DEDICATION

It would have been easy for the Class of 1939 to dedicate this volume of the "Beaver Log" to Benton Spruance on the strength of his invaluable work for May Day, Junior Prom, the "Log," and many other student activities, or on the strength of his growing fame in the world of art.

To us, however, Mr. Spruance is more than a prominent artist, and more than a faculty member who has been useful to many student projects.

Benton Spruance is the last person in the world about whom we can say the usual things found in a yearbook dedication. Phrases which have been often used could succeed only in embarrassing him, and dissatisfying us.

It is sufficient to say that in dedicating to him our "Beaver Log," we pay him the highest tribute we know. We recognize that he is in great measure responsible for the marked improvement in student-faculty relations, and the feeling of unity and growth on campus today. To us, he embodies those ideals toward which he has led us to strive: truth . . . beauty . . . liberality of viewpoint . . . breadth of vision . . . appreciation of the cultural and aesthetic,—all tempered by sound, common sense.
BENTON SPRUANCE
Each of our four years in college is one which holds countless memories for every one of us. The year which has just passed has been significant for many reasons. It has seen the growth of a feeling of unity and cooperation in an increasing number of worthwhile student activities, the development of a real fellowship between the students and the faculty, and a marked progress toward the realization of our ideal for Beaver College.

We have made an effort to present to you a complete and attractive record of the activities of the past year. We have also undertaken a more important task,—to convey through these pages the spirit that now pervades our campus.

In the earnest hope that we have succeeded, and that this spirit will continue to live and grow, the Class of 1939 presents to the entire college, Volume XIV of the "Beaver Log."

fin-est in the land We lay down our heart and
You are going forward toward something great.
I am on the way with you and therefore I love you.

—Carl Sandburg.
IN 1853, when women were "fainting females," and art-needlework, china painting, and a smattering of dubious French was the educational equipment of a cultured lady, the "Beaver Female Seminary" had its beginnings. It was the result of a merger of two small church "finishing schools" which had been competing in the business of "finishing" the young ladies of Beaver, Pennsylvania, and making very little money in the process. The new school was placed under the supervision of the local Methodist Episcopal church.

This was the period when female education was gaining momentum, provided it was not of such a nature that it taxed the minds of the ladies and made them lose their feminine appeal, and the new seminary prospered. Nineteen years later, it was chartered.
by the state, and Beaver became a full-fledged college. The charter placed the college under the auspices of the Annual Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, U. S. A.

Things went smoothly until the turn of the century brought with it the rise of several large and heavily endowed colleges and universities in and around Pittsburgh, to which Beaver was suburban. The college felt stifled; the trustees concluded that a change of location was necessary if the institution were to survive.

In 1925, the desired location was found in Jenkintown, and the site was bought from the private school that then occupied it. Shortly afterward, the college, which had severed connections with the Methodist Episcopal Church a number of years before, affiliated itself with the Presbyterian Church. It still reports annually to the synod of Pennsylvania.

Beaver has seen a rapid growth since she changed her home. After only three years at its present location, the college again found it necessary to expand. The Jenkintown campus was retained, and the college bought Grey Towers, a private estate in Glenside, to serve as a second campus. There is something mediaeval about the atmosphere of the Towers, which justifies the existence of the many legends and stories which are still told concerning it.

The Beaver that we know now consists of fourteen buildings on a beautiful thirty-seven acre campus. The college provides bus transportation between the two parts of the campus.
is the dream of many connected with the college to be able some day to have all buildings on the Grey Towers campus. One architect’s visualization of this plan may be seen on the wall of the president’s office in the Towers itself. We shall be glad the day these plans materialize; it will be a milestone in Beaver history. Yet, we shall feel strangely reluctant to part with the busses that have been a part of our college life for so long, and to leave behind the buildings at Jenkintown that have so long been our home.

Through the years of change and educational progress, Beaver students have come and gone. As we might expect, each girl has been different, each class has been different. Yet, no matter what the personality of individuals—whether the style be short skirts or long, hoop skirts or hobble—curls, windblown, queenly braids, maidenly knots, or perukes—lumber jackets, beer jackets, or just old sweaters.—Beaver girls maintain the spirit which keeps the college young despite its age.

We love Beaver because she has made us grow, and because she has grown as well. We feel that we can, in some small measure, help in her growth, and we all love that which we help to build.

The past year has seen a change in administration, and the beginnings of an evolution of college policy. We feel that Beaver has embarked upon a new period of growth. What the years will bring we can not say, but we can say with assurance that they will bring good things, and that Beaver’s students and former students will play a large part in the bringing.
Our present interests lie mainly in building up the Endowment Fund which was inaugurated with such success and enthusiasm this spring. The cause could not be better, nor could the support be more willing and eager; we can not fail in this task which means so much to our future.

As we seek to gain our goal, we look back upon years of development, and forward to many years of progress. The Beaver of the future will be greatly different from the Beaver we know today. Time works his will with all institutions, but some things will remain. Chapel bells . . . twilight songs . . . midnight spreads . . . bull sessions . . . old traditions carried on . . . stimulating friendships . . . learning, growing . . . reaching toward ever higher goals . . . always with the spirit which to us is "Beaver."

Beaver was introduced to James Elliott Mooney last September, when he became Vice-President of the college. Those of us who were privileged to know him early in the year felt that here was a man who would make Beaver "go places."

Dr. Mooney performed his duties so unassumingly that he was little known to part of the student body until his elevation to the Acting Presidency on February 28, after the resignation of former president Walter B. Greenway. The work he has done, and the popularity he has gained since that time is well known to everyone connected with the college.

Dr. Mooney has brought a rich and varied background to his new position. He received the degree of Doctor of Education from Duquesne University, and has done further graduate work at the University of Pittsburgh and the University of London, where he held a scholarship given by the Henry C. Frick Educational Commission. He has been a lecturer at the University of Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania State College. Last June, Beaver recognized his attainments by awarding to him the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters at the eighty-fifth annual commencement.

Dr. Mooney is a pioneer in the field of aeronautical education, and a consultant of some note in this field. He is the author of the first authoritative secondary school text book on aviation. In recognition of his contributions to the knowledge of aviation and exploration, he has received the Award of the American Polar Explorers.

He has previously been associated with Scribner's, and other large publishing houses. In spite of his varied activities, he has somehow found time to edit a series of histories of Pennsylvania, and to write a number of text books in science and the social studies. His work in the latter field has been recognized by an award from the National Social Science Society.

Dr. Mooney's deep interest in youth led him to conceive the idea of the new magazine, "Youth's Digest," which he now edits and publishes.

A change in administration can not help being upsetting to any educational institution. Beaver is indeed fortunate to have, at such a time, a man whose vision and perspective make him the ideal person to carry through the plans we all have for the growth of the college.

Dr. Mooney has already injected new life into the administration, and new spirit into the school at large. He has made the Endowment Fund a reality, and his enthusiasm for it is so contagious that we know it can not fail.

In a short period of time, our new Acting President has won the friendship and confidence of the entire student body. Our association with him and his charming family has already meant a great deal to our college life. We know that his association with Beaver will mean much to the future of the college.

BEAVER'S "FIRST FAMILY"

Dr. Mooney, Ellen, Stuart, James, Jr., Mrs. Mooney, Richard
Dean of the College

During the five years she has been Dean of Beaver College, Dr. Ruth L. Higgins has worked tirelessly to adapt our curricula to modern advances in education, and to stimulate our students to academic achievement. It is to her earnest desire to see Beaver grow that we owe much of the unity of purpose on campus today.

Dean Higgins has been Dean of the Beaver College Summer School for the past four years. Her summer school has become increasingly popular because it accomplishes the impossible,—it makes summer study a pleasure!

Dean Higgins has the enviable quality of being able to accomplish a great deal without appearing to be too busy to give the students individual attention. She is always approachable, always easy to talk to, and always eager to help us with our problems, whether they be academic or personal.
Dean of Students

Mrs. Ruth M. Howells Zurbuchen is now completing her first year as Dean of Students. She schedules all student activities and social events, and does countless things to make our extra-curricular life run smoothly.

Dean Zurbuchen has spent thirteen years in the service of Beaver students. She has been Residence Director of Beaver and Ivy Halls during this entire period. For the past three years she has also served as Executive Secretary of the Alumnae Association. As a result of her efforts, the Beaver alumnae clubs have grown in numbers and spirit.

It is one of the mysteries of Beaver that Dean Zurbuchen performs her many duties so efficiently, and still is able to listen to all our problems, and guide us toward their best solution. Her gracious manner and sympathetic understanding make her the ideal Dean of Students, and have earned for her the affection and respect of the entire student body.

Since the beginning of days spent here; Now years behind us sought,

Left but recall; Now thick with time's dust yet close to us all,

Remember Chapel bells at sunset, The sky of midnight (Slower) (faster tempo)
blue, Christmas trees upon the lawn, dear faces that we know - hockey field in darkness, an evening after rain, a thousand voices singing Alma Mater's sweet refrain.

Junior Prom Committee

Mal Hallett and his band ... northern lights ... gardenias, orchids, camellias ... tuxedos and tails ... hoop skirts ... smoothie hair-do's ... arctic atmosphere softened by soft lights and sweet music ... Junior Prom!

Beaver girls begin weeks in advance to count the days and hours 'til Prom. One perfect week-end ... dinner for juniors and their escorts Friday evening (February 24 this year) ... formal dance for everyone after dinner, but only juniors in the promenade dance ... no classes Saturday morning ... tea dance Saturday afternoon (luscious food!) ... formal dance Saturday evening ... all day Sunday to recuperate, or dash around with the O.A.O.—as you prefer ... and Monday for memories, and those post-week-end blues.

All of Prom this year was as smooth as the Hallett music. The northern lights theme was carried out by a huge mural showing the "Spirit of the North," which covered the far end of Murphy gymnasium. Colored lights playing upon the mural, and upon the white and silver drapes which transformed the gym into a fairyland of ice, gave richness and brilliance to the scene.

Prom is one of those events we all say we'll never forget. But just in case you find your memory growing dull, turn to the Prom candid on pages 238 and 239. Remember?
The Freshmen,—our "Little Sisters,"—bless them!

Green "dinks"... toting books and suitcases... opening doors... pouring water... cheerfully performing traditional freshman duties... entering whole-heartedly into the spirit of Freshman Week activities... readily adjusting themselves to become a very part of Beaver.

Throwing a perfectly riotous "half-and-half" party for all of us to enjoy at Hallowe'en... singing their hearts out at Song Contest, making upperclassmen wistfully sentimental, and winning second place in the bargain... throwing their despised caps in a huge pile at the close of the contest, then suddenly realizing their significance and scrambling madly to get them back again.

Decorating the buildings with greens for Christmas... entering into varsity and intramural sports, Play Contest, Art Festival, Gym Demonstration, May Day,—all with contagious enthusiasm.

Betty Ann Bryce winning the Alpha Kappa Alpha contest... Betty Fisher being elected to the staff of the "Review." This class has talent!

"The best group of freshmen we've ever had." How often we've heard these words,—even said them ourselves. But we've never meant them so truly as we do now. Eyes on the Class of '42,—it's going places!

Like most other colleges, Beaver has an established tradition that sophomores are insignificant, if not actually obnoxious. Hats off to the Class of '41 for laying low the ghost! May it never rise again.

Already several members of the class have distinguished themselves in student activities. Mary Alice Lippincott is on the editorial board of the "News," Betty Lampe won the "Review" contest, and Georgeanne Magargal has been elected to Pi Delta Epsilon.

The high-light of the year for the sophomores was the Play Contest, when their play, "The Marriage Proposal," won first place, and Lucia Willoughby received the coveted plaque for the best individual performance.

The sophomores have directed most of their activities this year toward raising money for what we are told will be the Junior Prom to end all proms. Their tag day entertainment was tops, and you simply must try the Sunday morning breakfasts-in-bed they've been serving.

We'll be looking for you next year, '41. Carry that spirit through the summer, and you'll be on top as juniors.

An all around class,—this year's juniors,—the peppest, most "collegiate" class at Beaver.

Song Contest brought the juniors their first victory of the year. Their excellent songs, perfect timing, exuberant spirit, and "dynamic leadership" (quoting the judges) brought them out far ahead of the other classes. Some of their songs are still heard on campus,—a tribute in itself.

This victory was closely followed by a second, when the class successfully defended the intramural basketball championship it won last year, without losing a single game!

From early fall until the middle of February, the juniors worked like typical "Beavers," selling socks, dolls, name stickers, breakfasts,—all to make money for prom. They filled the halls with such overwhelming publicity that the student body was worked up to a fever pitch by the time the big week and arrived.

Prom itself, with its theme of the northern lights, Mal Hallett's smooth music,—two glorious days spent with the O.A.O.,—completely justified all its advance ballyhoo.
The last big event of the class year was the Junior-Senior breakfast, when the juniors received their rings,—a time of thrilling moment, tinged with regret for the swiftly passing college years, and the soon-to-be-departed seniors.

You’re practically seniors now yourselves, ’40. You have a great deal to live up to. There are things to be done, and you must be the leaders. But Beaver can look with confidence and pride to the leadership that has already proved itself outstanding.

Class of Nineteen Thirty-nine

This is no ordinary senior class. Much of the credit for the achievements of the past year lies with the members of the Class of 1939. Their interests and influence at Beaver have been altruistic, progressive, and widespread. It may be truly said that the members of this class have provided the impetus for practically every progressive student action for the past two years.

Their interests lie not only in academic and administrative channels. They have helped create a wider interest in the arts by conceiving and sponsoring the Art Festival series; they have been responsible for a marked improvement in our student publications, and our admission to a national fraternity in college journalism; they have strengthened student-faculty relations by sponsoring a series of informal social meetings, and by making an earnest effort to get to know faculty members in other ways; they have sponsored the first Spring Week-end, consisting of a concert, a formal dance, and a tea dance, and as a result, will be the first class in Beaver history to leave a permanent endowment for educational purposes; for underclassmen, they have been a shining example of successful cooperation in class activities, and in these activities they have striven for, and usually attained, the long view.

It is no small achievement for the usual disorganized group of freshmen with heterogeneous ideals and backgrounds, to become a unified whole in four years. Yet each member of the class has maintained and developed her individuality. A visitor to one of the meetings of the Class of '39 would immediately recognize that here is a democratic body. The class believes strongly in the rights of freedom of opinion, expression, and ideals, and exercises these rights to the full.

Let the class itself express its spirit as only it can do:

"It is customary to be sentimental in dealing with senior classes; it is virtually impossible not to be so. But the Class of 1939 likes to believe that the spirit which is ours is not sentimental, but idealistic, leavened with enough realism to make our idealism practical.

"If we leave any lasting impression, let it not be said that we went muffled in tears, but that heads in the clouds and feet on the ground, a little rash to the end, we went our way, impudently sure of what we wanted, and grimly determined to get it.

"Our college years have been anything but one long march of triumph, but we have learned enough of defeat to appreciate the full sweetness of success. Our college associations have been a practical object-lesson in the business of living; we hope we have learned it well. From our Alma Mater we have received much; what we have given in return is small by comparison, but we have given what we could."

THINGS WE USED TO DO

Book Four
Such and so various are the tastes of men.

—Mark Akenside.
It is our earnest belief that student government is the most important phase of our extracurricular life. For this reason, the constitution of the Student Government Association provides that every girl in the college becomes a member upon enrollment. The entire Association meets twice monthly to discuss business under the jurisdiction of the student body.

Every year, student government at Beaver has been growing in power and importance. It has increased the complexity of its organization as it has assumed new activities and new responsibilities.

This year has seen the student body working more effectively toward common ends than ever before. We have been able to convince not only the faculty and administration, but ourselves of our maturity.

There is, of course, much that has been left undone. But Student Government this year leaves to next year a proud heritage,—the work that has been done, as a foundation for future accomplishment, and the spirit with which it was done, as a challenge and a guide.
When student government was re-organized at Beaver in 1928, the Student Council was the only executive organ of the student body. While there are at present eight other committees and councils to carry on various phases of student government activities, each one of these organs is subordinate in some way to Student Council itself.

The Council consists of the usual four officers, seven representatives, and two faculty advisers. The president must be a senior; other officers must be drawn from the two upper classes. Of the remaining seven members, one must be a freshman, one a sophomore, and one a junior day student. In order to give all dormitories fair representation, it is required that of the eleven officers and members, two be from Grey Towers campus, two from Montgomery Hall or outside houses, and four from Beaver Hall.
While the Council serves as a judicial body for student discipline, it is not the purpose of the organization to act as a "strict parent," or penalize the girls severely. The members this year have devoted a great deal of time and effort to working out an honor system to apply to social rules and regulations. They have felt that such a system will emphasize the maturity of the individual student, and prove more constructive than a "police" system. While the experiment is still young, it appears to have proved its worth, by building a spirit of willing cooperation in the student body.

Too many students think of Council primarily in the judicial sense. If the truth be known, this is but one of a great variety of functions this body must perform. The members of the Student Council work quietly, and many of us see and accept without question the good things they bring us, without realizing their source.
When the student body of Beaver consisted of only a few hundred girls or less, and there were but seven major activities for which leaders had to be chosen, the problem of finding the right girl for the right office was not a difficult one.

Today, with a student body of more than six hundred, and nineteen major organizations, each of which has increased in size through the years, it is necessary to have some reliable method of selecting candidates suitable to run for positions of leadership.

Until 1932, when Nominating Committee was formed, each organization nominated its own candidates for election for the following year, and there was danger of a college dominated by cliques. While the present system is by no means infallible, Nominating Committee makes every effort to be fair and impartial, and to present candidates who will be worthy of representing the student body.
The Committee is composed of: the President of the Student Government Association, who serves as Chairman, the Presidents of the Athletic Association, the Y.W.C.A., the Honor Council, the Day Students’ Council, and the four classes, the Editors-in-Chief of the three major publications, the Chairmen of the Point Committee and of May Day, and five other representatives, one from each class, and one from the day student group. As a result, Nominating Committee is probably the most representative body on campus today.

The only positions for which the Committee does not select candidates are class and club offices, major and minor staff positions on the “Beaver News” and “Beaver Review,” and minor positions on the “Beaver Log” staff and the Athletic Association board. It is also the duty of Nominating Committee to select the Honor Characters, Honor Court, and Laurel Chain for May Day.

Because of the secret nature of the meetings, only a member can realize how painstaking is the work of the Committee. That the system is at least an improvement over the lack of system of eight or more years ago, is evident when we consider the caliber of the heads and members of our organizations.

The idea of students defeating the very purpose for which they presumably come to college, by doing dishonest work, is somehow more repugnant than the thought of other types of dishonesty. The honor system was inaugurated at Beaver in 1930, because faculty and students alike felt that such a system would be conducive to an academic attitude on the part of the student body.

The Honor Council was formed the same year to keep the students “honor-conscious,” and to attempt to settle cases which would arise relative to student honor.

The Council is composed of a President, two members from each class, and one day student. Students and faculty members are honor bound to report to the Council any student who is discovered doing dishonest work. Anonymous notes are not regarded as evidence, and the names of those who report cases are held in strict confidence.

Individual heads—from bottom left: Sterling, M. Nicholls, Toohey, Padmore (Secretary), Lukens (second semester), Tomlinson, McCall (second semester), Calverly (second semester), J. Brister.
It is not the purpose of the Honor Council to mete out heavy penalties to those who have done work not wholly their own. The principal efforts of the Council are directed toward correcting attitudes, strengthening character, and developing a high personal sense of honor in every student.

This year, the student body voted to experiment with a signed pledge at the end of every examination during mid-semesters. After examinations were over the system was abolished by popular vote, because the students felt it to be unnecessary for most of the girls, and ineffectual in a few cases.

Curious to know just what Beaver students thought of the Honor Council, the honor system, and honor in general, the Council made an intensive survey early in the second semester. The results showed that while students differed in some of their standards of honor, most were agreed upon the meaning of cheating in examinations, and an overwhelming percentage still believe that the present plan of placing students upon their own honor, and having professors leave the room when examinations are held, is more effective than any kind of "police" or proctoring. The survey will be a valuable aid in determining the future policies of the Council.
Beaver girls have always celebrated May Day unofficially by giving flowers and dancing on the green in a more or less impromptu fashion, but May Day as one of the largest events of the social season is only eleven years old.

Our modern May Days are built around a Queen and two attendants, who are seniors elected by the student body, and the Honor Court and Laurel Chain, which are chosen by Nominating Committee from the two upper and the two lower classes, respectively.

May Day is conceived and executed by an Executive Chairman and her committee members, chosen by Nominating Committee. The pageant is always built around a central theme, upon which much historical research is done before the script is written. The task of bringing a well organized May Day into being is truly tremendous, but the brilliant spectacle that is the result may well make the entire college thrill with pride.

In the past, May Day has been built around the following themes:

Individual heads, reading from bottom left: Alessandrin, M. Young (Secretary), Cheyne, Carlin, Maccagnoli, Hill, deAngeli, Sutton, Hargrove, Sack, Magnuson, Seifer, Bryer, Storrs, Lienhard
This year the theme of the pageant was the Vienna of Johann Strauss. Weary of conventional names, the Committee conducted a May Day name contest, and the pageant was called by the winning name, “Viennese Melody.”

The plot centered around the romance of a hero of the nobility and a heroine of the middle class, played by Elfriede Mahler and Winifred Ensminger. The major characters enacted the story principally through the medium of the ballet. The Honor Court, Laurel Chain, and Glee Club made up a chorus of two hundred voices, which sang “Tales from the Vienna Woods” and “The Beautiful Blue Danube.”

Music, gaiety, and romance on Grey Towers green . . . the beauty and talent of the Beaverettes on parade . . . many hundreds of spectators . . . many, many candid camera fiends . . . newspaper and newsreel photographers . . . a year of preparation, four months of rehearsals, and two hours of performance . . . another May Day gone—and already, plans are being made for next year’s fete.
When the Student Council found its calendar cluttered up with cases of minor dormitory violations, to such an extent that it was impossible to transact more important business, it arranged to delegate some of its powers to a subsidiary council on dormitories.

Dormitory Council came into being in 1931. It consists of the president of each dormitory, and two presidents from Beaver and Montgomery Halls. The First House President of Beaver Hall serves as President of the Council, and the Vice-President of the Student Council serves as adviser to the group and reports its activities back to the Student Council.

It is the duty of each member of Dormitory Council to keep the dormitories neat and attractive, see that quiet hours are observed, and keep up the morale of the students in general.
It is routine for the girls to make trips of inspection to supplement the regular inspection made by the directors of residence.

The Council meets every week to review cases of students who have violated dormitory rules. In keeping with the general spirit of Student Government, it strives not to punish, but to stimulate the girls to a genuine desire to play well their parts as members of the college community.

The duties of the Council are so exacting that the members are relieved of their offices after they have served one semester.
Day Students' Council

A day student can miss a great deal of college life if some provision is not made to let her know what is going on, and to arouse in her the desire to participate in campus activities.

The day student group at Beaver numbers more than one hundred and fifty girls. In order to coordinate this large group with the resident student body, the Day Students’ Council was formed in 1932.

The Council consists of a President, who must be a senior, and one representative from each class, elected by the day students themselves. The President represents the day students on Student Council and Nominating Committee.

It is the duty of this Council to conduct a day student business meeting after the day student chapel services on alternate Wednesdays, to see that the girls it represents are given ample opportunity to vote and to participate in extra-curricular activities, and to make the day students realize that they are as much a part of Beaver as the girls who live on campus. The Council meets once weekly to review cases of violation of day students’ rules.

The custom of a day students’ dance, given for the entire college, was begun in 1937. The dance has been well attended each year. This year, the “Big Broadcast,” with Eleanor Righter as chairman, realized enough money to help pay for new furniture in the Chatterbox.

That the Council has been successful in what it is trying to do, is evident, when we consider the increasing number of day students who give freely of their time and services, become a part of our college life, and rise to hold positions of major importance.

The National Student Federation of America undertakes to promote an exchange of ideas among American college and university campuses. Through its conferences and its many regular bulletins, it strives to point out the best solution for common curricular and extra-curricular problems, and to broaden the outlook of college students by stimulating them to an active interest in national and international affairs.

The Student Government Association has belonged to N.S.F.A. only three years, and in this time the organization has not had the opportunity to make the progress it deserves on our campus. Beginning next year, the N.S.F.A. representative will be chosen from the members of the Student Council, instead of from the school at large. It is hoped that this closer coordination between the two organizations will bring N.S.F.A. to play a greater part in the lives of Beaver students.

Point Committee

In order to eliminate the possibility of students failing because of outside work, and in order to insure that the greatest possible number of capable students be given an opportunity to hold offices, the point system was inaugurated two years ago.

The system is administered by a Chairman, who is a senior, and one representative from the junior and one from the sophomore class.

No student may hold any office if her grade point ratio is below 1.25. No student may carry more than eleven extra-curricular points at a given time, and no student may hold the same office in more than one organization.

A representative of the Committee must be present at Nominating Committee meetings and class meetings when nominations are made, in order to assure eligibility of candidates. Presidents of clubs must ascertain eligibility of candidates preceding nominations, and register results of elections with the Committee before they are considered final.
Social Committee

The weekly teas we all enjoy . . . the monthly coffees . . . the student reception to the new faculty in the fall . . . the informal dances . . . Inauguration Night refreshments . . . dormitory parties . . . Christmas party . . . the Easter Egg hunt . . . Where would they all be if Social Committee did not see that the details were worked out smoothly? These are tasks attended by little glory, but they make our college atmosphere more gracious and friendly.
Y. W. C. A.

The Young Women's Christian Association is an integral part of every Christian educational institution. Beaver is proud to hold a charter membership in this worthwhile organization.

Y.W.C.A. at Beaver is far from a stagnant organization staffed by one-track minds. It presents, perhaps, a more rounded program than any other campus organization.

Political discussion . . . social activity . . .
social service . . . religious inspiration . . .
Y.W.C.A. supplies them all.
"Service" is the by-word,—Christian living the ideal,—and intelligent participation in a well rounded program the result, of the Young Women's Christian Association.

The Y.W. sponsors the Big and Little Sister movement which is so valuable in orienting the freshmen. Our "little sisters" have this organization to thank for their watermelon feast, their all-college fair, their annual picnic, and all the other enjoyable social events of freshman week.

The association is very active in community social service work. It distributes baskets to needy local families at Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter, gives a Yuletide party for underprivileged children of the vicinity, and sends students to help with the work at the Jenkintown Day Nursery and the Abington Hospital. At Christmas time, it distributes toys and scrap-books to children in these institutions.

Along the religious line, the Y.W.C.A. sponsors the Vespers Service during freshman week, the Carol Service at Christmas, and the Candlelight Service at Easter. It arranges student-conducted chapel services, and brings prominent religious educators to lead discussion groups during Religious Emphasis Week. This year, members of the cabinet took an active part in the World Day of Prayer service, in which many colleges participated.

The association has been a vital force this year in arousing general interest in the peace movement and in the ever-changing developments of the international situation. To this end it sponsored a mass meeting on World Peace Day, and has arranged several discussion groups on political questions.
PUBLICATIONS

Think of a college with no student publications! No news of the day,—no permanent record of the college years,—no sharing of the thoughts and ideas of others through the printed page,—no guide to dormitory rules, social procedure, and extra-curricular programs!

We all recognize that student publications are a necessary part of college life, but few realize the substantial difference to a staff, in time and effort, between a publication that provides merely the minimum essentials, and one which is of vital interest to the student body,—which expresses and moulds their thoughts and opinions.

The staffs of the four Beaver publications have done all they could in the past year to raise the standards of journalism on campus, to present their material in as attractive a fashion as possible, to express the true opinions and activities of the students, to give the students what they want, and to make them want better and better things. To us, the publications stand for progress; they have helped Beaver to grow, and they have grown along with it.
We can't believe that "Log" is yours at last! It has been our secret for so long, we feel a bit reluctant to expose it to public view.

Only those who have worked with yearbooks can appreciate fully the task that has been ours: planning every detail of production with infinite care,—collecting accurate historical data about organizations,—trying to make write-ups sound a bit different from the same old yearbook copy,—editing copy to fit the available space,—scheduling individual and group pictures, and seeing that people are on hand when the pictures are to be taken,—covering almost every campus event with the candid camera,—scratching around for advertisements, and being told "come back next week,"—trying to sell the "Log" to every conceivable living soul,—writing countless letters to prospective "patrons,"—going to unheard of lengths to herd together a few elusive dollars.

We have ballyhooed our book to such an extent that we're almost afraid to see it in print,—afraid it will not be what you have a right to expect after such intense publicity.
We are the first to admit that this is not the book we had planned. Only the staff knows of the little extra details and the additional features which have been left out because of that eternal bugaboo, the budget. Our chief regret is the cover, which, while attractive, is not the dress we originally planned for the book.

And yet, we have little to regret. We have managed to raise more money than any "Log" staff in Beaver history, and we believe we have spent it in ways which will please you. Without the cooperation we received from many organizations and individuals on campus, the details that make this book different would be non-existent.

We are proud to present the "1939 Beaver Log,"—proud that we have made what we believe to be a real step forward in the publication of Beaver yearbooks.

"Log" this year contains many "firsts." It is almost twice as large as our previous books have been. It is the first to use a frontispiece showing a phase of our college life,—the first to have an entire section of views in color,—the first to organize its material into books,—the first to use scads and scads of candid shots that really "mean" something,—the first to use informal senior portraits,—the first to have a democratically chosen "Who's Who,"—and the first to have "Who's Who" done in sketches instead of portraits.

We sincerely hope you like the art work, and the choice of color. To those who may criticize us for breaking with the usual scarlet and grey tradition, we say that the ingenuity of a staff is sorely taxed when it limits itself to a color combination that has been used year after year. We believe we have caught something of the spirit of Beaver; to us, that is an accomplishment more worth while than using the college colors.

The "Log" has its defects and its shortcomings in spite of all we tried to do to make it a perfect piece of work. It is far from the best that Beaver can do, but it is a step in the right direction. We have striven to make it a book every student will cherish, because it is a thing of beauty and a true representation of our lives here.

The task of putting the record of our college year in permanent form has brought to us a thrill that makes everything we have done well worth the effort. May that same thrill carry over to all of you when you look through your "Log," now, and in future years.

The "Beaver News," weekly paper of the college, has successfully weathered its fourth year of continuous publication. It is not the first student newspaper Beaver has had, but we are firmly convinced it is the best. It strives at all times to report the news of the college... student activities, faculty activities, and institutional events and developments. It also strives to reflect the views of the student body, and to interpret the college to the public.

Of the twenty issues published this year, two were dedicated to the alumnae, and sent to them by the college. A special St. Patrick's Day issue was devoted to the glorification of the muse of humor, and of course, to the saint himself.

The editors have made many innovations in an effort to improve the quality of the paper. Streamlined format, abolition of column rule, the profuse use of informal as well as formal cuts, the use of new and livelier columns, and the introduction of informal tone, style, and make-up, were all attempts to make the "News" more readable and of greater value to the students and the college at large.

This year, the "News" has been particularly cooperative with various student movements, striving to better student-faculty relations, to promote "honor consciousness," and to encourage scholarship and extra-curricular participation. It has attempted to present editorial matter of general interest, and to interpret briefly current world situations as well as campus problems.

Perhaps the most important activity which the "News" promoted this year was the Press Night conference in early December, which was attended by over two hundred staff members representing twenty college newspapers. The gathering was addressed by three outstanding journalists: Miss Sonia Tomara, foreign correspondent and feature writer for the New York "Herald-Tribune," Mr. A. E. Hickerson, publisher of seven week-ly newspapers, and Mr. Erwin D. Canham, Washington representative of the "Christian Science Weekly."

The "News" was represented at the Associated Collegiate Press convention last fall, and at both spring and fall conventions of the Intercollegiate Newspaper Association of the Middle Atlantic States. Intelligent use of the information gained at these conferences helps the editors keep our newspaper in tune with the latest trends in college journalism.

This is the first year the newspaper has carried national advertising; it is the first campus publication to do so.

The "Beaver News" has risen, in its short existence, to become an institutional asset, and a vital force on campus. Its popularity is proved by the milling mob of students which gathers about the post-office every Friday morning, as the circulation staff puts the papers in the mail-boxes.
Two Deans Attend Annual Conference

Deans of Women Will Meet At Penn-Harris Hotel This Weekend

"Education for Democratic Living" is the theme of the conference which Miss Ruth L. Higgins, dean of the college, and Mrs. Ruth M. Howells Elsberry, dean of the students, are attending today to-day and tomorrow at the conference held at the Oglebay Hotel.

The meeting is being sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Association of College Women.

The theme of this year's conference is "Education for Democratic Living." The conference will take place March 7 and 8 at Oglebay Hotel.

Bryn Mawr Team Tops Beaver 3 - 1

The hockey team traveled to Bryn Mawr on Tuesday, November 1, and won 3-1. The game featured some of the best forward play seen in a long time. The score was 3-0 at the end of the first period. The second period saw the visitors ahead, 1-0. The final period was a seesaw battle, with the visitors leading, 3-1, until the last minute of the game. The visitors were then able to win the game, 3-1.

Maclay's 40th Birthday

Maclay's 40th birthday was celebrated on November 1. The festivities included a party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Maclay, followed by a dinner at the Hotel Valencia. Maclay was presented with gifts and congratulations from friends and family. The evening ended with a performance by the college choir.

Martha Turner Reveals Names Of Three Candidates For May Queen And Theme Of May Fete

Alice Hargroves, Ellen Magnuson, and Dorothy Potts are nominees for May Queen and Romantic Austrian Theme is Selected.

Martha Turner ’39, chairman of the May Day committee, has announced the names of the three candidates for May Queen.

Alice Hargroves, Ellen Magnuson, and Dorothy Potts will compete for the honor of May Queen. The theme for the May Day fete, which will be held on Wednesday at the Student Union, is "Austrian Romance." The fete will feature traditional Austrian music and dance, as well as a variety of activities.

Theme Of Dance Is 'Big Broadcast'
The Day Students' dance, which is to be held Friday night, December 3, at the Grotto, will feature a variety of music played by the college orchestra. The dance will begin at 8 p.m. and continue until 11 p.m.

Miss Deptford Will Sing with Dance Department

Miss Deptford will be featured as a soloist at the dance. She will sing "The Blue Danube" with the dance department.

Freshmen To Entertain At Halloween Fete

Betty Anne Searle is in charge of arrangements for the Halloween Fete, which will be held in the gymnasium on Thursday night. The theme of the fete is "The Great Gatsby," and guests are encouraged to dress in period costumes.

Endowment Fund Campaign Begins

The Endowment Fund Campaign begins on November 1. The campaign is to raise funds for the college's endowment, which will provide financial support for the college in the future.

Seven Seniors Are Chosen For 'Who's Who In American Universities And Colleges'

The annual selection of "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges" has been announced. The seniors chosen are:

- John Brown
- Robert Frost
- Martha Turner
- Alice Hargroves
- Ellen Magnuson
- Dorothy Potts
- Ruth L. Higgins

Each senior will be honored at a reception to be held on November 1 in the gymnasium.
Dr. James Elliott named acting president of Beaver College by Board of Trustees. New acting president is editor and author of history and science books. He has degrees from several colleges and universities.

Dr. James Elliott Mone, who was appointed acting president of Beaver College by the board of trustees, made his first appearance in his new capacity before the faculty and students on Wednesday afternoon, March 1, on the occasion of the college's 90th birthday. Mone, who has been vice-president, has assumed the presidency of the college.

Beaver College will hold informal open house for friends in nearby communities. Members of board of trustees, administration, faculty, and student body will greet guests on November 29: Entire college will be open. Beaver college will hold an informal open house, 3-9 o'clock, on the evening of the 29th. Friends and students, in order that the campus may be seen in a most informal way, will be welcomed with a warm and friendly welcome.

In the fashion show, the SGA meeting showed self-government is desire of students. Perhaps the most memorable moment of the student government was the meeting held on the afternoon of September 19. Dorothy Patterson Opening week is given over to orientation. About 215 new students, including 25 transfers, matriculated on September 1.

Dr. Greenway resigns from Beaver College. President's resignation accepted by board of trustees on February 28.

Committee plans for senior week. Many interesting events are planned by Eleanor Righter, chairman.

Science open house will be March 24 and 25.

Drama night is part of festival. Original plays to be produced and acted by students on February 17.

Frankford Arsenal defeated by Beaver in Riffley Match. Beaver won an important Riffley match last week.

Choir will sing on radio program. The Beaver College choir, under the direction of the music department, will sing on the Mutual Network Radio program, Thursday evening, March 14.
The "Beaver College Review," literary quarterly of the college, was first published in 1931. Throughout its history, the magazine has been largely experimental in form, material, composition, and tone. It has changed radically under new editorial boards and new student bodies, until the present issues bear little resemblance to earlier issues. The "Review" joined the Associated Collegiate Press in 1938, and believes that the wider associations such a membership brings will be valuable in many ways.

Since its inception, it has been the policy of the "Review" to present a magazine of quality, but at the same time, to spend no more than necessary for printing. Surplus proceeds are used to buy library books, and sponsor a yearly lecture series.

In 1931, the staff presented the library with a rare edition of the Oxford Dictionary; in other years it has appropriated money to buy worthwhile books for general reading. This year the lecture series included Robert Frost, Ruth Nichols, and John Mason Brown. Among the lecturers of former years have been Hugh Walpole, George Lyman Kittredge, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Samuel Butler Yeats, Stephen Leacock, Thornton Wilder, Vilhjalmir Stefansson, and Roy Chapman Andrews.

In the past two years, the "Review" has attempted to be more readable from the point of view of the average student. It desires to be literary, but not highbrow. Its material has consequently been more varied, and submitted by a greater number of students. By enlarging the staff and making these positions open to the entire school instead of limiting them to members of advanced composition classes, and by running a contest each year to select a freshman staff member, the "Review" has tried to encourage students to contribute. At the end of each year, the staff awards prizes to the non-staff members who write the best original poem, essay, and short story appearing in the four issues.

In this, the ninth year of publication, we feel we can look back with pride at some of the progress we have made; in other respects, we have not so much pride. The progress of a magazine is, after all, relative to the number of people reading it, and the way of a staff member is ever hard . . .
Handbook

What would the students of any college ever do without a handbook? Living with others becomes more complicated each year. Without this little book as a guide, many of us would unwittingly commit unforgivable social sins, and all of us would be in the dark about many of the fine points of Beaver’s history and extra-curricular activities.

Too many handbooks are prone to resemble dictionaries; they contain valuable information, presented in a dry-as-dust manner. This year’s staff has been determined from the start to make the “1939 Beaver Handbook” a publication the students will want to read. Although we have not yet seen the finished product, we know the editors well enough to believe them when they say, “this will be the best ‘Handbook’ Beaver has ever had!”

HONOR SOCIETIES

It is not the purpose of Beaver to stimulate students to effort by holding out promise of reward. We do feel, however, that those who pursue a certain field of endeavor because they feel an urge to do so, and who achieve outstanding success in such a field, should have adequate recognition of their accomplishments.

The student who enters Beaver has a choice of many paths into which she may direct her energies and her interests. The most important of these paths,—scholarship, leadership, athletics, journalism, and philosophical thinking, are represented here.

Election to an honor society is an achievement in itself. We must remember, however, that back of this achievement lies a series of smaller achievements, and unselfish giving of self to raise the standards of a particular field, and to promote the spirit of the college at large.
Election to Lambda Delta Alpha is the highest scholastic honor a Beaver student can attain. The recipient of the Silver Trowel, the award presented to the junior with the highest scholastic average for her first three years of college work, automatically becomes Permanent Secretary of the fraternity for the ensuing year. Other members, who must be juniors or seniors, are chosen by the Faculty Committee on Honors. Election of new members is announced by the members of the fraternity at the traditional Honors Day ceremony.

While the principal requirement for election is academic attainment, candidates for membership must also show evidence of excellent character and worthwhile contribution to college activities.

Lambda Delta Alpha was organized in 1933, with the purpose of stimulating scholarship, and developing student appreciation of high scholastic standards. It has become traditional for the fraternity to recognize academic achievement by giving an annual tea for students on the Dean’s Honor List. This year, the members of the fraternity have also tried to stimulate a scholarly attitude by active cooperation with the program of the Honor Council.
Pi Sigma, popularly known as Pentathlon, is the oldest organization at Beaver. It has been in active existence since its inception in 1913 as Pi Sigma Sorority. It is the threefold purpose of Pentathlon to give recognition to those who have made outstanding attainments in fields of physical activity, to encourage all students to participate in athletics, and to promote the fellowship and sportsmanship so vital to the life of any college.

New members are chosen by the unanimous vote of the society. In order to be eligible for election, a girl must have accumulated a certain number of athletic points. The primary qualifications, however, are fine sportsmanship, excellent character, and scholastic attainment. It is entirely possible to be elected to Pentathlon without having played on a single varsity team.

Pentathlon is one honor society which is not content to rest on its laurels. The members sell banners and pennants to swell their treasury, and conduct two roller-skating parties for the entire college each year.

At the close of the basketball season, it is traditional for Pentathlon to play a game against the women faculty. This year, the girls came out victorious, although the faculty played a hard game. Then, lest they forget they are the weaker sex, they were soundly trounced by the men faculty in their second annual faculty-student volleyball game.

Pentathlon deserves double recognition as an organization. It does much to maintain a high standard of sportsmanship at Beaver, and it gives students an opportunity to meet the faculty on an absolutely equal basis.
Alpha Kappa Alpha, national honorary fraternity in philosophy, had its beginnings at Muhlenberg College in 1928. As national fraternities go, it is still young, but it is a vigorous and growing organization. The Epsilon chapter was formed at Beaver last year.

Members of the Beaver chapter are elected by the unanimous vote of the chapter, on a basis of scholarship and interest in philosophical problems. The meetings of the chapter are devoted to informal discussions of life, the physical world, reality, Deity, immortality, and similar topics. The program is kept flexible, so that members may discuss problems which are of the greatest interest to them at a given time.

On April 26, Epsilon played hostess to the entire fraternity at its annual convention. Many Beaver students took advantage of the invitation to attend the three discussion groups, which had as their topics the comparative philosophies of democracy and totalitarianism, the philosophy of mysticism, and the relation between art and philosophy. The latter group was led by Elfriede Mahler of Epsilon.

At the banquet which followed, the delegates heard Dr. James A. Dunham, dean of the faculty and professor of philosophy at Temple University, discuss the philosophy of David Hume.

A convention high-light was the announcement that Betty Ann Bryce, a Beaver freshman, had won second prize in the annual essay contest, for her paper on “My Philosophy for Meeting a Changing World.”
The Beaver chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon is the second women's college chapter to be chartered by the Grand Council of the fraternity. This chapter is an outgrowth of an informal society known as Mu Alpha Sigma, which was originally composed of the editors-in-chief of the three major publications.

Feeling a need for a permanent organization which would develop cooperation among our publications, the editors petitioned the fraternity for a charter, which was granted late in the fall. On March 7, the new chapter was installed by the chapter at Lehigh University, which sponsored the Beaver petition.

Pi Delta Epsilon is a national honorary fraternity, which seeks to promote participation in student journalism, to establish a code of ethics for college publications, and to honor those who have made worthwhile contributions to collegiate journalism. Individual requirements for membership are determined by the Grand Council. Election of new members rests with the local chapter.

An organization of this sort can become a vital instrument for the promotion and improvement of Beaver's publications. Already, it has brought the publications on our campus into closer union.

The first joint publications banquet was held on May 9 under the auspices of Pi Delta Epsilon. At this time, the progress of the year was reviewed, new members were installed, pledges were announced, and awards were given to those who have done outstanding work for the publications in the past year.
"Character . . . Campus citizenship . . . Attitude . . . Service and loyalty to Beaver College . . . Scholarship . . . Leadership on campus and potentiality for leadership after college—these qualifications were used as bases for the selection of seven seniors to represent Beaver College in 'Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges.'"

Thus the "Beaver News" announced in its sixth issue of the year the recipients of the highest recognition the college can give its outstanding leaders.

Members of "Who's Who" are chosen annually by the administration, from students in the two upper classes. A student's entire college record is examined carefully before she is selected for this honor. Only one and one-half per cent of the student body may be elected in any one year.

It is the aim of "Who's Who" to create one national basis for recognizing students who have been most valuable to their respective colleges, and who show the greatest promise of being valuable citizens in the future.
ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Art . . . music . . . drama . . . the so-called "finer things of life." Beaver makes no attempt to be snobbish about them. She holds in contempt those who gain a little knowledge about the arts, and display this knowledge with an artificial and "arty" air.

We of Beaver do not pretend to be more than usually endowed with creative genius; neither do we claim to be able to distinguish true art from passing fads at all times.

We do believe, however, that the arts have a definite place in our lives, as an outlet for creative desires, and as a means of enriching our living through appreciation. During our college years, we strive to learn and to appreciate, and to fit the arts into our scheme of living.

Art Fellowship has come a long way since its inception in 1926. In the past year, it has undergone a complete reorganization, which, its members believe, will make it even more active than before.

During the past year, members of the club have led discussion groups for the art forums of Art Festival, and conducted exhibitions of prints, oils, and watercolors.

Art Fellowship is a member of the Art Alliance of Philadelphia, from which it obtains monthly a picture by a prominent artist, for exhibition purposes. To this organization must go much of the credit for the renewed interest in the arts on campus in the past few years.
All of us will long remember the major contributions of the Choir to our college life,—how beautifully the group unfolded the sacred stories of Christmas and Easter in scripture and in song.

The Choir performs many other services for the college as well. It participates in the regular Sunday evening chapel services, and this year, has sung over the radio, and in many churches in and around Philadelphia.

Miss Ruth Bampton, the director, deserves much praise for the leadership which inspires the faithful practice so evident in the singing of the group.
Beclex has been giving dramatic productions for eight years, and each year seems to bring it new triumphs.

The fall play this year was "Fashion," an early American comedy of manners, by Anna Cora Mowatt. The production was a howling success, and for weeks afterward people who never thought they could act were trying to imitate Martha Turner's imitable: "too, TOO dis-tin-gué!"

As a departure from the usual procedure of presenting one Shakespearean play a year, the club chose another social comedy as its spring offering,—Oscar Wilde’s "The Importance of Being Earnest." The result was another hit.

Beclex does not confine its activities to these two plays a year. It also sponsors the Annual Interclass Play Contest, which has been given a place all its own in the Features section of the "Log." The contest is valuable in uncovering new talent for the club.

There are rumors on campus that the regular meetings of Beclex would be worth attending, were they not so carefully guarded to keep out intruders. It is customary at these meetings for the members to give impromptu impersonations and skits, featuring well known campus characters.

Beclex is not a closed organization. It welcomes every student who is able to demonstrate that she has some talents which will aid in the production of the annual plays.
Glee Club

President ......................... Jane Tomlinson
Secretary-Treasurer .............. Helen Slobodian

"To sing fine music, and to sing it well," has been the motto of this year's Glee Club at Beaver. Through its activities, the club aims to raise the standards of musical taste on campus, and to provide genuine musical relaxation for students whose natural talents seek expression through this medium.

The club is composed of sixty-five selected voices, under the leadership of Mr. W. Lawrence Curry, who has the enviable ability to make the girls enjoy hard work.

As in past years, the club sang this year at prominent Philadelphia department stores during the holiday season, at many local churches, and at Convention Hall. It also entertained the guests at the annual education banquet at the college, and contributed its services for the Sesqui-Centennial Fund for Christian Education.

The club has been a valuable aid in the present drive for the Beaver Foundation. In April, it appeared in this connection under the auspices of the Northern New Jersey Alumnae Association, at Maplewood. The outstanding numbers sung at this performance were "The Solitary Reaper," written by Mr. William S. Nagle of our music department, and "Arabesque Aeoline," a choral harmonization of Chopin’s Etude in A Flat, Opus 25, No. 1, written by Mr. Curry.

On April 28, the Glee Club appeared in concert in Murphy Memorial Chapel, under the auspices of the Senior Class. The club was assisted by Josef Martin, pianist, Mrs. W. Lawrence Curry, reader, and Mr. Thomas Barlow. The performance was given for the benefit of the Beaver Foundation. The audience seemed to enjoy most "Tales from the Vienna Woods," by Johann Strauss, and Mr. Curry's arrangement of "Shadrach."

The group made its final public appearance of the year on May Day, when it served as the "backbone" of the chorus of two hundred voices, singing "The Beautiful Blue Danube" and "Tales from the Vienna Woods." This is the first time a choral group has ever taken part in May Day, and the innovation was well received.

The Glee Club is indeed an asset to the college in many ways. The person who said, "Glee Club is Beaver's best advertisement, best source of extra revenue, and best relaxation," was far from wrong.
The Dance Group was formed last year, at the instigation of Elfriede Mahier, in the hope of introducing the modern dance to Beaver, and bringing the students to an appreciation of the dance as a form of art.

The group still recalls the visit of Martha Graham last year. Miss Graham, who is perhaps the most outstanding woman in the modern dance field, gave a brief talk on the importance and meaning of the dance today.

This year, the group danced as angels in the annual Christmas pageant, and gave a short program for the first of the student-faculty informal get-together series. The group presented several original compositions and solo work during the dance program of Art Festival, as it did last year, and also appeared in the May Day pageant.
Philomusan is a club for lovers of music and its allied arts. It arranges to bring outstanding musicians and lecturers to the campus, and to exhibit the work of prominent artists. Many of the meetings are devoted to student presentation of original musical compositions, as well as the works of others. Other meetings are given over to the sheer relaxation and enjoyment of listening to recordings of good music.

Orchestra

This year saw the organization of the first college orchestra in several years. Membership is principally for those who have had previous orchestral experience.

The group is directed by Mr. Charlton Lewis Murphy, assisted by Mr. Thomas Barlow. Mr. Barlow, who plays the clarinet, is becoming famous on campus as the only male member of a female musical organization.

The orchestra has played for several banquets and other campus entertainments during the year, and presented a concert of symphonic music in the spring.

There is a definite place at Beaver for an organization of this kind. Its members feel, along with the rest of the college, that this is one Beaver orchestra which will have a continued existence.
DEPARTMENTAL CLUBS

The truly educated person has a variety of interests, and finds much of value outside the regular curricular program. All of us cannot be members of governing bodies, or excel in some special field like athletics, journalism, or the arts. All of us can, however, find at least one club which will hold our interest, and to which we can make worthwhile contributions.

Through the club program, Beaver accomplishes a two-fold purpose. The clubs stimulate students to a greater interest in their major fields, and make accessible to them much material which time limits exclude from regular class periods. Even more important, the clubs open new fields to students who are not able to include a wide variety of subjects in their courses of study.

The club sponsors a fall banquet for the initiation of new members, and a spring picnic, to contact freshmen who are prospective members.

It has always been the policy of this organization to keep in touch with the activities of similar clubs in other schools.
This year, the club has gone even further in this direction, and is now considering becoming a part of a national business education fraternity.

Although there have been childhood education clubs at Beaver in the past, Chi Epsilon represents a complete reorganization and a completely new club. Charter members worked on its constitution for most of the first semester, and the document was finally signed in January.

The purposes of Chi Epsilon are: "to promote fellowship and social enjoyment among our members, to provide contact with those people who have contributed to childhood education and its allied fields, to broaden our understanding of children, and to foster our interests in fields other than child study."

Program Chairman ................................. Vera Mereschak
Science Open House Chairman ............... Marie Wisse

The Chemistry Club has been increasingly active since it was set up in 1932. At its regular monthly meetings, its members work out demonstrations, and are given an opportunity to engage in research along the lines in which they are particularly interested.

Last year, the club established the Joseph E.
Malin Memorial Prize, awarded at commencement to the most outstanding student in chemistry. The club has worked especially hard this year to raise funds for the memorial, and Beaver has grown to expect and look forward to buying their roses on the day of their special drive, and their corsages just before each holiday.

By far the greatest undertaking of the club is the Science Open House, which it sponsors jointly with the biology and physics departments. Open House is so important that the "Log" has devoted a special spread to it in the features section.
Kappa Kappa Alpha, familiarly known as the Classical Club, has two chief purposes: to promote interest in the classics, and to link them with present day affairs. The members have adopted the dress of the women of the Roman aristocracy, and wear the purple and gold stolae.

Since its beginning in 1931, the club has carried out its aims by providing its members with speakers, entertainments, and illustrated lectures. The meetings are far from stilted discussions in ancient Latin and Greek. They are always interesting, and often humorous; it is not necessary for a student to have taken classical languages in order to join the club or appreciate its programs.

The climax of the year is the annual banquet, to which the alumnae return for a reunion. In this way, the club becomes an object of loyalty for members long after their college days are past.
Commercial Club

Treasurer ............................................. Lucille Padmore

All juniors and seniors in the field of business administration, and sophomores who have attained a B average in commercial subjects, are members of the Commercial Club.

The club endeavors to give its members a broad understanding of various business fields, to acquaint them with the organization of business concerns, and to give them a general idea of what they may expect when they enter the world of business. It accomplishes these purposes primarily through field trips and lectures.

A banquet in the fall serves to open the club's year, and a picnic in the spring brings it to a close.

In this, its third year of existence, Epsilon Alpha has much to offer the student of elementary education. Its general purposes are to broaden the outlook of students in this field, and to bring the students of the department together socially.

The club conducts several educational trips each year, and also gives members an opportunity to discuss the latest developments in the field, and their own problems which arise during observation and student teaching, through open forums. The year is brought to a close by the annual formal banquet.
French Club

Another active year has been spent by the French Club which holds membership in the Alliance Français.

It is the general purpose of the club to foster student interest in France and French culture. With this end in view, the club joined with the other language clubs in presenting the International Folk Festival this spring.

The members of the club have concentrated their energies for most of the year upon the production of Molière's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," which was presented to an enthusiastic audience early in the spring. The play was managed by the students, and coached by Dr. Edith C. Wright and Mrs. Suzanne B. Neves.

Proceeds from the play will be devoted to the Marion V. Frank scholarship fund which was founded last year. When a large enough sum is obtained, the fund will be used to send a French major to France for her junior year.

The club presented the third act of the play at the Cultural Olympics sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania.
Not until the past few years has the Health Education Club assumed a prominent position on campus. At present the Health Education Demonstration, which is presented to the public every other year, and Posture Week, a new innovation this year, are its two outstanding projects. Both these projects met with enthusiastic receptions this year.

The "cake-walk" and the parade of the bathing beauties added a riotous touch to the demonstration, and set off the really excellent technique of the girls in their exercises and apparatus work.

Posture Week, which could have been very dull indeed, was approached from the humorous angle. Tricky posters, candid camera displays showing us "as others see us," mirrors placed in conspicuous positions, and tags of two colors, one for the good posture-ites and one for the bad, made us posture conscious, and provided us with a wonderful time in the bargain. The week ended with the crowning of Anita Tuvin as Posture Queen.

In its general meetings, the club’s members discuss the needs, aims, and objectives of health education, and their direct relation to the students of Beaver, as well as to students majoring in the field.
Membership in the German Club is not limited to students studying the German language, but is open to anyone seriously interested in the cultural background of Germany.

The first activity of this year was a Mediaeval Christmas play, in which most of the members participated. At the conclusion of the performance, club members entertained their guests and served refreshments, German style, in Green Parlors.

The map contest, conducted by the Karl Schurtz Foundation, acquainted the members with many facts about the geography of Germany. The coveted prize, a complete set of Goethe's works, was won jointly by Dora Heinemann and Lois Esau, for the gigantic and beautifully done map they made together.

In March, the club sponsored the International Carnival, in which the French and Spanish Clubs co-operated. The program brought to many Beaver students for the first time, the folk dancing around which many of the German Club's programs have been centered this year.

The Home Economics Club was organized to promote wholesome social affairs, to provide social training, to foster high ideals of and appreciation for home life, and to help students to learn more of the general field of home economics.

The college at large would be seriously inconvenienced without the club’s cake committee, which makes all kinds of refreshments upon request.

This year, for the first time, the club is planning a Bazaar to be held in the spring. It is anticipated that this will become an annual affair, and the most important of the club’s activities.

The club is affiliated with several state and national associations, and is planning to send a representative to the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Home Economics Association in Harrisburg early in the summer.
The International Relations Club is one of eighty college clubs affiliated with the Middle Atlantic District of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

This year, Beaver sent four delegates to the general conference which was held at Swarthmore College. The round-table discussions were followed by joint conferences and talks by internationally prominent men.

The Carnegie Endowment furnishes books, the "Fortnightly Review," and a weekly "Foreign Policy Bulletin," which are used by club members as a basis for forums and round table discussions at regular club meetings. The club also presents several speakers each year. The most prominent speaker this year was D. Robert Yarnall, who addressed the group at the annual banquet.

The club is a growing organization which strives to promote student interest in the vital issues concerned with international peace and good will.
Junto was organized at Beaver in 1933, after the plan of Benjamin Franklin's original club which first met in Philadelphia in 1726. The name is Spanish for "assembly." The present members discuss the problems of their times much as the original members did.

The first of the club's major activities is the fall banquet, for which the alumnae return. The club was addressed upon this occasion by Dr. James E. Mooney, who spoke on "Aviation and Its Relation to the World Today."

A real social event is Junto's mid-winter costume party. This year the period chosen was American Colonial, and powdered-haired ladies and gentlemen mingled freely with sombre Quakers and gaily painted Indians.

As its spring activity, Junto brought to campus a director of a large broadcasting company, who told the students how his company handled the broadcasting of a major European crisis.

In all it undertakes, Junto holds as its goal the stimulation of an interest in contemporary international political and economic events, not only for its own members, but for the college at large.

Secretary-Treasurer ........................................... Eleanor Slugg

In 1935 the Evangelical League was reorganized at Beaver. Since that time it has been growing in number, spirit, and endeavor.

The purpose of the League is to give greater fellowship with Christ through prayer and Bible study, and to enrich our lives in service for Him. Under the leadership of Miss Stryker, the members gain much in spiritual value.

The Newman Club for Catholic girls, which was formed at Beaver last year, is a part of the national organization named for the great educator, Cardinal Newman. The Beaver chapter was initiated this year in a joint ceremony with the new chapter at the Philadelphia College of Optometry.

The club exists for religious, educational, and social purposes. While most of this year has been devoted to organization and planning, time has been found for several worthwhile discussions, and the club looks forward to an active program next year.

The name of the biology club has a two-fold symbolism: the probe and scalpel are not only instruments used in dissection; they stand for the endeavor of the club members to probe into the known and the unknown in their field.

The club has just entered its second year, but already it has done much to achieve its purpose,—to encourage a scholarly attitude toward, and promote interest in, the biological field.

Trips to museums and the Philadelphia Zoological Gardens, and lectures by outside speakers, faculty members, and students, comprise the many activities of the club. The most important event on the organization's calendar is Science Open House, which it presents in conjunction with the chemistry and physics departments.
"To stimulate growing interest in Psychology, to hold discussions on those subjects which are of most interest to the group as a whole, to promote good fellowship among its members,"—these are the aims of Psi Alpha. Since it was founded in 1933, the club has attained an important place on campus.

A panel discussion on "The Superior Child," and a lecture on vocational guidance were among the many varied programs the club presented this year. A series of lectures, debates, discussions, and experiments were also conducted.

Membership is open only to those who have carried six or more hours in psychology, although students who will have completed the requirement within a semester may be taken in as associate members. The club affords an opportunity for many students to continue their study of psychology, when their schedules no longer permit them to take extra courses.
Hola! Buenos días!

El Club de Espanol endeavors to obtain a clear knowledge of the social and political life in Spanish-speaking countries. Aside from the regular meetings, when entertainments are given and discussions held, the club has helped to put on “El Carnaval Internacional,” and found time to produce a play, “Mi Novio Espanol.”

Before saying farewell, the club would like to dedicate its page to its consejera, Senora Cutright, for the pep and inspiration she has put into its meetings. Adios . . .

Beaver’s Athletic Association is as large as her Student Government Association, and fully as complicated in structure. Every student becomes a member of the Association upon enrollment.

While the student body elects the organization’s main officers, it does not, for obvious reasons, have a voice in controlling the policy of the Association, except, of course, through the pressure of public opinion.

The officers of the Association are responsible for every action taken concerning sports at the college. Theirs is a truly herculean task, and one too often passed lightly over by the student body at large. We know that they do their job well, for sports at Beaver have been increasing in number and popularity since the Association was formed in 1915, and the spirit in which games are played has never been better.

ETHEL CUNNINGHAM
President
This year’s A. A. Board has done anything but waste its time. It has had to carry on the traditional activities of other years, such as varsity sports, an extensive intramural program, and play days for students from local high schools. In the meantime, it enlarged its intramurals by adding inter-dorm competitions and individual tournaments.

The board was able to interest many more students in its work, and in athletics generally, by giving the constitution of the A. A., and the point system for athletics, publicity in our Student Government meetings, and by awarding all letters, numerals, cups, plaques, and banners, during these meetings.

The greatest contribution of this year’s board has been a complete reorganization of the board itself, effective next year. The officers have felt for some time that a board of twenty-seven members and five faculty... advisers is simply too large for efficiency. The board has been growing as our sports program has been growing, but this year's officers felt that the time had come to call a halt.

As a result, next year's board will consist only of twelve members, including the officers. There will be a subsidiary board of varsity and intramural managers which will send two representatives to the main board.

The A. A. feels that this new system will make business much simpler, yet will preserve the democratic spirit so necessary to such an organization. And just to make sure that the changes don't get anyone mixed up, the Association will issue a special A. A. handbook next year, containing the revised constitution, the athletic point system, descriptions of all sports programs, and all the popular songs and cheers. This will be the first time such a book has been issued; we wonder why no one ever thought of it before?

Looks as if the A. A. is on to a bigger and better future,—and we're all for it.

K. Wisse, Shimizu, Armstrong, J. Castle
Beaver has every right to be proud of her varsity teams, not only because they play well, but because they carry our tradition of sportsmanship and clean competition into many other colleges in this section of the country, and in the north and south as well.

Sports are an education in themselves. The spirit which they create benefits not only the girls who play on the teams, but the entire student body. On the athletic field, as perhaps nowhere else, we feel our "oneness."

Everything we do, we strive to do in the same spirit in which our varsity teams play: Beaver girls fight hard; they fight squarely; they have learned to wear victory and defeat with equal grace.
Again, Beaver can be proud of her hockey team, which this year lost but two games out of seven. Congratulations are due high-scorer Virginia King, who completed the season with six goals to her credit, and Captain Anne Armstrong and freshman Betty Anne Searle, who followed closely behind with five goals each.

High-lights of the season were our defeat by Swarthmore for the second consecutive year, the breath-taking game with Ursinus which ended in a tie, and our playing hostess to William and Mary for the week-end, after the last game on the schedule.

This year the second team had a schedule for the first time, and the idea was so well received that the A. A. plans to give the second team an even larger schedule next year.

Five victories,—two defeats,—and the end of another basketball season.

The first game was an upset and a set-back, all in one, when Swarthmore brought the Beaverettes down to defeat for the first time in six years!

The next two games also brought reversals of last year’s results,—but more pleasant ones this time. The team fought two hard and excellent battles to bring to their knees the only two teams which defeated us last year,—Rider and New College.

Then the Bryn Mawr ghost rose from the rest it had had since the close of the hockey season, and laid the Beaver girls low for its second and last defeat of the season.

Of our next two victories, we feel we can be justly proud. The Penn game fell upon the morning after Prom, and the Panzer lassies are physical education specialists, but Beaver girls let neither late hours nor Amazons stand in their way when they’re really determined.

And that last game with Ursinus,—well, Beaver had a friendly axe to grind. Remember last year, when the stands went crazy, and the game ended in a tie? The girls promised us then that 1939 would tell a different story,—and it did,—victory, to the tune of 28 to 32!

Too bad the season wasn’t longer. Everything was over just as we were getting into good form. But there’s always next year, and we’re keeping Swarthmore and Bryn Mawr in mind.

Chalk up another successful season for the Beaver rifle team. The squad’s schedule this year included eleven postal matches, and one shoulder-to-shoulder match, with the women’s team of the University of Pennsylvania, resulting in nine wins, two losses, and one default,—by the opposing team.

Beaver was also entered in the National Rifle Association Intercollegiate Team match, and the National Women’s Open individual match.

In the first of these, the Beaver score of 2463 x 2500 was only one point behind Washington State’s winning score of 2464 x 2500. Second place among women’s college teams! Congratulations, girls!

In the Women’s Open, Eleanor Lum, last year’s national champion, and Helen Gumbs, tied for Beaver’s top score with 497 x 500,—one point below Eleanor’s winning score last year. The result? A tie for second place, and more laurels for Beaver.

The team this year is, generally speaking, stronger than it has been in previous years. First player Donalda Gillingham ranks thirteenth among women in Eastern States competition.

While the schedule has not yet been completed as the “LOG” goes to press, the team is in excellent form, and there is every reason to anticipate a successful season.
The intramural sport program presented each year by the Athletic Association tries to fulfill the aim: "a sport for every girl." Hockey, basketball, riflery, golf, tennis, volleyball, paddle tennis, badminton, swimming, and baseball make up the program, which is open to all but varsity players.

Inter-dorm and inter-class competition, and a tournament, is held in connection with each sport. Numerals are awarded to the winning class teams, and a great variety of plaques, cups, and pennants are given to winning groups and individuals at the close of each competition.

The intramural program strives to give every girl the benefit of the exercises and fun sports afford, without exposing inexperienced girls to the perfected techniques of varsity players. The success of the program is evident when we realize that four hundred and fifty girls participated in intramurals this year!

The night before Thanksgiving vacation brings with it one of Beaver's most outstanding traditions,—the first big extra-curricular event of the season,—the annual Song Contest.

Four classes, each dressed in its own class colors... each presenting a class song, a pep song, and an Alma Mater for which its own members have written words and music... each hoping to have its numerals on the beautiful silver cup.

The judges present their decision, based upon the excellence of the songs, the quality of the singing, and the spirit in which the singing is done... the freshmen are "decapped," to become full-fledged Beaverettes... and the nearly hysterical winning class carries off its prize to the Chatterbox, where it indulges in a "Coc-fest."

This year the contest was wide open; none of the present Beaver classes had ever won the cup. The fine singing and unequalled pep of the juniors, to a great extent due their leader, that "bundle of dynamite," Edna Cheyney, brought them an undisputed victory, while the freshmen came in at second place.

And the seniors? Seems as if their theme song should have been "Out in the Cold Again." But they have one consolation; their class song, along with some of the other contest songs, is still being sung on campus,—the greatest tribute a song can possibly receive.

Play Contest, sponsored by Beclex, is another of Beaver's active annual traditions.

This year the sophomore class walked away with all the honors. Their play took first prize, and placed their numerals on the silver plaque Beclex presents to the winner. Lucia Willoughby, who played Ivan Vassiliychitch with much appropriate ranting and raving, made the victory complete by receiving another silver plaque as having given the most capable performance of any actress in any of the plays.

The senior play, one of a much more tragic tone, took second place, and Martha Turner received honorable mention for her sensitive performance as one of the daughters.

Most of the participants in the contest are "amateurs" (meaning non-Beclexites), and the plays are entirely under the direction of the student chairmen. It is amazing and gratifying to see how much hidden talent the contest uncovers, and how truly "professional" these all-student plays can be.

If you were really seriously interested, and not just a curiosity seeker, there were many,
many exhibits and experiments which showed the seamy side of our scientific existence here at Beaver,—biological, physical, chemical, and psychological.

This is only the second year
Beaver has had an affair of this kind, but it has been so successful that it is bound to become an annual event. The girls themselves learn a great deal preparing their experiments and exhibits, and the general public, of whom four hundred representatives came to the open house, learns a great deal also.
One of the first things we learn when we come to open house is that Beaver girls must WORK.
But then, we knew that, anyway.
Art Festival

Last spring, a group of wide-awake, thinking students, recognized the need for a program that would raise the arts to a place of greater importance on Beaver campus, and give students an opportunity to express themselves through whatever medium they chose. Thus, Art Festival was born—a non-competitive project in which every student and faculty member is eligible to participate.

Most of the credit for originating the festival should go to Nelle Kelly, who studiously pretends that she was only one of many who conceived the project. But the many insist that she was the ONE who started their mental processes, and who hit upon the idea of a series of nights dedicated to the arts.

The program consists of four nights. The first consists of an art panel discussion, and an exhibition of student charcoal, lithographs, water colors, and photographs. Drama night is devoted to the presentation of one-act plays, written, produced, and acted by the students, followed by a discussion of the plays. The third night is dedicated to the dance. While the modern dance, with original compositions by the Dance Group, is featured, folk and ballet dancing are also presented. The last night of the series is devoted to music. The girls play their own compositions, and other works which have been learned without the aid of an instructor.

Everything about Art Festival is student managed, and the emphasis is placed upon originality and informality.

High-lights of the series this year were Mr. Spruance’s views expressed during the art panel, and a hilarious play known as “Heckzaburstin,” which satirized life in Greenwich Village.

The “BEAVER LOG” regrets that dance night and music night came too late for pictures to appear in this volume. But the graphic arts program is well represented here, and if you look closely, you will find scenes from two of the plays. We are proud to have preserved for posterity the glamorous Natalia, making love to the ever indifferent Nicholai.

ALICE HARGROVES
This is the first time in "LOG" history that the girls in "Beaver Mirror" have not gained their places on the basis of the offices they have held.

Beaver has four honor societies, the national "Who's Who," and the Honor Court and Laurel Chain of May Day, with which to recognize the achievements of her outstanding students.

But this section represents something entirely different. The members of the senior class have lived, worked, and played with one another for four years. They, more than any others, should know their own classmates whose services to Beaver have been most outstanding.

The 1939 "Beaver Mirror" stands as a permanent tribute of the Class of 1939 to the girls whom it considers to be its most indispensable thinkers, workers, and leaders. No two girls within this section have made contributions exactly the same, but each has aided in the best way she knew, in making Beaver College an even finer place in which to spend four years.
A friend may well be reckoned the masterpiece of nature.

In Appreciation

Yearbooks are not built by staffs alone. The staff of the "1939 BEAVER LOG" wishes to acknowledge the services of the following persons, without whom this book, as it now stands, would not have been possible:

Dr. Carrington C. Tutwiler, our faculty adviser, who has given the staff a free rein to work out its ideas, and who has given helpful advice and assistance when it was most needed.

Mr. Benton Spruance, Beaver’s Professor of Fine Arts, who gave freely of his time to draw the sketches which make our "Mirror" section outstanding.

Mr. W. Lawrence Curry, Beaver’s Professor of Music, who simplified and set down the music for the "Alma Mater" and the "Senior Class Song."

Mr. Orville Stambaugh and Mr. Austin Whitney of Lyon & Armor, who struggled with the production problems we so blithely created, and turned out an excellent printing job.

Mr. Eugene Durkin and Mr. Cyril Saylor of Phototype, who took as much interest in the "LOG" as the editors, and who managed to make the ideas of the editor materialize without wrecking the budget.

Miss Jane Morgan and Mr. Robert Shaen of Leighton Studio, who have done their best to cooperate with our plans, and to whom we owe the excellent photographs in the senior section, and the unusually beautiful views.

Miss Dorothy Young, our own staff camera-woman, who has the distinction of being the first student "LOG" photographer, and who has not been able to call her time her own all year.

The staff of the "Beaver News" for the generous amount of space they have given us for our publicity campaigns.

The many Beaver students who have brought us patrons, given us advertising tips, voted us money through their organizations, and helped our cause in other ways.
