver and high scores were wired into the national committee to be recorded.

No class teams were organized in swimming and badminton, but instruction was given in each. In badminton, singles and doubles matches were played. Baseball was well under way at the time the Log went to press, but no class teams had been organized. Twilight games on Wednesday evenings after chapel have been planned.

Intramural sports are open to every member of the student body even though she is not proficient in the sport. Over 200 students participated in this year's program which afforded not only entertainment and enjoyment, but also instruction. Because of the success of this year's intramural program, the Athletic Association plans an even more inclusive program for next year.

THE RECOLLECTION OF A DREAM."

—Scott
The Beaver Mirror represents an effort on the part of the senior class to reward those girls who have unstintingly given of their time and talents for the benefit of the whole college.

The students chosen were not judged according to the importance of the positions held, but rather because they had contributed the most to the college. Their interests and activities have been wide and varied in their scope. They have each given what they could to make Beaver a better place in which to learn and live.
Nina Marguerite de Angeli

I stood
Among them, but not of them: in a shroud
Of thoughts which were not their thoughts.
—Byron.
Eleanor Jane Carlin

Good sense which only is the gift of Heaven,
And though no science, fairly worth the seven.

—Pope.
Edna Mae Cheyney

In thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty.
—Shakespeare.
Their cause I plead—plead it with heart
and mind,
A fellow-feeling makes one wondrous kind.
—Garrick.
But I am constant as the Northern Star,
Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.
—Shakespeare.
Dorothy May Patten

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety.

—Shakespeare.
Jessie Elisabeth Sever

He has carried every point, who has mingled the useful with the agreeable.

—Horace.
Rhoda Eleanor Umansky

I speak truth, not so much as I would, but as much as I dare; and I dare a little the more as I grow older.

—Montaigne.
Nancy Louise Wagner

Born for success, he seemed
With grace to win, with heart to hold,
With shining eyes that took all gifts.

—Emerson.
His high-erected thoughts look'd down upon
The smiling valley of his fruitful heart.
—Daniel Webster.

IN APPRECIATION

Too often staffs feel that they alone are responsible for the success of their yearbooks. The staff of the 1940 Beaver Log wishes to acknowledge the services of the following individuals who have been invaluable in the production of this book:

Dr. Carrington C. Tutwiler who represents the staff's idea of the perfect faculty advisor in that he offered his helpful advice only when it was most needed;

The Log staffs of the past four years for the foundations on which we built the present Beaver Log;

Mr. Orville Stambaugh of Campus Publishing Company who serviced our book and gave us expert advice which we have never regretted accepting;

Mr. Austin Whitney of Lyon & Armor, Inc., who struggled over all our production problems, and who is largely responsible for the excellent printing job;

Mr. Cyril Saylor of Campus Publishing Company who is responsible for the unusual pages of the Log, and who helped us improve the book without damaging the budget;

Mr. Joseph Feldman, Sr., and Mr. Joseph Feldman, Jr., of Hollander and Feldman Studios, who were always eager to execute our plans, and to whom we owe the excellent portraits, groups, views, and sub-dividers;

The staff of the Beaver News for the space and cooperation we have received for our publicity campaigns;

The many Beaver students, faculty, and friends who have cooperated in every way possible—buying books, bringing us patrons, voting us money through clubs and organizations, and giving us advertising tips.

What Age Means To A Bank

We are not ashamed of the age of this Bank; we are proud of it.

Our years of service have helped us to know better the people and the community we are trying to serve.

SPECIALIZING IN SCHOOL AND COLLEGE ANNUALS
A significant fact, too obvious to require much elaboration, is the growth of the Campus Publishing Company. From seven to seventy yearbooks in three years, to make us the largest exclusive yearbook publishers in the east.

One way to explain it is to say that Campus is not an engraver, a printer, or any other type of processor, but a service organization well acquainted with the "ins and outs" of yearbooks; co-ordinating all the phases of yearbook planning and processing. Not being a processor, we can cover the field more completely. There is no budget too small or too large in which we are not interested, nor any reproductive process that we cannot supply—letterpress printing, engraving, offset printing, or gravure.

Using these processes to the best advantage, we now make available five different means to a good book. In letterpress printing, "MASTER-PRINT" and "ENGRAV-PRINT." In offset printing, "MASTERTONE" and "VELVETONE"—and in gravure, "REGENTVURE."

All five, from start to finish, are handled alike, receiving the same "Perceptiplan" servicing; specialized handling of your yearbook from the "infant idea" to delivery of a fine finished edition. All five are Campus books through and through.

These five—differing in price only as they differ in desired effect and budget limitations—possess in full those superiorities in appearance, economy, and general effect that have, in three years, made Campus the leading service organization that it is.
